AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Mr. James Fenner Lee, secretary of legation and chargé d'affaires at Vienna, communicates, under date of December 23, 1886, replies to the interrogatories of this Bureau relating to the calendar year 1885. The legal unit of account in Austria is the silver gulden (florin) of the weight of 12.3456 grams, fineness of .900. The coinage of silver for private account has been discontinued since 1879, with the exception of the Levant-thaler, a trade coin of the weight of 28.0644 grams, fineness .833.

Since 1876, custom-dues are required to be paid in gold coin, or in silver on a basis fixed for one month at the average price for the preceding month.

A paper-money régime exists, and all payments of the Government are made in notes, except when gold is required by contract. Bank-notes may be issued to the extent of 200,000,000 gulden (florins) without metallic reserve.

The production of Austria in 1885 was, approximately, 20 kilograms of gold and 36,000 kilograms of silver.

A considerable portion of this was doubtless from foreign ores smelted.

A table will be found in the Appendix showing the total coinage of the German mints to the close of the year 1886; also the coinage struck in 1886 at the Royal Mint at Berlin for the Egyptian Government.

PORTUGAL.

Mr. E. P. C. Lewis, minister resident and consul-general of the United States at Lisbon, furnished, under date of November 20, 1886, replies to the interrogatories for the calendar year 1885, and under date of March 4, 1887, information for the year 1886.

The money of account is the real. The legal standard is gold and silver, but, as a matter of fact, Portugal has a single gold standard. The fineness of both the gold and silver coins is .916 $\frac{2}{3}$ . The weight of 10,000 reis of gold coin is 17.735 grams, and the same proportion exists for other gold coins.

November 27, 1886, was signed a treaty between Denmark, Norway, and Sweden binding the mints of the respective countries to receive gold for coinage, when the amount is, at least, half a million crowns. It was left optional, however, for each nation to fix a lower limit. In consequence, individuals do not make deposits of gold, but those having small quantities dispose of it to banks and private exchanges.

Norway.—An official reply from the Norwegian Government has not yet been received. It is known, however, that there was a gold coinage executed at the Kongsberg mint during 1886 amounting to 2,013,000 crowns.

TURKEY.

Mr. Pendleton King, chargé d'affaires at Constantinople, reports, under date of February 10, 1887, replies to the interrogatories regarding the calendar year 1886, and, under date of February 11, 1887, replies to the first four interrogatories of the circular of the preceding year. He also transmits, under date of February 15, 1887, a copy of a circular prohibiting the entry and circulation of foreign silver money in the Turkish Empire.

The unit of account is the piaster. Mr. King states that a double standard prevails, but that, as a matter of fact, Turkey has adopted the single gold standard.

During the year 1886 the new coinage law, a copy of which was printed in my last annual report, was put in force.

In the Appendix will be found a table showing the circulation of paper money, and the rate of exchange of the rouble from 1834 to 1884, inclusive, taken from a financial paper prepared by Dr. H. Kaufmann, and published by the home department.

FINLAND.

Through the courtesy of Mr. C. P. Solitander, intendant of the mining office in Finland, this Bureau is furnished, under date of May 12, 1887, with a statement of the production of gold and silver in Finland for a series of years, and in the Russian Empire for 1883.

This Bureau has lost an esteemed correspondent by the death of Mr. Furuhjelm, Master of the Mint in Finland, who for several years has courteously furnished this Bureau with valuable information in regard to the production of the precious metals in his own country and in the Russian Empire.

EGYPT.

Mr. John Cardwell, consul-general at Cairo, Egypt, furnished, under date of March 21, 1887, information in reply to the interrogatories of the Department for the calendar year 1886, and also to the first four interrogatories for the year 1885. Mr. Cardwell also sends specimens of the new coinage of Egypt, which have been placed in the cabinet of the mint at Philadelphia.

The monetary unit is the Egyptian pound consisting of 100 piasters. The standard is gold. The weight of the Egyptian pound is  $8\frac{1}{2}$  grams; fineness, .875.

CHINA.

Mr. Charles Denby, minister to China, transmits, under date of March 4, 1887, an article on the copper coins in circulation in China, inclosing a decree of the Empress on the subject, and, under date of May 19, 1887, information requested for the calendar year 1886.

No gold circulates in China except in the form of ingots or bars bearing the stamp of the bank by which sold. Mr. Denby states that no silver coin is in circulation except in the western part of Stu-Chuan where Indian rupees are current, and also in Thibet and countries to the north of it, where there is a small silver coin called "tanka." In Chinese Turkistan a silver coin has been issued by the Chinese authorities.

Minister Denby also transmits, under date of August 16, 1887, a translation of a memorial of the governor-general of the Two Kwangs district to the Emperor of China requesting permission to coin silver dollars to be legal tender for Government dues and in ordinary trade.

The minister states that the memorial of the governor-general was referred to the board of revenue and that it was reported upon adversely. It is stated that the governor-general has purchased from Messrs. Ralph Heaton & Sons, of Birmingham, England, ninety coinage presses and the necessary machinery for a mint, which has been erected in Canton, specially for the coinage of copper cash.

SIAM.

Mr. Jacob T. Child, United States minister to Siam, furnishes, under date of June 8, 1887, information in reply to interrogatories.

The coin in use in the Kingdom is silver and copper. The American trade-dollar and the Mexican dollar are recoined into "ticals," the "tical" being worth from 48 to 50 cents. Its weight is 26.9 grams. The "tical" is the unit of account.

| Items reported for 1886.     | Value.      |
|------------------------------|-------------|
| Imports of gold-leaf .....   | $101, 287  |
| Imports of silver coin ..... | 1, 875, 726 |

* Recoinage of pieces of .900 and .835 fine.

Copies of decrees relating to coinage and the legal-tender issue in 1886 will be found in the Appendix.

VENEZUELA.

Replies to the interrogatories of the Bureau of the Mint have not been received from Venezuela.

A copy of the new coinage law of Venezuela has been transmitted by Consul Bird and will be found in the Appendix.

According to this law, the standard of Venezuela has been changed from the double (the system of the states of the Latin Union) to the single silver standard.

The name of the monetary unit, the "bolivar," is unchanged, the five-bolivar piece corresponding in weight and fineness to two half-dollars of the United States, namely, 25 grams weight, fineness .900.

Under date of October 10, 1887, Consul Bird transmits a translation of a decree of the President of Venezuela suspending the coinage of silver until June 15, 1888. The coinage of bolivars from October, 1886, to October, 1887, was 6,665,000, equal to $1,286,345.

Tables will be found in the Appendix showing the production of the mills of the El Callao Company since construction; also the amount of gold exported monthly from Ciudad Bolivar.

PERU.

Mr. Charles W. Buck, United States minister-resident at Lima, transmitted, under date of June 8, 1887, a communication from the director of the national mint containing replies to the interrogatories of this Bureau so far as relate to his branch of the Government. Also a communication from the chief of the bureau of customs statistics of Callao. Also a historical sketch from the director of the mint in regard to the "Mints and Coinage of Peru." Also a communication from the director of the school of engineers and mines relative to the industrial employment of gold and silver in Peru.

Mr. Buck also transmits copies of certain decrees relating to the reception of bullion at the mint and the emission of bills.

The monetary unit of Peru is the silver sol, weighing 25 grams, the same as two half-dollars of the United States and of the same fineness as United States coins. Gold is not a legal tender.

BRAZIL.

Under date of May 9, 1887, the minister of foreign affairs of the Empire of Brazil transmitted to Mr. Charles B. Trail, chargé d'affaires of the United States, information for the calendar year 1886, and also replies to the interrogatories for the calendar year 1885. Copies of laws and decrees regulating the mints and the issue of coin and paper money were inclosed.

The unit of account is the real and the standard gold. The fineness of gold and silver coins is .917. The gold coin of twenty milreis weighs 17.930 grams; other gold coins in proportion. Silver coins are subsidiary, the piece of two milreis weighing 25.5 grams, the others proportionately.

Almost all the gold in circulation in Brazil is foreign coin.

HAYTI.

Mr. John E. W. Thompson, United States consul-general at Port-au-Prince, Hayti, transmitted, under date of March 31, 1886, replies to the interrogatories for the calendar year 1885. Also a copy of the coinage laws and regulations, and a copy of the monetary decree of September 28, 1880, placing the coinage of the new national money in charge of the national bank.

The money of account is the gourde ; the standard double, corresponding to the French system, all coinage being executed at the mint at Paris of the same standard as French money. The one-gourde piece of gold and of silver corresponds in weight and fineness with the five-franc piece of France. No gold has ever been coined. A silver coinage of the value of 150,000 gourdes in ten-cent pieces was executed at the mint at Paris in 1886. The total coinage of silver to date is $2,000,000.

HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. George W. Merrill, United States minister resident at Honolulu, furnishes, under date of February 28, 1887, information relative to 1886, and also a copy of the act regulating the currency of the Hawaiian Kingdom. This will be found in the Appendix.

| Gold coin.    | Amount.           |
|---------------|-------------------|
| Imported..... | $1, 142, 946. 10 |
| Exported..... | 43, 128. 20       |

By an act passed in 1886 the gold coins of the United States are a legal-tender for all debts, public and private, and the silver coins of the Hawaiian Kingdom are reduced from a full legal tender to a tender not exceeding $10. The minister remarks, however, that the United States silver coins still circulate and are received in business circles at their nominal value.

PARAGUAY.

Under date of September 30, 1887, Mr. John E. Bacon, chargé d'affaires, furnishes the information requested for the calendar year 1886.

Paraguay has no mint. The values of the foreign coins, as fixed by law, are given.

LIBERIA.

Mr. Samuel S. Sevier, United States vice-consul-general at Monrovia, Liberia, states, under date of March 9, 1887, that there is no production of precious metals in that republic. United States notes are at par in Liberia.

WORK OF THE BUREAU OF THE MINT.

In closing the present report, I take occasion to commend to the attention of the Department certain expediciencies suggested in the last two previous reports as to the organization of this Bureau.*

Acknowledgments are due to the officers and clerical staff for the zeal and accuracy with which the laborious work of this Bureau has been performed. The preparation of its two annual reports, namely, the one here submitted, and the report for the calendar year 1886 on the Production of the Precious Metals in the United States, has required much extra labor and diligence on the part of all. In the present, as in the latter report, the editorial and statistical labors have been shared with the Computer of Bullion, Mr. E. O. Leech.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

JAMES P. KIMBALL,
Director of the Mint.

Hon. CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

XXVII.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF THE MINT,
Washington, D. C., September 16, 1887.

SIR: Tables are herewith presented, taken from the report of the Annual Assay Commission, and from assays made monthly in the laboratory under my charge, showing the number of coins and the fineness of each assayed of the coinage of the calendar year 1886.

Tables are also presented, showing the percentage of coins of the various degrees of fineness to the whole number assayed. The coins tested both by the Annual Assay Commission and by myself have been far within the legal limit of deviation for fineness.

Very respectfully,

W. P. LAWVER,
Assayer, Mint Bureau.

Dr. JAMES P. KIMBALL,
Director of the Mint.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, D. C., November 1, 1887.

SIR: The following report relating to the operations of this Bureau during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, and containing certain additional information concerning the work done during the first quarter of the current fiscal year, is respectfully submitted.

The appendix to the bound volume of this report contains a number of tables, which have been carefully prepared, and are printed in the following order, viz:

Table A, showing the receipts from each specific source of revenue, and the amounts refunded in each collection district, State, and Territory of the United States, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887.

Table B, showing the number and value of internal-revenue stamps ordered from the office of the Commissioner; the receipts from the sale of documentary stamps for validating unstamped instruments, and the number and value of stamps for special taxes, tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, snuff, distilled spirits, fermented liquors, and oleomargarine, issued monthly to collectors, during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887.

Table C, showing the percentages of receipts from the several general sources of revenue in each State and Territory of the United States to the aggregate receipts from the same sources, by fiscal years, from July 1, 1863, to June 30, 1887.

Table D, showing the aggregate receipts from all sources in each collection district, State, and Territory of the United States, by fiscal years, from September 1, 1862, to June 30, 1887.

Table E, showing the receipts in the United States from each specific source of revenue now taxable, by fiscal years, from September 1, 1862, to June 30, 1887.

Table F, showing the ratio of receipts in the United States from specific sources of revenue to the aggregate receipts from all sources, by fiscal years, from July 1, 1863, to June 30, 1887.

Table G, showing the returns of distilled spirits, fermented liquors, manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars, and cigarettes, under the several acts of legislation, and by fiscal years, from September 1, 1862, to June 30, 1887; also statement of the production of distilled spirits and fermented liquors in the several States and Territories, by fiscal years, from July 1, 1877, to June 30, 1887.

Table I. Abstract of reports of district attorneys concerning suits and prosecutions under the internal-revenue laws during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887.

Table K. Abstract of seizures of property for violation of internal-revenue laws during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887.

COLLECTIONS FOR THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR.

It is estimated that the sum of $120,000,000 will be collected from the various sources of internal revenue during the current fiscal year, provided no changes are made in the rates of taxation now imposed by the internal-revenue laws.

It was estimated in my last annual report that the receipts for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, would be not less than $118,000,000. The actual receipts for that period were $118,837,301.06, exceeding the estimate by $837,301.06.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS FOR THE PAST SIX FISCAL YEARS.

The total receipts from all sources of internal revenue for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, were $118,837,301.06, as compared with $116,902,869.44 for the year 1886, $112,421,121.07 for the year 1885, $121,590,039.83 for the year 1884, $144,553,344.86 for the year 1883, and $146,523,273.72 for the year 1882.

COLLECTIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR ENDED JUNE 30, 1887.

The following statements exhibit in detail the amount of internal revenue collected during the past year, and also for the first three months of the current fiscal year, the sources from which the revenue is derived, the States and districts in which the collections were made during the past year, the cost of collection, etc.

INTERNAL-REVENUE RECEIPTS DURING THE LAST TWO FISCAL YEARS.

being about 3.4 per cent. of the amount collected.

The cost of collection for the year 1886 was $4,311,802.70, which was about 3.6 per cent. of the collections for that year. The statement of cost of collection for the fiscal year 1887 does not include the cost of printing internal-revenue stamps, the appropriation for which is made directly to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and is not under the control of this office.

GENERAL CONDITION OF THE SERVICE.

Examinations of the offices of the several collectors of internal revenue were frequently made during the fiscal year, and it appears from the reports of such examinations that the condition of the service is good.

REDUCTION IN THE NUMBER OF INTERNAL-REVENUE DISTRICTS.

By an Executive order dated May 21, 1887, the following internal-revenue collection districts were abolished, and their territory consolidated with other districts, viz:

|                                  |                                         |
|----------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|
| District of Delaware.            | Fifteenth district of New York.         |
| Second district of Illinois.     | Sixth district of North Carolina.       |
| Fourth district of Illinois.     | Sixth district of Ohio.                 |
| Eleventh district of Indiana.    | Nineteenth district of Pennsylvania.    |
| Second district of Iowa.         | Twenty-second District of Pennsylvania. |
| District of Maine.               | District of Rhode Island.               |
| Tenth district of Massachusetts. | First district of Texas.                |
| District of Mississippi.         | District of Vermont.                    |
| Fourth district of Missouri.     | Fourth district of Virginia.            |
| District of Nevada.              | Third district of Wisconsin.            |
| Third district of New Jersey.    | Sixth district of Wisconsin.            |

The total number of districts abolished being twenty-two.

This action has very considerably lessened the cost of collecting the internal-revenue taxes, and has not in any manner been detrimental to the interest of the tax-payers, so far as this office has been informed.

MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES.

The act of Congress approved August 7, 1882, making provision for sundry civil expenses for the year ending June 30, 1883, required the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to make a detailed statement of all miscellaneous expenditures in the Bureau of Internal Revenue for which appropriation was made in that act. In accordance with the aforesaid requirement, I submit the following detailed statement of miscellaneous expenses incurred :

SCALE OF SALARIES OF COLLECTORS.

The recommendations made for the salaries of collectors for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, are based upon an estimate of their probable collections according to the following scale, with the qualification that if the actual collections should vary from the amounts estimated the salaries will be readjusted at the end of the fiscal year:

| For collection of—      | Salary.  | For collection of—          | Salary.  |
| $25,000 or less.....   | $2, 000 | $375,001 to $425,000..... | $3, 375 |

OFFICIAL FORCE.

The force connected with this Bureau during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1887, in the various districts throughout the United States, as reorganized under the Executive order of June 25, 1883, as modified, was 85 collectors, who received per annum salaries as follows:

| Number. | Salary.  | Number. | Salary.  | Number. | Salary.  |
|---------|----------|---------|----------|---------|----------|
| 30..... | $4, 500 | 5.....  | $3, 625 | 8.....  | $2, 750 |
| 1.....  | 4, 375   | 3.....  | 3, 500   | 2.....  | 2, 625   |
| 3.....  | 4, 250   | 1.....  | 3, 375   | 3.....  | 2, 500   |
| 2.....  | 4, 125   | 3.....  | 3, 250   | 1.....  | 2, 375   |
| 2.....  | 4, 000   | 2.....  | 3, 125   | 1.....  | 2, 250   |

| 1.....  | 3, 750   | 6.....  | 2, 875   |         |          |

There were also employed 950 deputy collectors, who received per annum salaries as follows:

| Number.   | Salary. | Number.   | Salary. | Number.  | Salary. |
|-----------|---------|-----------|---------|----------|---------|
| 22 .....  | $2,000 | 126 ..... | $1,100 | 1 .....  | $150   |
| 11 .....  | 1,900   | 2 .....   | 1,050   | 1 .....  | 425     |

| 35 .....  | 1,300   | 10 .....  | 500     | 2 .....  | 75      |
| 3 .....   | 1,250   | 2 .....   | 480     | 1 .....  | 60      |
| 148 ..... | 1,200   |           |         |          |         |

| Number.  | Salary. | Number.  | Salary. | Number.  | Salary. |
|----------|---------|----------|---------|----------|---------|
| 1 .....  | $1,800 | 9 .....  | $1,150 | 1 .....  | $720   |

| 1 ..... | 450     | 3 ..... | 200     | 1 ..... | 60      |

STORE-KEEPERS, GAUGERS, ETC.

There are also employed 625 gaugers, who receive fees not to exceed $5 per diem; 555 store-keepers, and 757 store-keepers and gaugers, whose pay does not exceed $4 per diem, and 3 distillery surveyors. All the foregoing officers are paid only when actually employed.

The pay of store-keepers and store-keepers and gaugers assigned to distilleries whose registered daily capacity is 20 bushels or less is fixed by law at $2 per diem. The pay of those assigned to larger distilleries has been graded according to the following scale:

Compensation for store-keepers and gaugers, and store-keepers assigned to distilleries having a surveyed daily capacity exceeding 20 bushels and not exceeding 40 bushels, $3 per day; compensation of those assigned to distilleries having a surveyed daily capacity exceeding 40 bushels and not exceeding 60 bushels, $3.50 per day; compensation of those assigned to distilleries having a surveyed daily capacity exceeding 60 bushels, $4 per day.

CONDITION OF THE OFFICE.

At the close of the year ended June 30, 1887, 198 officers, clerks, messengers, and laborers were employed in this Bureau, and the aggregate amount paid during the year for their salaries was $250,702.74.

During the year ended June 30, 1886, 195 persons were employed, and the aggregate payments on account of their salaries was $248,810.05.

The slight increase in the number employed the past year as compared with the year ended June 30, 1886, was rendered necessary to carry out the provisions of the act of August 2, 1886, taxing oleomargarine. At the close of the year ended June 30, 1885, the number of persons so employed was 220, and the aggregate amount paid for salaries during that year was $284,591.65. During the year ended June 30, 1884, there were 241 persons employed, and the aggregate payments on account of their salaries was $296,421.48.

Notwithstanding this reduction in the force of over 40 persons during the last three years, the work of the office is in good shape. For this condition of affairs I am indebted to the officers, clerks, and other employes of this Bureau, who have generally performed their duties in a most acceptable manner.

SALARIES.

I have the honor to recommend that Congress appropriate, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, the sum of $265,280 as salaries for the following officers, clerks and employes in this Bureau:

|                                             |         |                                        |         |
|---------------------------------------------|---------|----------------------------------------|---------|
| One Commissioner, at .....                  | $6,000 | Twenty-four clerks, at .....           | $1,800 |
| One Deputy Commissioner, at .....           | 3,200   | Twenty-four clerks, at .....           | 1,600   |
| One chemist, at .....                       | 2,500   | Thirty-four clerks, at .....           | 1,400   |
| One microscopist, at .....                  | 2,500   | Twenty-four clerks, at .....           | 1,200   |
| Two heads of division, at .....             | 2,500   | Thirteen clerks, at .....              | 1,000   |
| Six heads of division, at .....             | 2,250   | Forty clerks, at .....                 | 900     |
| One superintendent of stamp vault, at ..... | 2,000   | Two messengers, at .....               | 840     |
| One stenographer, at .....                  | 1,800   | Sixteen assistant messengers, at ..... | 720     |
|                                             |         | Thirteen laborers, at .....            | 660     |

An aggregate of 204 persons.

The chemist and microscopist were authorized by the act of August 2, 1886, taxing oleomargarine, and the additional head of division and the two assistant messengers asked for are rendered necessary to carry out the provisions of that act; and these officers embrace all the additional force connected with this Bureau that will be needed to enforce this additional tax.

I also recommend the appropriation of the sum of $2,500 as salaries for one stamp agent at $1,600, and one counter at $900, the same to be reimbursed by the stamp manufacturers, as provided by the act of August 5, 1882.

REDEMPTION OF CHECK STAMPS.

There have been received for redemption from July 1, 1886, to June 30, 1887, twenty claims for check and proprietary stamps, amounting to $189.87, and the time for the redemption of such stamps having expired June 30, 1886, the same were rejected and returned.

At the close of the last fiscal year there were remaining 79 packages of check and proprietary stamps undisposed of. One package has since been disposed of, leaving on hand 78 packages at the date of this report, and those remaining on hand are chiefly those for which no clue to their ownership can be obtained.

MANUFACTURE OF STAMP PAPER.

After due advertisement for proposals to furnish paper for the present fiscal year to be used in printing United States internal-revenue stamps, three bids were presented. The bids were opened August 18, 1887, and after due consideration of the same, and a just and fair test of the various samples presented with the bids, the contract for supplying such paper was awarded on the 9th day of September to the Fairchild Paper Company, of Boston, Mass., at the rate of  $7\frac{2}{10}$  cents per pound, including all expenses for the transportation and delivery at the Treasury Department.

Under the contract for the previous fiscal year the price paid was  $7\frac{6}{10}$  cents per pound.

The advertisement for proposals stated the quantity of paper likely to be required for the present fiscal year would be about 500,000 pounds. It is now apparent, from the regular annual increase of the demands for the several classes of stamps, the amount of paper required will be at least 550,000 pounds.

Under the terms of the contract the manufacture of the paper should have commenced within ten days after its execution, but owing to the old dandy-rolls now owned by the Government being seriously out of repair and unfit for use for water-marking the paper, the work was not commenced until the 26th day of September.

No appropriation having been made by Congress last year for the employment of a force of counters to count and examine the paper as manufactured at the mill before its shipment to the Department, it was necessary to keep the mill in operation for nine and a half months, and the continuous services of the superintendent and force of watchmen at the mill were required. The year previous, when the paper was counted at the mill by a force of counters, the work of manufacturing the paper was completed in less than four months, being first examined and counted at the mill, and then shipped to the Department.

PRODUCTION OF STAMPS.

During the past fiscal year all internal-revenue stamps have been produced by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, with the exception of stamps for tobacco imprinted on tin-foil wrappers, which have been printed by John J. Crooke, of New York, under contract which provides that the imprinting of such stamps shall be without cost to the Government, the contractor receiving such remuneration from the manufacturers of tobacco as may be agreed upon between them, and reimbursing to the Government the salaries of one United States stamp agent and one counter, amounting to $2,500 per annum.

TOBACCO.

The aggregate amount of taxes collected from tobacco during the last fiscal year was $30,108,067.13. This amount includes internal revenue taxes paid by stamps on imported manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars, and cigarettes.

The increase of collections for the last fiscal year over those for the previous fiscal year was from—

|                                      |                |
|--------------------------------------|----------------|
| Manufactured tobacco and snuff ..... | $1,192,582.50 |
| Cigars and cigarettes .....          | 968,822.33     |

| Total increase of collections .....  | 2,200,704.60   |

The increase in the quantity of tobacco and snuff and in the number of cigars and cigarettes for the last fiscal year over those taxed during the previous fiscal year was :

|                            |             |
|----------------------------|-------------|

|                            | Number.     |
| Cigars .....               | 277,406,955 |
| Cigarettes .....           | 273,543,850 |
| Total .....                | 550,950,805 |

The export account shows an increase in manufactured tobacco of 691,459 pounds, in the number of cigars exported of 467,580, and in the number of cigarettes exported of 5,624,120.

The number of cigars imported during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, was 81,126,000. The value of the manufactured tobacco imported was $95,110.57.

The following exhibit shows in detail the receipts for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, from each particular source of the tobacco tax, as compared with those for the previous fiscal year :

THE TABULAR STATEMENTS.

In the tables annexed will be found statements showing the manner in which the manufacturing is distributed through the different States, the number of persons and firms engaged in each of the two branches of manufacturing, the quantities of different kinds of material used, and the quantity and kind of products manufactured. These tables are compiled from the reports received from collectors of internal revenue of the transactions of manufacturers in their several districts for the calendar year ended December 31, 1886, a period of time differing from the fiscal year, which will account for any apparent discrepancies between them and the previous part of the report relating to tobacco.

DIRECT TAX CLAIMS.

Various claims against the United States, most of them of small amounts, are constantly arising under the acts relating to the direct tax.

Under the act of May 9, 1872, as amended by the act of June 8, 1872, claims are presented by purchasers at direct-tax sales, their heirs or assigns who have been evicted, or lost title to lands purchased by judgment of a United States court.

Under section 36 of the act of August 5, 1861, as construed by the United States Supreme Court, in the cases of United States vs. Taylor (104 U. S. Rep., 216; 28 Int. Rev. Rec., 288), and United States vs. Lawton (110 U. S. Reps. 146; 30 Int. Rev. Rec., 47), claims are presented by the original owners, or their legal representatives, for the surplus proceeds of sales of land, for the payment of which claims the sum of $190,000, or so much thereof as might be necessary, was appropriated by the act of March 3, 1883.

Secretary Folger said in regard to these claims :

The facts in different cases are so variant, and the interests of original owners, or their heirs-at-law, or their legal representatives, and tax sale purchasers, are so entangled or so hostile as that it is needful that all the facts in each case be presented for a correct decision of that case.

And so, without any precedent rule, there must be a full presentation of the facts in each case, and to those facts, when presented, will be applied some rule of law or equity, which will be the true one, between the parties and the Government.

These claims have given rise to considerable litigation in the Court of Claims, and some of the leading cases decided in that court are as follows :

Chaplin's Case (19 Ct. Cls., 424; 30 Int. Rev. Rec., 119) decides who are "legal representatives," and that the surplus is personalty.

Chisholm's Case (19 Ct. Cls., 435; 30 Int. Rev. Rec., 135): Surplus belonging to wife being a chose in action, accrued to the husband.

White's Case (19 Ct. Cls., 436): Executor not required to prove the loyalty of his testator.

Kidder's Case (19 Ct. Cls., 561): Question as to whether the executor or the trustee under the will is the proper party to receive the surplus of an unsettled estate.

Fripp's Case (19 Ct. Cls. Reps., 667; 30 Int. Rev. Rec., 242): When the land was sold the executor was in possession. Held, that he could not maintain an action for the surplus; he was but the custodian. The heir was the owner.

Cuthbert's Case (20 Ct. Cls., 172; 31 Int. Rev. Rec., 175): Life tenant cannot maintain an action for the surplus. Every party who had an estate in the land has an interest in the surplus and is a necessary part in an action to recover it.

Elliott's Case (20 Ct. Cls., 328; 31 Int. Rev. Rec., 174): Legatees whose legacy is unpaid and is a lien upon the land sold may maintain an action for the surplus.

Rhett's Case (20 Ct. Cls., 338; 31 Int. Rev. Rec., 176): When land has been redeemed owner is not entitled to the surplus. It is not the intent of the statute to give the owner both the land and its representative the surplus.

Graham's Case (21 Ct. Cls., 47): The controversy in this case was one of fact going to the question of title.

Rodgers's Case (21 Ct. Cls., 130; 32 Int. Rev. Rec., 57): Party in possession under a "title bond." The term "owner" in the direct-tax act intended to include every kind of estate of equity which should itself entitle a person to the whole or a portion of the surplus. A mortgagor in default to his vendor for a larger amount than the surplus in the Treasury, and who before he brought suit had been ousted from possession under the decree of a court, is not the owner nor entitled to the surplus.

Wilson's Case (21 Ct. Cls., 135): In a suit for a surplus it is sufficient evidence of ownership that the claimant was in possession under color of title. Where possession can not be shown he must show either a complete title or that the property was assessed to him, and that he paid taxes for a period covered by the State statute of limitations.

Paynter's Case (21 Ct. Cls., 221): It can not be inferred that the possession of the former owner after sale was forcible nor that a conveyance to a third person was adverse to the purchaser. The Government did not warrant the title to lands sold under the direct-tax acts, and with the sale ceased to have an interest in the land.

Cooper's Case (21 Ct. Cls., 510): Decided against the United States. No opinion. The case was taken to the Supreme Court and the judgment of the Court of Claims was affirmed (120 U. S., 124; 33 Int. Rev. Rec., 62).

Under section 4, act of February 25, 1867, merged or re-enacted in Sec. 3689, R. S., claims are presented for refund of tax, penalty, and interest alleged to have been illegally collected by the direct-tax commissioners.

A number of such claims has arisen by reason of decisions in the Court of Claims, viz: Simons vs. The United States (19 Ct. Cls., 601; 30 Int. Rev. Rec., 241), and Harrison vs. The United States (20 Ct. Cls., 175; 31 Int. Rev. Rec., 175), in which it was held that interest commenced to run at the end of sixty days after the tax was fixed (Sec. 3, act of June 7, 1862), and Cato A. Seabrook, administrator, vs. The United States (21 Ct. Cls., 39; 32 Int. Rev. Rec., 168), in which it was held that the assessment in South Carolina was erroneous on account of the rule which the commissioners adopted, by which they assessed a tax of 80 cents on $100 of valuation upon city, town, village, and borough lots, while upon country property they assessed a tax of $2 on $100 of valuation.

SCHOOL FARMS.

An act was passed during the last session of Congress, March 3, 1887, providing for the redemption and sale of the school farm lands now held by the United States in Beaufort county, S. C., acquired under the direct-tax laws.

March 24, 1887, regulations were issued (Circular No. 309) stating the provisions of law and the manner by which the original owners, heirs-at-law, devisees, or grantees could obtain redemption.

There were 18 of these school farms owned by the United States, which have been rented from year to year by the collector of internal revenue.

DIRECT TAX STILL DUE.

A bill to credit and pay to the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia direct taxes collected under the act of 1861, and to remit the quota still unpaid, passed the Senate at the last session of Congress, but failed to pass the House.

There is still due and unpaid of the $20,000,000 imposed upon the whole United States by the act of August 5, 1861, as shown by the adjustments made in the accounts in the office of the First Comptroller, the sum of $2,563,967.11, from the following States and Territories:

| States and Territories. | Amount.      | States and Territories. | Amount.      |
|-------------------------|--------------|-------------------------|--------------|
| Alabama.....            | $506,793.09 | Tennessee.....          | $277,493.52 |
| Arkansas.....           | 107,184.82   | Texas.....              | 174,265.16   |
| Colorado.....           | 715.37       | Virginia.....           | 286,662.93   |
| Florida.....            | 72,756.41    | Utah.....               | 26,982.00    |
| Georgia.....            | 466,384.44   | Washington.....         | 3,487.17     |
| Mississippi.....        | 301,325.83   |                         |              |
| North Carolina.....     | 198,742.06   | Total.....              | 2,563,967.11 |
| South Carolina.....     | 141,174.31   |                         |              |

The question whether the United States has a right to apply money due a State as a set-off against the quota of direct taxes apportioned to it, such State not having assumed its quota, was involved in a suit in the Court of Claims, entitled "The State of Louisiana vs. The United States, No. 15,295," recently decided adversely to the United States (33 Int. Rev. Rec., 190; 22 Ct. Cls., —). The Supreme Court has recently sustained the decision of the Court of Claims.

As it has been the practice of the accounting officers of the Treasury, instead of paying claims adjusted in favor of States, which appear on the books of the Treasury as indebted to the United States on account of direct tax, to set off the amount due as against any unpaid quota of direct tax, additional sums appear to be due as follows:

|                  |             |
|------------------|-------------|
| Alabama.....     | $22,520.24 |
| Georgia.....     | 35,555.42   |
| Louisiana.....   | 71,385.83   |
| Mississippi..... | 42,174.29   |
| Total.....       | 171,635.78  |

In case the amounts set off and credited are finally paid to the States and the same amounts charged back to their respective direct-tax accounts, their indebtedness on direct tax will be as follows:

|                  |              |
|------------------|--------------|
| Alabama.....     | $529,313.33 |
| Georgia.....     | 501,939.86   |
| Louisiana.....   | 71,385.83    |
| Mississippi..... | 343,500.12   |

The total amount due from all the States will be $2,735,602.89.

I suggest that the question whether the United States has now any authority for the collection of the tax remaining unpaid be taken into consideration. If it is held that the tax can be collected, proper steps should be taken to collect it, unless there is some probability of legislative action authorizing further suspension.

ABATEMENT CLAIMS.

On the first of July, 1886, there were pending 226 claims for abatement of assessed taxes, amounting to $146,721.34, and during the year 3,791 claims, amounting to $937,394.88, were presented.

Of these, 3,002 claims, amounting to $704,301.66, have been allowed by this office, and 954 claims, amounting to $348,562.21, have been rejected or returned for amendment.

This left 61 claims for abatement still pending on the 30th of June, 1887, amounting to $31,252.35.

Since that date and up to the first of October, 782 other claims have been filed, amounting to $85,033.92; 539 claims have been allowed, amounting to $73,048.24, and 231 rejected or returned for amendment, amounting to $36,303.43; and on the first day of October, 1887, 73 claims for abatement were pending, amounting to $6,934.60.

REBATE CLAIMS.

No claims for rebate of tax on tobacco and cigars were pending July 1, 1886.

During the fiscal year one claim for $18.08 was presented and allowed. None have been received since June 30, 1887.

REFUNDING CLAIMS.

On the 1st of July, 1886, there were pending 211 claims for the refunding of taxes collected, amounting to $219,211.29, and during the year 367 other claims, amounting to $48,552.83, were presented, and 72 rejected claims, amounting to $56,503.87, were reconsidered. Of these, 232 claims, amounting to $80,505.38, have been allowed by this office, and 224 claims, amounting to $32,188.08, have been rejected or returned for amendment.

This left 194 claims for refunding still pending on the 30th of June, 1887, amounting to $211,574.53. Since that date, and up to the 1st of October, 72 other claims have been filed, amounting to $3,452.97. ## COMPARATIVE STATEMENT OF DISTILLERIES REGISTERED AND OPERATED.

The whole number of grain distilleries registered during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, was 1,160, of which number 969 were operated.

The numbers registered and operated during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886, were 1,132 and 950 respectively, showing an increase during the last fiscal year of 28 in the number registered and of 19 in the number operated.

The increase in the number registered and in the number operated occurred in the class of distilleries having the smaller capacities for the production of spirits, there having been an increase of 34 in the number of distilleries of this class registered and of 30 in the number operated.

In the larger distilleries there was a decrease of 6 in the number registered and of 11 in the number operated.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886, 884 distilleries of the smaller class, varying in daily grain capacity from not over 5 bushels to not over 60 bushels per diem, were registered, and of this number 726, or 82 per cent., were operated.

Of the larger distilleries having daily capacities varying from 60 bushels to several thousand bushels per diem, 248 were registered and 224, or 90 per cent., were operated.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, 918 of the smaller distilleries were registered, and 756, or 82 per cent., were operated. Of the larger distilleries, 242 were registered and 213, or 88 per cent., were operated.

There were 10 rum distilleries registered and 10 operated, an increase of 1 over the number reported for the previous fiscal year.

There were 3,986 fruit distilleries registered and 3,926 operated, a decrease of 1,115 in the number registered and 1,149 in the number operated during the fiscal year.

The whole number of grain, molasses, and fruit distilleries registered and operated during the year were 5,156 and 4,905, respectively.

The quantity of grain used in the production of spirits during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887 (17,959,565 bushels), is a decrease of 1,235,767 bushels from the amount used in the preceding fiscal year (19,195,332 bushels), and is 2,917,021 bushels less than the average (20,876,586 bushels) for the last ten years.

The number of gallons of spirits produced from grain during the year (75,974,376) shows a decrease of 2,570,052 gallons from the product (78,544,428 gallons) of the year ended June 30, 1886, and is 4,539,252 gallons less than the average product (80,513,629 gallons) for the last ten years.

The yield of spirits from each bushel of grain is 4.23+ gallons, showing a marked advance. The yield for the two preceding years was 4.091 for 1886 and 4.076 for 1885.

The quantity of molasses used for the production of rum during the fiscal year (2,428,783 gallons) shows an increase of 120,653 gallons over the quantity used in the previous year (2,308,130 gallons), and is 54,039 gallons less than the average (2,482,822 gallons) for the last ten years.

The quantity of rum distilled from molasses during the fiscal year (1,857,223 gallons) shows an increase of 57,271 gallons over the product of the previous year, and is 78,795 gallons less than the average product (1,936,018 gallons) for the last ten years.

TAXATION OF FRACTIONAL PARTS OF A GALLON OF DISTILLED SPIRITS.

The taxation of all fractions of a gallon of distilled spirits is a measure of importance, the expediency of which I have very fully set forth in my annual reports for the two preceding fiscal years, and I now renew my recommendation that legislation be had to this end.

A bill for this purpose was introduced and received the assent of both houses of the last Congress, but, owing to the addition of amendments, failed to become a law.

The law, as it now stands, exempts from taxation any fraction of a gallon in a package of spirits, in addition to the number of full gallons therein, and which is less than one-half of a gallon.

It also taxes, as a full gallon, any fraction of a gallon equal to or exceeding one-half gallon.

But it is within the power of the distiller to so fill his packages that each one shall contain a large untaxed fraction when gauged; and if the spirits are of a kind which does not remain long in the distillery warehouse, but is immediately withdrawn and transferred to other packages for consumption, the untaxed fractions are speedily made available for the benefit of the distiller.

The practical consequences are, that a very considerable quantity of spirits escapes taxation; that an inequality in the payment of tax exists as between the producers of the spirits referred to and the producers of the kinds of spirits which necessarily remain in warehouse for long periods of time, and until the fractions cease to be available; and that the possibility of avoiding a portion of the tax, and the eager endeavor to increase the amount so avoided, serve to demoralize the producer and tend always towards disregard of law.

The taxation of all fractions would remove this source of trouble, and would, I think, benefit the revenue to an extent not to be measured merely by the amount of tax which would be collected from fractions of gallons.

SPECIAL BONDED WAREHOUSES FOR THE STORAGE OF FRUIT BRANDY—DISTILLATION OF OTHER FRUITS THAN APPLES, PEACHES, OR GRAPES.

I deem it proper to urge anew that legislation be had authorizing the establishment of special bonded warehouses for the storage of brandy made from apples or peaches, or from any fruit whose distillation may be authorized under the rules and regulations which govern the distillation of the fruits above named.

Such warehouses for the storage of brandy distilled from grapes only were authorized by the act approved March 3, 1877, and have been established for ten years past.

I am satisfied that similar accommodation should be extended to the distillers of brandy from any fruits, and that it would be found of advantage to the Government as well as to the distiller.

The existing law in relation to the production of brandy from apples, peaches, or grapes exclusively, permits the distiller of brandy from these fruits to be exempted from the burden of providing a warehouse upon the distillery premises, at his own expense, for the exclusive storage of all spirits made by him, such as is required of distillers of grain; but in place of the custody of the spirits which the Government maintains, in case of storage in warehouse, the distiller of brandy from apples and peaches is compelled to make immediate payment of the tax, which payment can, under existing regulations, and with due regard to an effective collection of the tax, be deferred not later than four months from the time of making report of the production of the spirits.

This early payment of the tax is regarded by the distiller as a great hardship, as it compels him to meet the tax before the spirits have aged sufficiently to be ready for sale, and before a profitable market can be obtained.

This, it must be allowed, is a serious disadvantage. It is alleged that it prevents distillation to a considerable extent, and it undoubtedly occasions much discontent with the tax.

I am of the opinion that the extension to these distillers of the right of warehousing their brandy for a period not exceeding three years, such as is now enjoyed by the distillers of brandy from grapes, would be the grant of a privilege to which they are equally entitled with the distillers of brandy from grapes, would remove a serious cause of complaint, and would tend to produce an increase of revenue from this source.

For this purpose I recommend that the provisions of the act of March 3, 1877, relating to the production of fruit brandy, and to punish frauds connected with the same, be made applicable to brandy distilled from apples or peaches.

I also recommend that the provisions of section 3255 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be enlarged so as to authorize the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to permit the distillation of other fruits under the same provisions which now govern the distillation of apples, peaches, and grapes.

The effect of such an amendment of the law would be to allow the distillation of considerable quantities of fruits of various kinds which are now wasted, as it is impracticable to distill them under the conditions required by the general law concerning the distillation of spirits.

The brandy distilled from such fruits should also be included within the warehousing act above recommended.

ASSESSMENTS.

The following statements relative to assessments; to spirits deposited in and withdrawn from distillery warehouses and special bonded warehouses, the number and location of such warehouses and the names of the proprietors thereof; to the stock of spirits in the United States October 1, 1887; to exportations of spirits, tobacco, snuff, cigars, and cigarettes in bond; to exportations of tobacco, cigars, fermented liquors, and stills, with benefit of drawback; and to the production, consumption, and exportation of oleomargarine and other particulars concerning the operation of the "oleomargarine law" are prepared from reports in the division of assessments:

MISCELLANEOUS ASSESSMENTS.

The following table shows the assessments made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue during the fiscal years ended June 30, 1886, and June 30, 1887, respectively, and the increase or decrease on each article or occupation:

The explanation of the increase in assessments of tax on deficiencies in the production of distilled spirits and excess of materials used lies in the fact that a large number of new distilleries were started during the year. Taxes of this character abated before assessment under the provisions of the act of March 1, 1879, as amended by the act of May 28, 1880, amounted to $51,083.31, as follows:

| On excess of materials used .....                                                     | $5,050.27 |
| On deficiencies in production of spirits .....                                        | 45,117.03  |
| Thirty-three claims from fruit distillers, amount of tax abated on deficiencies ..... | 916.01     |
| Total .....                                                                           | 51,083.31  |

The great falling off in assessment of overdue taxes on distilled spirits is due to the fact that while at the beginning of the fiscal year 1886 there were 19,812,118 gallons of spirits in distillery warehouses, the tax on which would become due during the year under the terms of the warehousing bonds, there were only 10,701,425 gallons of such spirits in distillery warehouses at the beginning of the year 1887. As there were 12,788,297 gallons of such spirits in bond at the beginning of the present fiscal year, some increase in assessments of this character may be expected during the year.

DECREASED PRODUCTION OF SPIRITS.

The quantity of spirits (77,831,599 gallons) produced and deposited in distillery warehouses during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, is less than the production (80,344,380 gallons) of the year 1886 by 2,512,781 gallons.

The difference is distributed among the different kinds known to the trade as follows:

DECREASED TAX-PAID WITHDRAWALS OF SPIRITS.

The quantity of spirits (66,183,303 gallons) withdrawn tax-paid, from distillery warehouses during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, is less than the quantity (69,096,900 gallons) withdrawn from distillery warehouses during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886, by 2,913,597 gallons, the decrease being distributed among the different kinds known to the trade as follows:

|                             |           |
| Decrease in withdrawals of— | Gallons.  |

| Net decrease from 1886 .....            |          | 2,913,597 |

If the quantity, 2,216,645 gallons (as stated by the chief of the Bureau of Statistics), of domestic spirits exported and reimported during the year upon payment of a customs duty equal to the internal-revenue tax be added, the quantity virtually withdrawn from distillery warehouses during the year ended June 30, 1887, is found to be 68,399,948 gallons, or 1,664,452 gallons less than during the year 1886, including the 967,500 gallons reimported and tax-paid during that year.

REIMPORTED SPIRITS.

The spirits referred to in the preceding statement, and upon which a customs duty has been paid, were removed from distillery warehouses for export under internal-revenue laws (section 3330, Revised Statutes, act of June 9, 1874), and upon their return to this country were entered under section 2500, Revised Statutes, of the customs laws as reimported spirits.

In addition to this quantity there yet remain, July 1, 1887, in foreign storage houses some six or seven million gallons of domestic spirits which will doubtless be returned to this country at no distant day; and which, if admitted under section 2500, Revised Statutes, will, under existing laws and regulations, be entitled to warehousing privileges conferred by section 2962, Revised Statutes.

In an opinion rendered by the Attorney-General under date of July 2, 1883, it is held, in effect, that a shipment of domestic spirits to a foreign port with the intention of bringing the spirits back to this country is not an exportation within the meaning and intent of the statute; and does not, under such circumstances, entitle the spirits upon their return to be entered under section 2500, Revised Statutes, as reimported spirits.

Guided by this opinion, regulations have from time to time been issued with the view of securing bona fide exportations, and preventing entry under section 2500 of any distilled spirits that have not been actually exported. While effecting their purpose as to withdrawals in most instances, these regulations have proven to be of but little practical value in preventing wrongful reimportations under section 2500, owing largely to the difficulty in obtaining proof of the ultimate intention of the owners of the spirits, who doubtless in a majority of cases purchase the spirits while stored in foreign warehouses. As a result, therefore, the spirits, although not actually exported and still an article on which an internal-revenue tax should be collected, are nevertheless returned and entered under section 2500 as reimported spirits and, as such, are held subject to a customs duty.

This anomalous state of affairs is open to still further objections. Under existing internal-revenue laws the time within which tax is to be paid on spirits deposited in a distillery warehouse is limited to three years from the date of entry of the spirits into warehouse; and the allowance for leakage and evaporation of the spirits during that period is also limited by section 17 of the act of May 28, 1880. But by withdrawing for export spirits that have remained in warehouse during the full bonded period, and then holding them in foreign warehouses until such time as a demand may bring them home, the pretended exporter or subsequent purchaser of the spirits secures thereby, not only an indefinite period within which to pay the duty imposed by section 2500, Revised Statutes, but escapes payment of any duty or tax on leakages occurring during that period, however great.

This easy method of evading the internal-revenue law, it will be noticed, results not only in a considerable loss and delay in the collection of the revenue in such cases, and diverts the revenue thus obtained from its proper channels, but gives the person who thus evades the law an unfair advantage over the distiller who pays the full amount of tax on his spirits and as soon as it becomes due. These considerations, in my opinion, suggest the need of further legislation on this subject; and I therefore recommend (1) that section 2500, Revised Statutes, be so amended as to exclude, as an article subject to a customs duty, all domestic spirits returned to this country; and to provide for the collection of the internal-revenue tax due on such spirits as shown by the marks and brands on the packages at the time of removal of the spirits from the distiller's warehouse, or, if this is deemed inadvisable, (2) that the section be amended so as to read as follows:

Upon the reimportation of articles once exported, of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance of drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws upon such articles: Provided, That upon all distilled spirits entered under the provisions of this section as reimported spirits there shall be collected and paid upon the duty herein imposed interest at the rate of — per cent. per annum, to be computed, in case the spirits were exported without payment of tax, from the date of withdrawal of such spirits from the distiller's warehouse, or, in case the spirits were exported with benefit of drawback, from the date of payment of such drawback, to the date, in either case, when such duty shall be paid: And provided further, That the interest herein required to be paid shall be in addition to any further duty or charge on such reimported spirits when deposited in bond in any public or private bonded warehouse under existing law.

DISTILLED SPIRITS ALLOWED FOR LOSS BY LEAKAGE OR EVAPORATION IN WAREHOUSE.

The quantity of spirits (1,833,681 gallons) reported in the preceding table as lost by leakage or evaporation in warehouse, is that portion of actual leakage in warehouse from packages withdrawn during the year which has been allowed in accordance with the provisions of section 17 of the act of May 28, 1880.

The following statement shows the quantity of spirits, as per original gauge, withdrawn from warehouse for all purposes during the stated period, and the amount and percentage of leakage allowed thereon under the provisions of the act named:

| Year.      | Total quantity withdrawn. | Leakage allowed. | Percentage of withdrawals. |
|------------|---------------------------|------------------|----------------------------|
|            | Gallons.           | Gallons.  |                            |

| 1887 ..... | 70, 782, 951              | 1, 833, 681      | 2. 591                     |

b Includes 2,494,091 gallons stamped for export not actually withdrawn.

The increase of 26,813 gallons leakage allowed under section 17 of the act of May 28, 1880, over the quantity so allowed during the previous year, is explained by the fact that large quantities of old spirits were withdrawn in 1886, as to which, under the operation of Circular No. 282, no leakage at the time of withdrawal was allowed; the leakage had been allowed during the year ended June 30, 1885, upon regauges made during that year, while no spirits were withdrawn during the year ended June 30, 1887, upon which leakage had been allowed during any previous year.

The falling off in exportations in 1887 as compared with 1886 is due mainly to the decreased withdrawals for export of Bourbon and rye whiskies and of alcohol, although there was a decrease as to all kinds except gin and miscellaneous spirits, as follows:

Of the 291,680 gallons shown by the above table to have been lost during the fiscal year 1887, 252,864 gallons are claimed to have been lost by four fires, as follows: 165,815 gallons by two fires in the second district of Kentucky, 22,865 gallons by one fire in the fifth district of Kentucky, and 64,184 gallons by one fire in the sixth district of Kentucky.

SPIRITS LOST BY FIRE IN WAREHOUSES FOR LAST FIFTEEN YEARS.

The following statement shows the quantity of spirits lost in distillery warehouses by fire during each of the last fifteen calendar years. As it shows also the stock of spirits in warehouse at the close of each of the fiscal years 1872 to 1886, both inclusive, the percentage of loss on the stock held may be readily computed.

NOTE.—The statement of quantities in warehouse on page 356, when disagreeing with the above statement of balances (see years 1873 to 1877), should be taken as more nearly exact. The balance above, 14,650,148 gallons, remaining June 30, 1873, includes 1,732,686 gallons removed on export bonds not then accounted for. Deducting this quantity from that given above leaves 12,917,462 gallons, as stated on page 356, which is the quantity as shown by the original gauge.

THE OLEOMARGARINE LAW.

The act of August 2, 1886, defining butter and imposing a tax upon and regulating the manufacture, sale, importation, and exportation of oleomargarine, was in force during the last eight months of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887. The receipts under this act during these eight months aggregated $723,948.04, of which $435,924.04 is the tax on 21,796,202 pounds of oleomargarine at 2 cents per pound; $31,700 are the special taxes paid by manufacturers; $101,400 the special taxes paid by wholesale dealers, and $154,924 the special taxes paid by retail dealers in oleomargarine. By dividing the total receipts by the number of pounds removed for consumption or sale the tax per pound is found to be 3 cents and three-tenths of a cent ($0.033).

During the first four months of the current fiscal year the receipts under the oleomargarine law amounted to $226,100.66, making the total receipts for the first year in which the law has been in force $950,048.70.

The following statements show (1) the receipts from all sources under this law from each district, and in aggregate, during the eight months ended June 30, 1887; (2) the number of special-tax payers under the law October 31, 1886, to April 30, 1887, and May 1 to June 30, 1887, inclusive, respectively; and (3) a summary of operations at manufacturing factories for the eight months ended June 30, 1887.

*There were also 8, 846 packages, 248, 556 pounds, of oleomargarine in the hands of wholesale dealers June 30, 1887.

It will be observed from the second of the foregoing tables that the number of persons and firms who did business under the oleomargarine law prior to May 1, 1887, was 7,302, and that the number of those who did such business during May and June, 1887, was only 1,584, or 5,718 less than the number previously engaged in the business.

The reduction in the volume of business in May and June, indicated by the above figures is due in part to the internal-revenue special taxes, which are heaviest in those months, and due in part to the low price of butter which prevailed in those months.

This view of the case appears to be sustained by the fact that since the close of the fiscal year and up to the present time, October 31, 1887, with the rates of special taxes decreasing and the price of butter rising, the receipts from oleomargarine have been increasing, as follows :

The addition of nearly a million dollars to the receipts of the United States through the operation of an internal-revenue law taxing an imitation is unprecedented. Heretofore manufacturers of the article taxed either quit business or managed to evade the law. The result was the same in either case. No revenue was derived. In this instance, although the results of the first year's work are encouraging they are not entirely satisfactory. The experience of the year has shown that although the law was modeled upon existing internal-revenue laws in cases most nearly analogous, some changes in the law are needed in order to insure its complete success. It cannot, as an internal-revenue measure, be regarded as entirely successful until the tax is paid on all of the article consumed, and if the question were one of internal revenue simply, I would merely urge that Congress by a joint resolution construe the law as this office construed it in the regulations of August 25, 1886, to impose the tax of 2 cents per pound upon the manufactured substances such as oleomargarine oil which are intended as substitutes for butter fat; also upon the mixtures of such substances with butter and upon imitations made by mixing butter with beef fat, lard, etc.

As stated in my report for the year 1886, the advantage in securing the tax from the manufacturer who derives his material from the slaughtered animals cannot be overestimated. These manufacturers are comparatively few in number. By requiring them to stamp and brand all their products and to keep such books as will indicate the destination thereof such products can be followed to the dealers and through the dealers to the consumers.

At the same time, by the use of a system of exchanging stamps similar to that now in operation as to distilled spirits, the article may be readily identified by the consumers without necessitating the imposition of a second tax.

This law should, however, be #### CONSIDERED OTHERWISE THAN AS AN INTERNAL-REVENUE MEASURE.

Internal-revenue laws are quite uniformly referred to and reported upon by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives and by the Finance Committee of the Senate. But this bill was reported for legislative action by the chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture and by the chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

In the report of the Committee on Agriculture it was stated that the power to tax was not limited alone to the necessities of the Government for the amount of revenue derived, and that it had been invoked in more than one instance to provide for the general welfare. The report also says—

That there are from four to five millions American citizens engaged in the dairy business, and that they must all abandon it and be driven into some other already overworked branch of industry unless they can be relieved from the present ruinous competition with cheap imitations of butter and cheese.

In reporting the bill back to the Senate from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, Senator Miller stated that the purpose of the bill was not to raise revenue, but that it was necessary in order to protect the people from having a counterfeit article sold to them for the genuine, to protect the public health and to protect the dairy interests, the chief farming interest of the country. He also said:

This legislation is necessary because the States have not been able thus far to either suppress or properly control the great evil of which I have spoken, and as a sufficient remedy can be found nowhere, in my judgment, save under the Federal Government.

It appears from the second annual report of the New York State dairy commissioner (kindly furnished by that officer at my request) that before the above-quoted statement was made by Senator Miller twenty-four States and Territories had passed laws either regulating or prohibiting the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. By far the larger number of these laws are merely regulatory and seek to protect the consumer by imposing penalties on those who fraudulently deliver a portion of the carcass of a dead animal to the trusting customer who asks for and pays for the product of a living one.

I am of the opinion that the United States oleomargarine law when passed was intended to be regulatory rather than prohibitory. The bill when introduced was probably intended to be prohibitory, but the reduction of the tax to 2 cents per pound rendered it possible for manufacturers to continue the business except where, as in New York and Pennsylvania, the State law is prohibitory.

I have therefore deemed it proper to view

THE OLEOMARGARINE LAW AS A PROTECTIVE MEASURE,

and to suggest certain amendments thereto intended to improve the law, designed first, for the protection and benefit of consumers, and second, for the joint protection of consumers and butter makers.

Fortunately for the successful application of the internal-revenue system, oleomargarine is made so cheaply as to enable its manufacturers to pay taxes and still compete with butter makers. Of course these taxes must be paid by the consumers.

In considering the question entirely in the interest of the consumer it is needful to know how small a tax can be imposed and bring the manufacture and sale of the article entirely within the control of the internal-revenue system. So far as paying the expenses of the revenue is concerned the tax per pound might be reduced to 1 cent and the special taxes to those borne by manufacturers of and dealers in tobacco. But it is believed to be for the best interests of consumers to leave the tax on the article at 2 cents per pound; the tax on the manufacturer at $600; to fix the tax on wholesale dealers at $120 per annum, and on retail dealers at $12 per annum.

The special taxes now imposed on dealers are so large as to tend greatly to encourage the fraudulent sale of the article. They would have done very well under the prohibitory measure first introduced into Congress. With the tax on the article at 10 cents per pound, a wholesaler's tax nearly five times as large as the wholesale liquor dealer's tax and a retailer's tax nearly twice as large as that of the retailer of spirits were quite appropriate.

But when the stamp tax was divided by five, it would have been consistent to reduce the dealers' taxes. My suggestion is that, in the aspect of the case under consideration, they be divided by four.

I would not now suggest further reduction, as such a step would materially increase the number of irresponsible persons who would enter into the business.

In order to more fully protect consumers, it is recommended that the law be so amended as to require, under a pecuniary penalty, manufacturers and retail dealers to use only packages of a permanent bright red color for packing oleomargarine, and to provide for the seizure of all red packages containing butter or any substance resembling butter not marked, branded, and stamped as oleomargarine, the burden of proof that the article is not oleomargarine to be upon the claimant.

In order the more readily to trace the article, it is recommended that the law be so amended as to require manufacturers and dealers, under pecuniary penalties, to call it "oleomargarine" in all books of account, bills of sale, and other bills and invoices, and to require railroad freight agents and the officers and agents of all common carriers, under pecuniary penalty, to so designate it in books of account, bills, manifests, way-bills, and bills of lading.

The experience of this office shows that evasions of the regulation requirements as to marking packages are committed much more frequently by retail dealers than by manufacturers. It is therefore deemed advisable to encourage the sale by retail dealers of manufacturers' packages. On the other hand it is desirable to avoid discriminating against wholesale dealers who are required to keep books and make returns of sales. In order to encourage the sale of manufacturers' packages by retailers without detriment to wholesale dealers it is recommended that the law be amended so as to authorize manufacturers to pack oleomargarine in packages each containing not less than 5 pounds, and to authorize retail dealers to sell original manufacturers' packages each containing less than 10 pounds, and to sell from original stamped packages in quantities less than 10 pounds; also to prohibit retail dealers, under pecuniary penalties, from selling any quantity equal to or exceeding 10 pounds at one time to any one purchaser; also to require retail dealers, under penalty, in selling from a manufacturer's package, to sell in plain view of the purchaser, directly out of the package, providing, however, that, in case it is necessary to preserve the article, the same may be sold out of the original stamped package, kept in a refrigerator painted bright red, and containing nothing but the oleomargarine and ice; or, if it is necessary, in order to properly exhibit the article, the same may be cut out of the package and placed alongside of it on the counter, either on the red lid of the package or on a wooden, marble, or earthenware slab the edges of which shall not be less than 2 inches wide and 18 inches long, and shall be painted of a bright red color with the word "oleomargarine" in black or gilt letters, each not less than 1 inch square painted thereon so as to be distinctly seen by any one who sees the oleomargarine.

In order also to trace the materials from which oleomargarine is most largely manufactured, and thus provide another safeguard against fraud, I would recommend that each manufacturer of oleo, oleomargarine oil, suine, and neutral be required to pay a small special tax, and in case they sell their products to persons in the United States other than manufacturers of oleomargarine who have paid the special tax, to pay a heavy special tax such as retail dealers in leaf tobacco are required to pay; all dealers in oleo oil, suine, and neutral to keep books, make returns, and be subject to the regulations of this office.

The foregoing recommendations as to bills, bills of lading, and as to painting packages were suggested by provisions found in recent French and Danish bills, and as to consignments, by a provision in the eighth section of the "margarine act, 1887," of Great Britain, the same being an act passed August 23, 1887, to take effect on the 1st day of January, 1888.

The French bill (which became a law March 14, 1887), the Danish bill, and certain proposed Russian regulations, also the Norwegian decree, which took effect January 1, 1887, will receive notice in considering

THE OLEOMARGARINE LAW AS A PROHIBITORY MEASURE.

Although, as has been stated, this law is believed to be intended to protect consumers and dairy interests by regulating the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, it is found to operate as a prohibitory measure in certain States where prohibitory laws had been enacted prior to its passage, but which had not been operative until after this law took effect.

Section 8 of a New York State law "to prevent deception in the sale of dairy products and to preserve the public health," passed April 30, 1885, forbids the manufacture of any oleaginous substance not produced from milk or cream with intent to sell the same for butter. It also forbids the sale of such substance, and contains a provision to the effect that the coloring of such substance to resemble butter, or the having in possession of such colored substance, shall be conclusive evidence of an intent to sell the same for butter. The prohibition and the statutory evidence of intent to sell extend also to mixtures of such oleaginous substances with natural milk, cream, or butter. Notwithstanding this law oleomargarine appears to have been openly and extensively manufactured and sold in New York before and for some time after the act of August 2, 1886, took effect. The Federal law having, however, provided a ready means of identifying the manufacturer, the dealer, and the article itself, the New York State officers were materially assisted in proving cases before the courts and in finally getting such judicial decisions as have driven out of the State all the prominent manufacturers and nearly all dealers who sold oleomargarine as such. These manufacturers have, however, located in the States immediately adjoining, and it may not be unreasonable to suspect that they continue to supply many of their old customers. Great care has been taken to see that the proper marks, brands, and stamps are found on all oleomargarine placed upon the market. Although oleomargarine has been received by consumers, consigned under bills of lading describing it as some article other than oleomargarine or butter, and inclosed in bags calculated to conceal its identity, it has been found upon removal of the outer covering to have been packed in the proper legal packages, having the proper internal-revenue stamps and brands affixed. The concealment of the marks, stamps, and brands was evidently for the purpose of preventing these indicia from assisting the State officers in identifying the article contraband under the State law. Articles which under internal-revenue laws, are required to be marked, stamped, and branded, are liable to seizure and detention until those marks, stamps, and brands are discovered. They must then be released. The concealment of these marks, stamps, and brands for the purpose of evading a State law will certainly prove detrimental in the end to the efficiency of the internal-revenue laws. The offender against the State law who succeeds in concealing the internal-revenue stamps from the public view will naturally, eventually, omit those stamps, especially when the absence of such stamps might save the packages from seizure by the State officer. It appears from the second annual report of the "New York State Dairy Commissioner," that there are prohibitory (State) laws in the States of Delaware, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin. In view of the tendency of these severe laws to encourage the concealment of internal-revenue stamps, I would suggest the following amendment to the internal-revenue law, intended to prevent such concealment:

Whenever any person ships, transports, or removes, or causes to be shipped, transported, or removed, any oleomargarine in any package on which all the marks, brands, and stamps required by the regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue are not affixed, or on which any of such marks, brands, or stamps are illegible or defaced, or are wholly or partially concealed from view, or ships, transports, or removes any oleomargarine in any package encased in any cask, package, bale, bag, or any inclosure whatever, he shall forfeit the oleomargarine and the package or packages so shipped, transported, or removed, and be subject to pay a fine of $500.

Provided, That this section shall not be construed to prohibit the transportation of oleomargarine on any vessel as defined by section 3 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or in any closed car or other vehicle as defined by section 4 of said statutes.

It appears that recently bills of a prohibitory nature have been reported by committees in the legislative assemblies of France and Denmark. These bills contain several provisions proper for the consideration of Congress, in case it should be desirable to make the oleomargarine law a strictly prohibitory measure.

The French bill (or rather law, as it was passed by the French Chamber of Deputies and received the President's assent March 14, 1887) interdicts the selling or exposure or offering for sale the importation or exportation of oleomargarine under the name of butter, and punishes offenders by fine and imprisonment, and confiscates the article so sold or offered for sale, imported or exported; all offenders being presumed to have known the falsification, who cannot give the name of the person who sold or shipped the goods to them. The bill also provides for the publication in newspapers, and for posting on the doors of the residence and place of business of the delinquent and of the court-house at his expense, the judgment and condemnation in each case.

Provision is made for marking by manufacturers, wholesale and retail dealers, as in the United States law, and manufacturers, merchants, shippers, and consignors are required to indicate in their books, bills of lading, etc., the character of the article shipped and sold, and the common carriers are required also to so indicate the article in their books, bills of lading, declarations, and manifests, and penalties are provided for offenses against these requirements.

Under the Danish bill, manufacturers', dealers', shippers', exporters', and importers' packages must be essentially different in form from those in which butter is usually packed, and have the word "margarine" impressed thereon.

Sales of "margarine" are allowed only in places and modes to be prescribed by the secretary of the interior, the delivery to be made only in such packages as he shall prescribe. Dealing in the article is prohibited in market places or on shipboard.

The sale of butter in places where margarine is sold is prohibited.

In bills of sale, consignments, bills of lading, and similar papers, the article must be described as "margarine."

Every one who manufactures, sells, exports, or imports mixtures of butter and artificial butter, oleomargarine, or lard, and all who manufacture, sell, export, or import artificial butter, in the manufacture of which butter or cream is used, are liable to imprisonment. (Section 25, Common Civil Code.)

The manufacture, sale, exportation and importation of artificial butter of the same color as dairy butter is prohibited.

Judgments, under certain provisions, are to be published by the police, the cost of publication to be made part of the costs of the trial.

Offenders are usually punished by imprisonment. In certain extremely mild cases they may be punished by a fine of from 200 to 2,000 Danish crowns.

The following regulation affecting the sale and exportation of oleomargarine in Norway appeared in the Board of Trade Journal in February, 1887:

It is announced in "Post och Inrikes Tidningar" for 30th December last, that, on and after 1st January, 1887, the following decree shall be binding with regard to all vessels used for containing artificial butter for sale in Norway or for exportation to other countries.

Each vessel must be marked on its sides with two stamps of the form and size given in a drawing appended to the decree. This drawing consists of the word "margarin" in large letters contained within an oval ring. The stamps, which are placed opposite each other close to the top of the vessel, are to be branded into wooden vessels, and on vessels of other material, painted plainly in permanent black color. This decree takes the place of that published on the 20th of November, 1886.

The following is copied from the report, ordered by the English House of Commons to be printed, 4th July, 1887, from the select committee on the butter substitutes bills :

The attention of the Russian Government having at last been directed to the increasing production in the Empire of oleomargarine, and the sale of that spurious product as genuine butter, the minister of imperial domains, with a view of protecting the legitimate interests of the Russian dairy farmer and agriculturalist, drew up in the early part of the present year the following rules, which, in his excellency's opinion, it is desirable to enforce legislatively for the control and regulation of the manufacture and sale of artificial butter in Russia, the rules elaborated being based on a study of the measures adopted in the west of Europe and in the United States for that purpose.

(1) The product obtained from a mixture of fat with butter shall be called margarine fat.

(2) Its manufacture shall be liable to an excise duty, or to supplementary patent dues.

(3) The extent of the impost shall be determined in concert by the ministers of finances and imperial domains.

(4) Margarine fat shall be dyed some bright color, but in no case shall such color be yellow.

(5) The vessels (cases, firkins) in which margarine is packed at the manufactory shall be dyed the same color as the margarine.

(6) These vessels shall have clearly marked on them the name of the manufactory, and they shall also bear the inscription, "margarine fat."

(7) The sale of margarine fat shall not be carried on in the shops where dairy butter is on sale.

(8) Shops dealing in margarine fat shall exhibit a sign-board bearing an inscription that margarine fat is sold within.

(9) Hotels, cook-shops, restaurants, bars, and generally all public establishments, in which food is prepared, shall exhibit in a conspicuous place a notice, and also state on their bills of fare that the dishes prepared on the premises are cooked with margarine, if such be used by them in their kitchens.

(10) The importation of margarine fat from foreign countries shall be prohibited.

The proposed regulations were generally approved by the medical council of the ministry of the interior. The council, however, suggested modifications of points 1, 4, 5, and 6 in the following manner :

(1) All artificial butter prepared from grease or tallow, even though it be improved by being washed with milk or cream, or mixed with real butter, shall be called margarine fat.

(4) Margarine fat shall be dyed red by means of the rind of the alkanet root or with alkanine. If this margarine fat be sold in separate pieces, all those, both great and small, sold in retail shall be of uniform shape (for instance, brick-shape).

(5) Each piece shall bear on it in deeply indented characters the words "margarine fat," and the brand of the producing firm.

(6) The cases or firkins in which the oleomargarine is contained and dispatched shall be colored red, and they shall bear in distinct letters the designation of the producing firm and of the contents, i. e., margarine. If the cases or firkins have an outside packing, this shall also be dyed red and bear on it the same inscription.

THE OLEOMARGARINE LAW AS A SANITARY MEASURE.

Section 14 of the oleomargarine law authorizes this office to decide, subject to appeal to a board constituted for the purpose, whether any substance made in imitation or semblance of butter and intended for human consumption contains ingredients deleterious to the public health, and provides for the forfeiture of such deleterious oleomargarine.

Up to the present time this office has not been called upon to make any decision relative to the healthfulness of any sample of this article. This office has information, however, as to the kind and character of the ingredients used in the manufacture of oleomargarine, having exacted monthly reports as to the materials used in each factory, and required special reports as to these materials from each of the collectors in whose districts oleomargarine factories are located. The following table shows all the materials reported used and the number of factories in which each kind of material is used:

| Kind of material.                                          | Number of factories in which used. | Kind of material.       | Number of factories in which used. |

The opinions of collectors as to the quality of the materials and methods of manufacture as stated in their latest reports are subjoined.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT PENNSYLVANIA,
Pittsburgh, September 24, 1887.

SIR: Mr. Dowlin is absent in the West and I deem it proper that I should reply to your letter, directed to him, of Sept. 24th (C. A. B., J. T. B., and G. M. H.).

There was but one oleomargarine factory in the old twenty-second district, C. H. Robinson & Co., limited, and they quit business on March 1st.

I have carefully examined the official reports of this company, and consulted the deputy in charge of this factory, and I cannot learn that any substance deleterious to the public health was used by this company in making their product.

Very respectfully,

Hon. J. S. MILLER,
Commissioner.

E. A. BIGLER,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, FIRST DISTRICT NEW YORK,
Brooklyn, September 27, 1887.

SIR: In reply to your letter (J. T. B., and C. A. B.) of the 24th instant, I have the honor to state that I have carefully scrutinized all reports of an official character made by the oleomargarine manufacturers of this district, when in operation, and find no ingredient used by them to be at all deleterious to the public health.

I am satisfied, beyond any question of doubt, of the truthfulness of such reports, the cleanliness of the premises, and the purity of the ingredients used, from examinations made by my chief deputy and the deputy in charge of the oleomargarine.

Great care is exercised by these parties not to allow any unfit article to be put on the market, and I am, therefore, safe in saying that oleomargarine as made in this district is a perfectly healthful article of food, and much purer than many other things now in our markets.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBT. BLACK,
Collector.

Hon. JOS. S. MILLER,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, FIRST DISTRICT PENNSYLVANIA,
Philadelphia, September 27, 1887.

SIR: In reply to yours of the 24th instant, relative to ingredients used in the manufacture of oleomargarine in this district, I have the honor to say that from the reports of the manufacturers and the personal observation of my deputies, I am of the opinion that none of the ingredients used are deleterious to the public health.

I find on the reports of the manufacturers that the following-named articles are used, viz, oleo oil, salad oil, neutral lard, beef fat, milk, sugar, salt, and coloring.

Very respectfully,

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

FREDERICK GERKER,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT PENNSYLVANIA.
Pittsburgh, September 28, 1887.

SIR: Replying to your letter of September 24 (C. A. B., J. T. B., and G. M. H.).

The Pittsburgh Melting Company was the only oleomargine manufactory in the old twenty-third district, and they have not made any oleomargarine since March last.

I have carefully examined the official reports of this company, and consulted my deputy, who had charge of this factory and visited it regularly, and find that the following substances were used in making their product; Oleo oil, lard, milk, butter, salad oil, sugar, salt, and coloring matter. Of these, the only substance that could be deleterious is the coloring matter. I know nothing of its composition, but the amount used was only one-tenth of one per cent. of the total product.

I visited the factory several times and always found their materials apparently in good condition. I saw nothing in their methods of manipulation that would be liable to produce a substance deleterious to the public health.

Very respectfully,

Hon. J. S. MILLER,
Commissioner.

E. A. BIGLER,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, ELEVENTH DISTRICT OHIO,
Portsmouth, September 29, 1887.

SIR: Replying to yours of the 24th instant (J. T. B., C. A. B., G. M. H.), I have the honor to inform you that the ingredients used by the "Capital City Co." (the only manufactory in this district) are oleo, neutral, cream, milk, butter, suet, and coloring matter.

As a sample of the proportions used, I quote from their monthly report for March, 1887 (a fair sample of all), as follows:

"Materials used in producing oleomargarine:" Oleo, 10,980 pounds; neutral, 13,940 pounds; cream, 2,240 pounds; milk, 4,480 pounds; butter, 1,430 pounds; suet, 1,815 pounds; coloring matter, 46 pounds; in all, 34,931 pounds, from which was produced 32,000 pounds oleomargarine.

The manufacturers claim that these ingredients are pure and harmless, and are in no way deleterious to the public health.

From an inspection of the material used I am inclined to this opinion, unless raw or uncooked animal fat, such as suet, &c., should be unwholesome and deleterious to the human system when consumed in that state, on which I am not prepared to express an opinion.

I have inspected the factory of the above company, and found it cleanly and free from unpleasant or noxious odors.

I am, very respectfully,

Hon. JOS. S. MILLER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

JAS. W. NEWMAN,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, TWENTY-EIGHTH DISTRICT, NEW YORK,
Buffalo, September 29, 1887.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 24th instant (J. T. B., C. A. B.), relative to the intention of Congress to exclude from consumption all oleomargarine made from ingredients deleterious to the public health, I beg leave to report that I have made examination of all official returns made to this office by Jacob Dold, the only manufacturer of oleo in the district, and find that the only substances used in the production of oleomargarine consist of the following ingredients, viz: Neutral and oleo oils, creamery butter, fresh milk, buttermilk, and salt. Cotton-seed oil was used for a month or two in small proportions, but the use of this article has been discontinued, and the only substances now used are the above named.

From personal observations from time to time made by this office, all the product of this factory was made from the sweetest of leaf lard and the best caul fat, which, after being made into the oils, after double refining and straining processes, were taken and churned with the above-named substances, the finished article is produced.

The factory and all things appertaining thereto are as cleanly and sweet as any dairy in the coun<sup>y</sup>, and as far as this office has any experience we do not hesitate to pronounce the oleomargarine produced at this establishment a good, pure, and wholesome article, fit to be consumed by any person without the least injurious effect.

Very respectfully,

Hon. JOS. S. MILLER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue.

JAS. A. HANLON,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SECOND DISTRICT, NEW YORK,
September 29, 1887.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter (J. T. B., C. A. B.), of the 24th instant, in which I am requested to carefully examine all official reports received by me relative to ingredients used in the manufacture of oleomargarine in my district, and to report fully to your office as to whether any of the materials used are, from their nature or from the methods used in their manipulation, unfit for human consumption or deleterious to the public health.

I beg to answer that at present, nor at any time during the current special-tax year, have I had in my district any manufacturers of oleomargarine. There were three duly qualified manufacturers here in 1886, but under the operations of our State law they were obliged to discontinue business. While in operation these manufacturers used the following ingredients, as appears from their returns and the official examinations made by deputy collectors: Oleo, cotton-seed oil, neutral lard, milk, salt, coloring matter (annotto).

The above ingredients separately or in combination are not unwholesome or deleterious to the public health.

As to their manipulations, these factories conducted their business in a cleanly manner, being fully as thorough in this respect as the average butter dairy or creamery, and as the end sought was the production of an article having a high commercial value and the building up of a reputation for excellency in manufacture, they naturally only used pure, fresh, and wholesome materials.

Very respectfully,

Hon. JOS. S. MILLER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

JNO. A. SULLIVAN,

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, EIGHTEENTH DISTRICT OHIO,
Cleveland, October 4, 1887.

SIR: Referring to yours of 24th ultimo (J. D. B., C. A. B., G. M. H.), relative to ingredients used in manufacture of oleomargarine that are unfit for human consumption or deleterious to the public health—

I have examined the returns of manufacturers and factory premises in this district. In my judgment there is no unhealthful combination of ingredients used in this district.

I find the factories conducted with due care as to cleanliness and quality of material used, and in so far as I have knowledge I believe the oleomargarine thus far manufactured here to be as healthful, nourishing, and clean as other oleaginous substances, whether naturally or mechanically combined.

Very respectfully,

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

J. H. FARLEY,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, FIRST DISTRICT ILLINOIS,
Chicago, October 6, 1887.

SIR: Referring to your Department letter of September 4 (G. M. H., J. T. B., C. A. B.) relative to ingredients used in the manufacture of oleomargarine in this district, that are deleterious to the public health, I have the honor to report as follows:

I find upon careful investigation that the materials used in this district in the manufacture of oleomargarine consist of the very best selected fats fresh from the slaughtered animal, and, as a rule, not to exceed a day old, and that the methods employed in the manipulation of these fats are cleanly in the highest degree.

The factories themselves are as clean and sweet as the abundant use of hot and cold water, soap, and scrubbing brushes can possibly keep them.

I can not ascertain that there is anything used in this district in the manufacture of oleomargarine that can possibly be construed as being deleterious to the public health, either in themselves or in the manipulation, and from the reports of deputies from time to time, I am satisfied that I am correct in saying that there are no articles used in the manufacture of oleomargarine in this district deleterious to the public health.

Very respectfully,

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

R. STONE,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SIXTH DISTRICT, INDIANA,
Lawrenceburgh, October 19, 1887.

SIR: Your letter of September 24, 1887 (J. T. B., C. A. B., G. M. H.), in regard to your request for information as to whether oleomargarine manufactured in my district contains ingredients "deleterious to the public health" is before me.

I have, as you are aware, but one oleomargarine factory in my district, located at Hammond. The manufacturers in their monthly report state that they use in the manufacture of oleomargarine the following ingredients: Oleo oil, salad, lard, milk, salt, and coloring. I had my deputy, W. H. Verrill, in charge of the stamp department at Hammond, to make a quiet and thorough examination into this matter, and he reports to me that the manufacturers do not use any other ingredients in the manufacture of oleomargarine than what they report on their form No. 216; that the material used is clean and pure, and in his opinion the oleomargarine as manufactured is as healthful as butter of the best grades. The salad used by them is peanut oil, and the coloring is annatto, and all ingredients are said to be fresh and of good quality. From what I have been able to learn, from observation and otherwise, I am satisfied that there is nothing "deleterious to the public health" in the oleomargarine as manufactured at Hammond. The peanut oil and the annatto, as you are aware, are both vegetable, and are not injurious to health. The latter has been for many years used, and is now used extensively for coloring butter. It will be observed that the Hammond factory uses a comparatively small quantity of tallow, but this, I understand, is only occasionally.

Trusting I have answered your letter in accordance with your request, I am, yours, respectfully,

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

WM. D. H. HUNTER,
Collector.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, October 20, 1887.

SIR: In reply to your favor of September 24 (J. T. B., C. A. B., F. F. W.) referring to the manufacture of oleomargarine, I have to report that I have given the matter proper attention and fail to discover that any substance deleterious to the public health is used in the manufacture of oleomargarine in my collection district.

Respectfully,

J. F. BENEDICT,
Collector.

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C.

The foregoing uniformly favorable testimony of sworn United States officers, whose positions guard them from bias towards either the manufacturing interest on the one hand or the dairy interest on the other hand, and the entire absence of complaint under section 14 of the law, leads this office to conclude that the manufacturers of oleomargarine, upon whose products the internal-revenue stamps and brands appear, are earnestly endeavoring to render their products not deleterious to the public health.

It would, from the scientific facts hereinafter presented by the microscopist of this Bureau, seem to be proper to allow manufacturers of oleomargarine to mix butter and cream with the oleo oil, because by such mixing they prepare the way for a ready change to an emulsion, and thus render their product more easily digested.

And it would seem to be perfectly legitimate for them to please the sense of smell by the addition of sweet-scented creamery butter, and that of sight by mingling annatto or other harmless coloring matter with the oleomargarine until it presents an agreeable tint to the consumer.

All these additions (and perhaps the addition of vegetable oils) may be approved, provided the product is sold always and everywhere as oleomargarine.

But the case is very different when the oil is mixed with the butter to be sold as butter, when in short the consumer is to be deceived.

The public at large and the dairy interests have just cause to complain that oleomargarine, which is a really valuable product, has been so extensively used in this and other countries as a medium of fraud—the public in having been deceived in an important food product, and the dairy interest by reason of the unfair tactics used by its competitor.

Regarding the oleomargarine law as a sanitary measure, it is evident that it would be improved if the authority to supervise the manufactories were extended so as to include the supervision of all factories in which such materials as oleo oil and neutral are produced. I therefore recommend that the law be so amended as to secure this supervision for this purpose, as well as for internal-revenue purposes simply.

Oleomargarine being a butter substitute, the law regulating its manufacture is

A SUBJECT CONNECTED WITH AGRICULTURE.

This fact was recognized by Congress in discussion and in referring the bill to committees on agriculture. The Commissioner of Agriculture has also treated oleomargarine as a subject to be considered within his Department, and has published much valuable information relative thereto, which has been of great use to this office. The recent reports of the chemist and microscopist of the Department of Agriculture have proved especially serviceable. This office is also greatly indebted to the Commissioner of Agriculture for valuable aid through his scientific assistants, who kindly made examinations of samples of suspected butter at a time when such assistance was greatly needed; also, for the privilege of consulting such of the latest scientific works, published in this and other countries, on the subject of oleomargarine, as are found in his library.

THE EXPORTATION OF OLEOMARGARINE.

The quantity of oleomargarine exported free of tax during the eight months ended June 30, 1887, was, as shown by table on page CXXIX of this report, 667,831 pounds.

The quantity here stated includes, of course, only the oleomargarine which would be taxable if put upon the domestic market, and does not include the oleo oil, which is also very extensively exported, in fact very much more extensively than the taxable article. It appears from the statements of exporters that the limitations in the law as to the size of packages and materials of which they are composed are injurious to the export trade.

As these limitations are fixed for convenience in collecting the revenue, there seems to be no necessity for insisting upon them in the case of exporters' packages. I therefore recommend that section 6 of the act of August 2, 1886, be amended so as to contain, after the description of packages and before the penal clause therein, a proviso as follows:

Provided, That this limitation and description of packages shall not apply to oleomargarine transported in bond for exportation and actually exported.

In the following table of exportations for 1884, 1885, and 1886, mostly copied from the special report on the "butter substitutes bill" (ordered by the British House of Commons to be printed July 4, 1887), the heading "imitation butter" is understood to refer to the article which is taxable as "oleomargarine" under internal-revenue laws.

STATEMENT OF THE QUANTITY OF OLEOMARGARINE EXPORTED FROM THE UNITED STATES IN EACH OF THE YEARS ENDED JUNE 30, 1884, 1885, and 1886.

ANALYSES OF SUBSTANCES SUSPECTED OF BEING OLEOMARGARINE.

Of the one hundred and thirty-one samples of substances submitted to this office for examination, under the provisions of sections 14 and 15 of the oleomargarine act, all were analyzed by the chemist, many were examined by the microscopist of this office, and some by the chemist and microscopist of the Department of Agriculture. Great care was taken by all these officers in the performance of the duties assigned to them, and the decisions based upon conclusions arrived at by them have been accepted in all cases so far as is known to this office as final. Of all the samples submitted twenty-one were found to be oleomargarine, and one hundred and ten were found to be butter, or, at least, not oleomargarine as defined by the law. It is true that many of these samples were found to be mixtures of butter fat with chemicals intended for the most part to destroy rancidity, and to make that which was old and stale appear new and fresh; but as the only fat employed was butter fat, this office was compelled to decide that the article was not oleomargarine.

In the following table the samples are numbered in the order in which they were received. The table also shows the locality from which each sample was received and the decision of this office in each case.

Although the officers appointed under section 14 of the oleomargarine law have examined all the samples submitted during the year, they have not conducted their examinations with the rapidity desirable, where, as is usually the case, the article is under detention awaiting the decision of this office, much delay having been occasioned by inadequate accommodations.

The room in which the samples are analyzed is not quite 8 feet wide in any place, and in one place is only 6 feet wide, is very poorly lighted, and is otherwise objectionable. But this is the only room obtainable in the Treasury Building, and the accounting officers of this Department refuse, in the absence of further legislation, to approve bills for the rental of rooms outside of the Treasury Building.

In view of these facts I recommend that section 14 of the act of August 2, 1886, be amended to read as follows :

That there shall be in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue an analytical chemist and a microscopist, who shall each be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall each receive a salary of $2,500 per annum ; and shall each be entitled to lease, at a rent not exceeding $500 per annum, such room or rooms, subject to the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, as may be necessary to the proper and efficient discharge of their duties respectively, the rent of such rooms to be paid monthly by warrant of the Secretary of the Treasury on the Treasurer of the United States, out of any money arising from internal duties not otherwise appropriated ; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may, whenever in his judgment the necessities of the service so require, employ chemists and microscopists to be paid such compensation as he may deem proper, not exceeding in the aggregate any appropriation made for that purpose. And such Commissioner is authorized to decide what substances, extracts, mixtures, or compounds which may be submitted for his inspection in contested cases are to be taxed under this act ; and his decision in matters of taxation under this act shall be final. The Commissioner may also decide whether any substance made in imitation or semblance of butter, and intended for human consumption, contains ingredients deleterious to the public health ; but in case of doubt or contest his decisions in this class of cases may be appealed from to a board hereby constituted for the purpose, and composed of the Surgeon-General of the Army, the Surgeon-General of the Navy, and the Commissioner of Agriculture ; and the decisions of this board shall be final in the premises.

The reports of the analytical chemist and microscopist are subjoined. Their suggestions are submitted with the recommendation that they receive favorable consideration of the Appropriation Committees of Congress.

BUTTER AND OLEOMARGARINE FROM A SCIENTIFIC STANDPOINT.

Chemist's Report.

OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, October 10, 1887.

SIR : I have the honor to submit herewith my first report as analytical chemist of the Internal Revenue Bureau, under the oleomargarine act.

From the date of said act going into effect to the present there have been submitted to me for analysis one hundred and thirty-three samples of supposed adulterated butter from various States, viz :

|                   |    |                      |   |
|-------------------|----|----------------------|---|
| Missouri .....    | 75 | Georgia.....         | 5 |
| New York.....     | 12 | South Carolina ..... | 4 |
| Pennsylvania..... | 11 | Illinois .....       | 2 |
| Wisconsin.....    | 10 | Vermont.....         | 2 |
| Arkansas.....     | 5  | Ohio.....            | 1 |
| Iowa .....        | 5  | Texas.....           | 1 |

Twenty-two of which samples proved to be adulterations with foreign fats ranging from 15 to 88 per cent.

The analytical methods used for the detection of foreign fats are those of Hehner and Angel for the estimation of insoluble fatty acids, and the Reichert process for the estimation of the soluble and volatile acids. Both of these methods are recognized as most reliable, and are officially indorsed by chemists both in Europe and the United States. It is unnecessary to give the details of the modus operandi of the different processes, as they are well known, and are of interest only to chemists.

As will be noticed, the largest proportion of the samples sent in prove to be pure butter, though in most cases in a very rancid condition, which was undoubtedly taken as an indication of adulteration, while the reverse is the case, as oleomargarine, butterine, and other artificial butters are less liable to rancidity, owing to the very small percentage of the soluble and volatile acids that are characteristic of butter, contained in them.

As the instruments now used by the agents of the Department for the preliminary tests have proved wholly unreliable, I would respectfully suggest the adoption of Dr. Koenig's specific-gravity test, a process which has been officially adopted by the board of health of Berlin, and used by them as a preliminary test for the past eight years, and indorsed by leading chemists of that country.

The manipulation is easily learned, and the results, though not to be depended upon solely, will give in most cases a valuable indication of the substance under examination.

The instrument consists of a tin or copper cylinder for water, with one opening for the reception of a test tube about 8 inches long by  $1\frac{1}{4}$  inch diameter, an alcohol lamp, thermometer, a small glass beaker for the melting of the fat, and Dr. Koenig's butter areometer, having a marked scale from .845 to .870. The fat having been heated on the cylinder until it has become clear, is carefully poured off from the precipitated caseine, salt and water, into a filter; after filtration put into the tube and heated in the cylinder to a temperature of  $100^{\circ}$  C.; the areometer is then introduced and the reading taken. Pure butter will show from .866 to .868, while the range of artificial butters and other animal fats will show from .859 to .864. While it is true that the density of cotton-seed oil, which is used to a limited extent by some manufacturers of oleomargarine, butterine, etc., is greater than that of butter, from experiments made with oleomargarine known to contain cotton-seed oil, in my opinion it is doubtful whether a sufficient quantity of the oil can be advantageously used to raise the specific gravity to that of butter.

Most respectfully,

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue.

OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, October 14, 1887.

Hon. JOSEPH S. MILLER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue:

The form and character of the fats employed as articles of food vary from the raw and solid fats of the whale and seal, eaten by the inhabitants of exceedingly cold climates, to the raw and liquid fats, mostly of vegetable origin, consumed in tropical climates. In temperate climates the form, whether solid or liquid, of animal or vegetable origin, is a matter of education.

The fats present to the animal economy one of the most important functions of food, that of supplying heat and energy.

"Ten grains of butter, when burnt in the body, produce heat sufficient to raise 18.68 pounds of water  $1^{\circ}$  F., which is equal to raising 14,421 pounds 1 foot high."\*

The potential energy of fats is greater than that of nearly all other articles of food. According to Dr. Rubner, as quoted by Professor Atwater,† one gram of fat yields 9.3 calories or 14.2 foot-tons; that is to say, "when a gram (one twenty-eighth of an ounce) of fat, be it the fat of the food or body-fat, is consumed in the body, it will, if its potential energy be all transformed into heat, yield enough to warm a kilogram of water nine and three-tenth degrees of the centigrade thermometer, or, if it be transformed into mechanical energy such as the steam-engine or the muscles use to do their work, it will furnish as much as would raise one ton fourteen and two-tenths feet, or fourteen and two-tenths tons one foot."

A gram of protein, myosin (lean) of meat, white of egg, casein (curd) of milk, gluten of wheat, etc., or of carbohydrates, starch and sugar, yields 4.1 calories, or 6.3 foot-tons; less than half as much energy as an equal quantity of fat. Of course only a small portion of the whole energy is made available for external muscular work, the rest is transformed into heat. Professor von Gohren,‡ as the result of elaborate computation, reckons that a horse may transform 32 per cent.; an ox may transform 43 per cent.; a man may transform 53 per cent. of the whole potential energy of his food into energy for mechanical work.

The digestibility of the fats, as of other food materials, has been a subject of investigation, more especially within the last ten years, and though the number of reliable experiments is very small, about sixty altogether, the figures given in the following table show approximately the proportion of nutrients digested by healthy persons.*

Experiments in the digestibility of different cattle-foods have long been a subject of investigation by the different agricultural experiment stations in Europe, and the data obtained have been made use of in various ways, e. g., in quickly fattening cattle for the market.

The general method pursued consists in analyzing and weighing both the food consumed and the excreta, the latter representing the undigested materials and the difference the amount digested. No trouble is found in feeding an ox or a horse on a diet of hay and water for a long period. But when a human being is taken for experiment, no matter how simple or palatable the food material may be, it very soon becomes repugnant to him, the digestive functions are disturbed, and the accuracy of the experiment impaired. This is especially true where a diet of fat is tried.

Instead of the living subject, resort has been made to artificial digestion, when the food material has been placed in a suitable vessel with a solution containing pepsin, and subjected, with occasional agitation, to the action of heat, at body-temperature, for twenty-four hours, portions being taken out at different intervals and subjected to microscopical and chemical examination.

From experiments made by Herr Jensent in the laboratory of the University of Tübingen, it appears that raw meat is much sooner digested than cooked meat. The raw beef was digested in two hours; the boiled, "half done," was digested in two and a half hours; the boiled, "well done," was digested in three hours; the roasted, "half done," was digested in three hours; the roasted, "well done," was digested in, four hours.

Cooking, so far as animal food is concerned, has the effect of making it more "tasty," and with certain vegetables, especially those composed principally of starch, as grain and potatoes, it is required to fit them for use.

In regard to the relative digestibility of butter and oleomargarine, the only actual comparative tests on record are a series made for three days on a man and a boy, by Prof. A. Mayer, in Holland.† In these from 97.7 to 98.4 per cent. of the fat of the butter and from 96.1 to 96.3 per cent. of the fat of the oleomargarine were digested. The average difference was 1.6 per cent. in favor of the butter. This proportion is so inconsiderable that in healthy persons it is of little or no importance. The slight difference in the chemical nature of the two fats would naturally lead to the same conclusion, as there is always a larger proportion of soluble glycerides in butter than in oleomargarine.

Dr. R. D. Clark made a series of artificial digestion experiments for the New York State Dairy Commission,* comparing oleomargarine with butter and other fats, including beef and mutton suet, and lard, cotton-seed, sesamé, and cod-liver oils. It was found from these tests that cod-liver oil exhibited the most perfect state of emulsion, after which came genuine butter, then "oleo" and lard oil, there being frequently no appreciative difference between them; the other animal fats and vegetable oils followed.

For healthy persons the difference between the genuine and artificial butter in digestibility was found to be nearly inappreciable. Cod-liver oil, which is the most readily digested of all the fats, can not always be tolerated by invalids.

The difference between the digestibility of a piece of cold roast meat and oleomargarine would seem to be in favor of the latter, as the greater part of the more solid fats have been taken out of the latter in the process of manufacture, so that it more readily melts in the mouth and stomach and from its fine state of division is readily emulsified.

Butter was unknown to the ancient Greeks, at least no reference is made to it by Homer or Aristotle, and even to this day is a great rarity in Mexico and South America and in certain portions of China. Herodotus and Hippocrates described, B. C. fifth century, the butter which the Scythians obtained from mare's milk by violent agitation, and Dioscorides states that the best butter is made from sheep's and goat's milk. It was not in common use in England until after the fourteenth century; it is less frequently eaten by barbarous than by civilized nations.

It is made from milk, chiefly from that of the cow; that from the bison is employed in Egypt and India, and that from the goat in other countries.

Milk is a natural emulsion in which the globules of fat exist in a very minute state of division; their usual size is  $\frac{1}{5000}$  of an inch, but varies with the nature of the food used, and they are scattered through the whole substance as long as the fluid is in motion, but when it is allowed to rest these globules coalesce and form cream.

The flavor of the butter differs according to the animal from which the milk is derived and varies with the nature of the food, turnips and leeks imparting a peculiar strong taste. The color varies likewise with the animal and its food, from nearly white to very yellow; to give butter a uniform tint the additions of annatto or other coloring matter is very often resorted to.

The average annual yield of milk and the number of pounds of milk required to make one pound of butter, from various breeds of dairy cattle, has been compiled from the Consular Reports on Cattle and Dairy Farming, lately issued by the State Department, and will be found in the following table:

The manufacture of butter has for its object the further coalescing of the fat globules contained in the milk, and depends on mechanical means for its accomplishment. Butter made from whole milk, or scalded cream, contains more casein, curd, than if made from cream in the ordinary way. This is important as not only affecting its taste, but also its keeping properties; for casein, being a nitrogenous body, is liable to undergo fermentation, in which case the butter becomes decayed or rancid. When special pains are taken to "work the butter" thoroughly, thus more effectually getting rid of the water and buttermilk, it keeps for a much longer period in a "sweet" condition. The use of from 1 to 10 per cent. of salt, and also saltpeter, as a preservative is quite common.

Ghee, which is so extensively used by the natives of India, is prepared from bison's milk. The milk is boiled, cooled, a little sour milk added, churned, hot water added, and in about an hour butter is produced. The butter is allowed to become rancid, when it is clarified by being boiled with Dhye, or sour milk, and salt or betel-leaf, and is then kept in closed pots for use. It has a peculiar flavor, which is distasteful to Europeans.

In some parts of Europe the butter is boiled at a gentle heat for a couple of hours, with constant stirring, allowed to cool and settle, and the melted mass is decanted while still liquid into crocks, care being taken not to allow the casein, or cheesy mass, to intermix. The butter so prepared will keep for a long time without becoming rancid.

Butter is the best known of all non-nitrogenous animal foods (fats), but is consumed in very different quantities, varying from the large cupful, as drunk before breakfast by the Bedouins near the Red Sea and Persian Gulf, to the thin layer, as eaten at most meals on the slice of bread by the inhabitants of this country.

Butter is defined by the Oleomargarine Law as the food product "which is made exclusively from milk or cream, or both, with or without common salt, and with or without additional coloring matter."

Butter is composed principally of butter fat, with a small and variable quantity of water, casein, or curd, and some salt, which has been added to preserve it and bring out its flavor.

The following table shows the extremes in composition of numerous samples of butter, as found by various analysts, in regard to their proximate analyses:

What is commonly or commercially known as a simple "fat" is chemically almost invariably a mixture of several different fats, called glycerides, and the name by which they are designated terminates in "in," e. g., butyrin, stearin, etc. These glycerides are the normal propenyl ethers of the fatty acids, or, in other words, compounds of the triad alcohol, glycerine, with the fatty acids.

Glycerine has the property of uniting with one, two, or three molecules of fatty acid, affording mono-, di-, or tri-glycerides, designated according to the acid. In almost all the natural fats these glycerides occur as trivalent, and in speaking of them the prefix "tri" is generally omitted, being understood. The most commonly occurring glycerides are:

Tri-stearin,  $C_3H_5(C_{18}H_{35}O_2)_3$ , which occurs in almost every animal and vegetable fat. It may be obtained in a considerable degree of purity in plates of a pearly luster by repeated crystallizations from ether. It is inodorous, tasteless, neutral, and volatilizing without decomposition under reduced pressure. It is solid at all ordinary temperatures; its melting point is from 52 degrees to 69.7 degrees C.

Tri-palmitin,  $C_3H_5(C_{16}H_{31}O_2)_3$ , which occurs in animal and vegetable fats, and especially in palm oil, whence its name, and may be obtained by repeated crystallizations from hot ether, in white pearly laminae. The crystals melt at from 46 degrees to 62 degrees C.

Tri-butylin,  $C_3H_5(C_4H_7O_2)_3$ , which is found chiefly in butter. At ordinary temperature it is liquid, and has a distinct and peculiar taste and smell.

Tri-olein,  $C_3H_5(C_{18}H_{33}O_2)_3$ , which occurs in almost every animal and vegetable fat. It is liquid at all ordinary temperatures, neutral, odorless, and tasteless.

Wein* found in butter fat more or less of the glycerides of palmitic, oleic, stearic, myristic, arachidic, normal caprylic, capric, normal caproic and butyric acids. Glycerides of acetic and formic acids were also found, but not those of propionic, valeric, oenanthylic, or pelargonic acids. The greater part consists of the glycerides of oleic and palmitic acids, that of stearic acid being usually present in smaller quantity. The characteristic constituent of butter fat is butylin, which ranges from 5 to 8 per cent.

Olive and cotton-seed oils are composed chiefly of tri-olein and tri-palmitin.

Mutton suet consists chiefly of tri-stearin, with small quantities of tri-olein and tri-palmitin.

Human fat contains tri-palmitin with some tri-olein and tri-stearin.

Beef suet contains the same glycerides and the same quantity of tri-olein as mutton suet, but the percentage of tri-palmitin and tri-stearin is about a mean between the latter fat and human fat (Heintz).

Lard has more tri-olein than either beef or mutton suet, and less of the other two glycerides, tri-palmitin and tri-stearin.

The differences in these natural fats are due to the different proportion in which these glycerides are mixed and to such other physical differences as the various sources of the substance under examination would produce. When subjected to chemical and physical examination a discrimination can be made between fats and oils of different origins.

According to Blyth† the general composition of butter fat and butterine (oleomargarine) fat appears to be as follows:

|                            | Butter fat.                     | Butterine fat.               |

The following analyses, made by Drs. Brown and Mott, show the characteristic difference in the composition of genuine butter and oleomargarine to consist in the greater proportion of soluble fats contained in the former:

The extent of the consumption of any new food will depend upon its pleasing appearance, its palatability, its capacity to appease hunger, its wholesomeness, and its relative cheapness. If the new food is a manufactured product its cheapness will depend upon the possibility of its production on a large scale from relatively cheap materials. When, as in the case of oleomargarine, the food is produced from what is ordinarily waste products, it is obvious that the conditions for the production of a cheap food are present.

When, however, such an article resembles so closely some other food product as to deceive the great majority of people, and is sold for such, and not under its own name or on its own merits, it is a serious fraud on the public, and demands strict regulations for its manufacture and sale.

The discovery of Mège Mouries, in 1867, of a process for the manufacture on a large and cheap scale, from hitherto waste products of the large slaughter houses, of an artificial butter, is one of the most important advances in industrial chemistry of this century.

His object was to obtain a fat "which melted at almost the exact temperature of butter, possessed a sweet and agreeable taste, and which, for most purposes, could replace ordinary butter, not, of course, the finest kind, but which was superior to it in possessing the advantageous peculiarity of keeping for a long time without becoming rancid."

He was employed on the Imperial farm at Vincennes and his experiments were undertaken at the instance of the French Government.

In 1870 a factory for the manufacture of this new butter substitute was in operation near Paris, at Poissy, and the product was called "margarine." The war then intervened and suspended the operations of this factory, but at the cessation of hostilities they were resumed.

In April, 1872, the Council of Health of the Department of the Seine, on the favorable report of M. Felix Boudet, admitted the new product to the trade under the proviso that it was not to be sold as butter.

The process was patented in England in 1869, and in this country in 1873, and was described in many of the trade and scientific journals of that time.

The process of Mège may be briefly described as follows: The fat from the loins and kidneys of freshly slaughtered beeves is thoroughly washed in cold water, 16° to 18° C. (61° to 65° F.) for two or three hours, then hashed fine and melted in steam-jacketed vats, in which the temperature is carefully regulated, with the addition of a little pepsin or a portion of the finely divided stomachs of calves or pigs, together with a little caustic alkali, or alkaline carbonate at a temperature of about 45° C. (113° F.). The charge usually is, hashed raw fat 1,000 parts, water 300 parts, sodium, or potassium carbonate, 1 part, and stomachs 2 parts. The mass is stirred and kept at a temperature of 45° C. for two to three hours, allowed to settle; the melted fat is drawn off through hair sieves from the top and run into the settling tanks. In these tanks the fat is kept melted at 45° C. until it becomes clear, the addition of salt, about 2 per cent., hastening the operation. The mass is then cooled at a temperature of 23° to 25° C. (73° to 77° F.), whereby a large proportion of the stearin and palmitin separates in the solid state, leaving the olein, much of the palmitin, and some stearin in a pasty state. The mass is placed in bags and subjected to hydraulic pressure. The temperature of the pressing room is maintained at 25° C. The oily product expressed constitutes the "oleo oil" or "oleo", which is the principal ingredient of oleomargarine. The hard fat remaining in the press is turned over to the candle and soap makers. The average yield is stated to be, hard fat, stearin, palmitin, 40 to 50 per cent.; "oleo oil," 50 to 60 per cent.

This "oleo oil" is nearly colorless, tasteless, and at ordinary temperature is a soft, granular fat, rather than an oil.

To make it into the artificial butter it is necessary to impart to it the color and aroma it still lacks. For the former, annatto or turmeric is used, and for the latter, fresh milk, cream, or genuine butter. To effect an intimate mixture of the flavoring and coloring matter with the "oleo" it is necessary to emulsify the fat. Mège discovered that the udder of the cow contains a substance, extractable by water, which will emulsify the fat. The operation is carried on in churns; the usual charge is, liquid "oleo" 200 pounds, fresh milk 40 to 50 pounds, aqueous extract of the udder 40 to 50 pounds, and coloring matter in suitable quantity. The churning is kept up for two hours at as nearly 17° C. (63° F.) as possible. The product is treated essentially in the same way as ordinary butter; washed, drained, salted, and packed.

The yield is stated to be as follows: One ox affords 166 pounds of crude fat; 56 pounds caul fat, giving 36 pounds of artificial butter, besides 6 pounds of scrap.

Mège's original process has been modified from time to time; the use of pepsin or of calves' or pigs' stomachs has gradually been abandoned.

Though numerous patents have been taken out in this country for the manufacture of artificial butter, and materials unknown to science specified as ingredients to be used, the process employed is comparatively simple and not patented.

The process used in this country consists in preparing from the suet and other fats of the beef and hog a fat deprived of the larger part of its more solid constituents, viz, stearin and palmitin, whereby a product is obtained that resembles butter fat in certain properties.

The aim of the manufacturer is to so combine the "oleo oil," neutral lard and cotton-seed oil with a certain small portion of creamery butter or cream as to produce an artificial butter, having the appearance and taste of the natural product as closely as possible. There are several grades manufactured, containing a greater or lesser amount of genuine butter, which determines the price.

Sir F. A. Abel, C. B., F. R. S., in his testimony before the English Committee,* stated that the process employed in one of the most extensive works in Holland was briefly as follows:

"A quantity of milk is churned for a short time, together with a sweet oil, such as that known as ground nut oil or sesame oil, a quantity of oleomargarine equal to about half the weight of the other ingredients is then added to this churned mixture, and the churning is then continued, at about 80° or 90° F., for about a quarter of an hour. In most cases, in order to give the true butter flavour to the butterine to a greater extent than can be obtained by the use of the milk alone, a proportion of a very strong-flavoured butter, either Danish or Dutch, is added toward the close of the churning. When the mixture has been sufficiently churned, it is allowed to flow out of the churn in a stream, which meets a stream of ice-cold water. The sudden refrigeration of the mixture which I have described has the effect of preventing any crystalline formation, or the formation of crystalline particles, and produces a granular structure quite similar to the structure of ordinary butter. I should state that a small quantity of what is known as butter-colouring matter, or anatto (which is the colouring matter used generally in the colouring of genuine butter of different descriptions), is added before the churning is completed. The butter-like substance which is obtained by the refrigerating action to which I have alluded, is passed between rolls, with the addition of a sufficient quantity of salt to render it thoroughly palatable, and to preserve it; and the butterine is submitted to the usual finishing operation for sale in the market."

"Oleomargarine is the product of a treatment of what is commonly called sweet beef fat; that is to say the fat from beef is carefully looked over in order to see that no tainted portions remain; it is then submitted to a crushing process in order that the membrane may afterwards more readily separate from the fat; it is submitted to melting, and allowed to subside for some time, so as to separate the pure fat from the membrane; the pure fat is then drawn off, and when perfectly clear is allowed to cool, until the mixture is rather more than semi-solid; and in that condition it is placed between cloths in a condition somewhat similar to marrow, and submitted to very powerful pressure; the hard portion of the fat remains behind as stearine, and the portion that is liquid at that temperature passes away, together with a small proportion of the harder constituents of the fat; and that constitutes the oleomargarine. In butterine there is no fat introduced except in the form of oleomargarine."

The wholesomeness of artificial butter has been affirmed by eminent chemists and physiologists, both in Europe and in this country, who have devoted attention to this subject, when it is prepared from carefully selected and sweet fat of healthy animals, and the process conducted in a proper and cleanly manner. (See in this connection the statements of Dr. C. F. Chandler of the School of Mines, Columbia College, New York; Prof. Henry Morton, Stevens Institute, Hoboken, N. J.; Prof. G. F. Barker, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Prof. G. C. Caldwell, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.; Prof. S. W. Johnson, Sheffield Scientific School, Yale College, New Haven, Conn.; Dr. J. W. S. Arnold, University Physiological Laboratory, New York, submitted to the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and by Sir F. A. Abel, Mr. Herbert P. Thomas, Mr. A. H. Allen, president of the Society of Public Analysts; Mr. Otto Hehner, secretary of the Society of Public Analysts; Dr. James Bell, principal analyzer to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, and others before the English Committee.)

Mr. Herbert P. Thomas, principal clerk of the Local Government Board in charge of the Public Health Department, stated in his testimony before the Select Committee† that they had no evidence that butterine was injurious to health. "It is a very curious thing that our inspectors have connected epidemics with a very large number of substances; for instance, epidemics have been supposed to be connected with milk, with cream, with hams, and with cheese, but not with butter or butterine."

The most scrupulous cleanliness should be observed in the manufacture of oleomargarine. Even a small amount of fat if allowed to adhere to the apparatus and utensils used is liable to decompose in such a way as to spoil the succeeding batch of materials worked up. Fats can undoubtedly be deodorized by means of chemicals, but it is very questionable whether they could be used as butter substitutes, owing to the increased expense involved to make them perfectly tasteless, as it is very hard to get rid of the tainted taste.

* Special Report from the Select Committee on the Butter Substitutes Bill, ordered by the House of Commons to be printed, 4th July, 1887.

† Loc. cit., p. 9.

That there is a remote possibility, especially when the cattle and hogs are not inspected by a competent veterinarian before slaughtering, of the fats used containing parasitic organisms may be granted, but the remedy is self-evident. The chance of disease being conveyed in this way is very small, but not yet proved to be non-existent.

The following tables give the average composition of 52 samples of genuine butters, American, of some oleomargarines, and analyses of suet fat, oleo oil, leaf lard, and "neutral":

NOTE.—Authority: A. H. Allen. Commercial Organic Analysis, second edition, vol. 2.

To carry out the proper chemical and microscopical examinations required by the increasing number of samples received from Collectors of Internal Revenue, increased assistance and a larger laboratory are necessary. I would therefore respectfully recommend that an appropriation be asked for from Congress sufficient to fit up a proper laboratory, to defray the expenses for chemicals and apparatus, and the purchasing, collecting, and forwarding of samples for analysis, and the salaries of two assistants and one messenger in the laboratory.

Respectfully submitted.

EDGAR RICHARDS,
Microscopist.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

Hon. CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

JOS. S. MILLER,
Commissioner.

REPORT OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
Washington, D. C., December 1, 1887.

SIR: In obedience to law, I have the honor to submit a report for the year ending October 31, 1887, exhibiting—

First. A summary of the state and condition of every association from which reports have been received the preceding year, at the several dates to which such reports refer, with an abstract of the whole amount of banking capital returned by them, of the whole amount of their debts and liabilities, the amount of circulating notes outstanding, and the total amount of means and resources, specifying the amount of lawful money held by them at the times of their several returns.

Second. A statement of the associations whose business has been closed during the year, with the amount of their circulation redeemed and the amount outstanding.

Third. Suggestions as to amendments to the laws relative to banking by which it is thought the system may be improved.

Fourth. A statement exhibiting under appropriate heads the resources and liabilities and condition of the banks, banking companies, and savings banks organized under the laws of the several States and Territories, such information being obtained by the Comptroller from the reports made by such banks, banking companies, and savings banks, to the legislatures or officers of the different States and Territories, and where such reports could not be obtained, the deficiency has been supplied from such other authentic sources as were available.

Fifth. The names and compensation of the clerks employed in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the whole amount of the expenses of the banking department during the year.

This is the twenty-fifth annual report of the Comptroller of the Currency.

THIRD.

SUGGESTIONS AS TO AMENDMENTS TO THE LAWS RELATING TO BANKING BY WHICH THE SYSTEM MAY BE IMPROVED AND THE SECURITY OF THE HOLDERS OF ITS NOTES AND OTHER CREDITORS MAY BE INCREASED.

The views expressed in the Report of 1886 as to the sufficiency of the security now provided for the circulating notes of national banks are respectfully reaffirmed, and the suggestions then made for improving the general features of the national banking system are renewed. These suggestions, with others drawn from enlarged experience, have been embodied in a bill for a national-bank code, incorporated herewith, and respectfully commended to the early attention of Congress. Every material change proposed to be made by the adoption of this code, and the reasons for it, will appear in the statement appended to it. In order that due preparation may be made for the early consideration of this important measure, the explanatory statement, the bill, and a codification of all existing laws, arranged in sections parallel with those of the bill, have been sent in advance to the Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress, in order that each may satisfy himself of the fidelity and accuracy of the codification of the laws now in force, and by means of this medium of comparison may conveniently compare with those laws the provisions of the proposed code.

Upon scrutiny it will be found that the proposed code conforms to the existing law, with some variation in phraseology and some unimportant modification of import, except in the following instances:

Sections 4, 5, and 6 increase the salary of the Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, enlarge his duties, and state in a more comprehensive manner the prohibition against the Comptroller or Deputy Comptroller having any interests inconsistent with their official positions.

Section 33 provides against such a constitution of the board of directors as makes the officers of the bank a majority of the board.

Section 42 incorporates into the oath which directors are required to take an obligation to inform themselves at all times as to the business and condition of the association. This addition to the law is, in my judgment, necessary, because in a recent case submitted to the courts it has been decided that directors who do not keep themselves informed as to the business of their association can not be held responsible for the mismanagement of its affairs.

Sections 44 and 45 are new matter. They provide a formal method by which directors may resign their positions and be discharged from further accountability.

Section 51 forbids the organization of national banks with branches. When the system was first established there were some State banks with branches, and as it was desired that these should be induced to become national banks, provision was made for their retaining their branches after conversion. This reason no longer exists, and it would appear to be in the line of public policy to take precaution in advance against any future development of the national banking system in the direction of combination and agglomeration similar to the development among railroad and other corporations controlling interests upon which the business and convenience of whole communities depend. In section 127 of the proposed code provision is made for national banks having more than one office under certain conditions.

Section 59 supplements existing law as to the extension of the corporate existence of national banks, by providing adequate relief to shareholders who do not assent to the extension of the bank, and who do not concur with the directors as to the appraisement of its stock.

Section 62 states in more precise language, and with some modification, the existing restrictions upon national banks as to holding real estate.

Sections 67 to 71, inclusive, provide a method by which the stockholders of national banks may substitute for their contingent liability a surplus fund to be held by the bank. In this connection I respectfully refer to the recommendations presented to Congress in the Comptroller's Report for 1886, and to what is said on the subject in the appropriate place in the Report of this year.

Section 75 makes an important change in the amount of bonds required to be deposited by the banks.

The acts of 1863 and 1864 required a deposit of bonds not less in amount than one-third of the capital; the act of 1874 made $50,000 the minimum for banks of which the capital exceeded $150,000; the act of 1882 fixed the amount at one-fourth the capital in cases where the capital does not exceed $150,000, and at $50,000 for all banks of which the capital exceeds $150,000.

The proposed code divides the banks into two classes, those with a capital of $250,000 and less, and those of which the capital exceeds $250,000, and reduces the amount to be deposited by the smaller banks from one-fourth to one-tenth of their capital, and that to be deposited by the larger banks from $50,000 to $25,000.

The reason for the change is, that the bond requirement is a serious impediment to the absorption into the national-bank system of the State banks, which are still numerous in those sections which were more or less excluded from early participation in the privileges of the acts of 1863 and 1864; and it is also an impediment to the formation of new banks of large capital. While the change may induce some banks to withdraw a portion of their bonds, it may reasonably be expected that the deposit of bonds made by new banks and by banks increasing their capital will offset such withdrawals to some extent.

The danger of a spasmodic contraction of the national-bank circulation is obviated by the retention of the clause in section 9 of the act of July 12, 1882, which provides that not more than $3,000,000 of lawful money shall be deposited in any one calendar month for the purpose of withdrawing such circulation; but there seems no reason to retain the other clause of that section, which prohibits banks that have reduced circulation from again increasing it until after an interval of six months. Among all the objections that have been made to the national-bank currency, none seems so well founded, and at the same time so serious, as the charge that it is inelastic in volume, and therefore devoid of one of the prime requisites of a bank currency. The clause referred to manifestly tends to aggravate this defect, and it should, therefore, be discarded from the law.

Sections 89 to 94, inclusive, provide for the custody and periodical examination of the plates and dies used in the printing of national-bank notes and for the destruction of material no longer in use. Under the existing law, the Comptroller of the Currency is responsible for the safe-keeping and proper use of these plates and dies, but since the enactment of that provision the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has been removed from the Treasury building, and it is now a physical impossibility for the Comptroller of the Currency to have any knowledge of or supervision over the keeping or the handling of these plates and dies.

Section 97 modifies the existing law as to national-bank notes, so as to permit them to be counted as a part of the cash reserve of the banks. This feature is introduced rather to settle a doubt than to make a change, because there seems to be good reason to believe that these notes may be so counted under the existing law.

Section 98 provides that the cashier's signature to the circulating notes of the bank may be affixed by an agent appointed with due formality. This provision, it is believed, will relieve many banks from an inconvenience which at times is quite serious.

Section 114 repeals the requirement that banks extending their corporate existence shall after three years deposit lawful money to the amount of their outstanding circulation.

Section 115 extends to the entire national-bank circulation the provision in section 6, act of July 12, 1882, which reserves to the United States whatever profit arises from the failure to redeem the notes of banks extending their corporate existence; and in this connection it should be observed that the other provisions in section 6 of that act are omitted from this code. The omitted clauses provide that the circulating notes of extended banks shall be retired, and that notes of a different and readily distinguishable design shall be issued in place of them.

The purpose of the provision now omitted is not obvious, especially as the act declares that the bank after extension "shall continue to be in all respects the identical association it was before the extension of its period of succession."

The debate on the bill (see Congressional Record, pages 2534 to 5878, volume 13, parts 3 to 6, inclusive, Forty-seventh Congress, first session) shows that the change in the design of the notes was connected with the provision reserving to the United States any profit arising from the non-presentation for redemption of the old issue of notes.*

It seems to have been intended that the notes of new design, now known as the series of 1882, should be issued only to banks extending their period of succession, whereas it appears that all banks that have been organized since the passage of the act in question have received notes of the series of 1882, and therefore the distinction has now been lost, which was presumably intended to be preserved, between the circulation of extended banks and of those still operated under their original certificates of organization. It is impracticable at this late day to re-establish this distinction, because of 2,263 banks issuing notes of the series of 1882 only 1,217 have been extended.

While the act of 1882 contains the only express provision in the statutes reserving to the Treasury the profit arising from the non-presentation of national-bank notes, yet under the operation of the act of June 20, 1874, all profits from that source must necessarily remain in the

* The bill was reported from committee by Mr. Crapo, of Massachusetts, who, in the course of his remarks, May 13, 1882, while it was under discussion in the House, said:

"There can be no doubt, while all the burdens attending the issue and circulation of bank notes fall upon the banks, that all the gain from loss of bank notes inures to the Government. To avoid any delay in receiving this gain the sixth section of the bill provides for a new issue of bank notes, and a redemption of the present issue, as summarily and effectually as is possible by the liquidation of the banks. The bill under consideration disposes of all doubts, if any exist, as to who shall receive the profits resulting from lost bank notes." (Page 3904, vol. 13, part 4, Cong. Record.)

Treasury, because the Treasury is the depository of the ultimate redemption fund of every bank, and it is certain that the moment will never come within the period of succession of any bank when it can be determined whether or not at some time thereafter its still outstanding notes may not be presented for redemption at the Treasury.

For these reasons it is considered no departure from existing law, and no infringement upon the rights which any bank can establish or enjoy, to embody in a code framed for continuous application to a permanent system the distinct provision that all uncalled-for moneys in the various redemption funds shall ultimately belong to the United States, while it is a distinct gain to get rid of the obligation to keep up an unnecessary and confusing distinction between circulating notes issued by banks organized prior to July 12, 1882, but not yet extended, and those issued by banks organized or extended after that date.

If these views prevail with Congress, it will, no doubt, also seem expedient to adopt the series of 1882 as a uniform design for the entire national-bank currency, and in that case it will be no more than just to provide by an appropriation from the Treasury for the expense of preparing new plates for the 797 banks now entitled to the notes of the old design.

Section 127 is that to which allusion is made in explaining section 51. There seems to be in some large cities, especially where the banks are concentrated in one part of the city, out of the reach of many of their customers, a growing need for some such provision as is made in this section.

Sections 134 and 135 preserve all existing provisions as to reserve, except that which allows the 5 per cent. fund in the hands of the Treasurer of the United States for the redemption of circulating notes to be counted as a part of the lawful-money reserve against deposits.

It seems barely possible that the intent of section 3, act of June 20, 1874, in this regard may have been misapprehended, but in any case it is anomalous in law and misleading in practice to count as a part of the reserve against deposits a fund wholly devoted to the redemption of circulation and not to any, even the least, extent available for paying depositors.

Except in the cases of some few banks of which the circulation is large and the deposits small, no material inconvenience is likely to be caused by the omission of the redemption fund from the items of reserve, especially if the recommendation is adopted to count national-bank notes on hand as part of the lawful-money reserve against deposits. On October 5, 1887, the banks held in the aggregate in their cash $21,937,884 national-bank notes, while the total amount on deposit in the redemption fund was only $8,310,442.25.

Section 136 relieves banks of the obligation of keeping a cash reserve against Government deposits. The existing statute requires a reserve on all deposits, and its language admits of no exception, but it is probable that this was not meant to include deposits of public money, because the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized by law to determine, in his own discretion, the security for, and the regulations applicable to, such deposits. It is believed that the proposed amendment will facilitate the operations of the Treasury. It will certainly relieve the depository banks of a needless and an expensive requirement.

Section 146 is intended to remedy an inconsistency in the present law, which gives the Comptroller of the Currency power to place a receiver in charge of a bank of which any impairment of capital is not made up within three months after notice from him, while under the same circumstances the directors can not enforce assessments against stockholders until four months after such notice.

Sections 147 to 150, inclusive, contain what is believed to be a very salutary check upon the managers of national banks in respect to investments in real-estate securities. Since the liabilities of banks are payable on demand, the fundamental principle of good banking is that the assets should be readily convertible into money. Real estate and real-estate securities are hardly ever readily convertible, while under conditions often arising they become inconvertible and remain so for long periods of time. Experience teaches that these conditions are sure to arise just when the exigencies of the community demand from banks the largest and readiest money accommodation.

Dealing in real estate and in bonds and debentures secured by real estate is of course an entirely legitimate employment for private or corporate capital, and there seems no lack of capital seeking such employment; it is generally safe, and often profitable; but commercial banks should be restrained from investing their deposits in such forms, lest their depositors should be exposed to the danger of finding that the cash upon which they depend for their current transactions has become locked up in investments, which, however safe and profitable for the bank, can not be made to reproduce the cash at the moment at which it is most urgently needed. Statistics presented in the Report of this year show that real-estate investments are responsible wholly or in part for the failure of 16 out of the 100 national banks of which the causes of failure have been ascertained.

While the general principle here stated is indisputable, and admits of but few exceptions in its application to settled communities where real-estate investments constantly tend to increased permanence, yet it should not be overlooked that in some sections of the country a very large amount of active capital is always seeking employment in real-estate securities, which tends to make such securities exceptionally convertible, and it is no doubt difficult for the banks situated in those localities to keep themselves entirely free from this business. To meet these cases, section 148 has been framed in such a way as to afford to such banks an opportunity to accommodate their customers and promote the general business around them without too much risk of becoming embarrassed with locked-up funds.

Sections 151 and 152 are designed to give more elasticity to the present provision of law which limits to one-tenth of the capital of the bank, loans of money to any individual, firm, or corporation. This is a perplexing subject, and it is difficult to regulate it by statute satisfactorily; yet experience proves that existing restraints have been on the whole salutary in their character, for in many cases disaster has followed the disregard of them.

The statistics of failures already referred to show that excessive loans (which are generally made to officers and directors of the banks, or to firms or companies in which they are interested) have caused wholly or in part 18 out of 100 failures.

Section 153 provides a penalty for making loans contrary to law. Heretofore the only penalty attaching to a violation of such restraints was the forfeiture of the franchise of the bank and the dissolution of the corporation, a punishment quite out of proportion to the offense, except under circumstances of concealment and aggravation rarely occurring, and still more rarely discovered before the failure of the bank renders the penalty superfluous.

Sections 155 to 160, inclusive, are intended to throw some additional safeguards around the administration of the banks, and to impress upon the directors a more definite sense of responsibility by indicating to them practical methods for discharging their trusts.

Section 161 embodies, with slight modifications, the prohibition contained in section 5208 of the Revised Statutes, against certifying checks not drawn against actual money. I respectfully submit that it would be well to strike this provision out of the law altogether, because experience shows that it has failed to prevent the practice of certifying checks representing stock operations, against which it is understood to have been aimed, while it has excluded national banks from very valuable business which State institutions, which are not subject to the same prohibition, carry on free from the wholesome supervision to which national banks are subjected.

If, however, the provision is to be retained in the law, I earnestly recommend the adoption of the modification herein submitted, so as to relieve from its operation legitimate and well-recognized methods of accommodation that materially facilitate the commercial business of the country.

Section 163 embodies the present usury law, except that it permits of special contracts as to rate of interest in the States and Territories where no usury law exists.

In this connection I make bold to say that, in my judgment, it would be a decided step toward emancipating industry from the trammels of antiquated notions of governmental guidance to omit from this code all reference to usury and to leave only a provision fixing the rate of interest in the absence of special stipulation between lender and borrower. No one of experience can doubt that money would be cheaper and more accessible to all borrowers if there were no usury laws in force anywhere in the United States.

Section 172 reduces the penalty from $100 a day to $10 a day in cases where the banks fail to transmit reports within the period prescribed in the statutes. The present law has never been fully enforced, and probably can not be; the penalty is excessive.

Sections 174 to 176, inclusive, enlarge the provisions of law applying to examiners of national banks and define their duties and responsibilities. The effect of these sections is mainly to incorporate into the statute what has heretofore been practiced by the best examiners.

Section 177 establishes a new scale for reckoning the assessment of examination fees upon national banks.

From many points of view it would be expedient for the examiners to be paid out of the tax upon the national banks, and not by fees. The present system establishes relations between the bank and the examiner which are inconsistent with the functions of that officer and with what ought to be his attitude toward the bank.

Sections 179 and 180 relieve banks of the obligation to pay fees for preliminary examination, and provide for these fees and the expenses of special examinations being paid out of such appropriation as Congress may make for that purpose.

In the Report for 1886 I recommended the employment of supervising examiners, to be paid by the Government, and the views then entertained as to the value of such an addition to the inspection machinery of the system have been confirmed in the highest degree by the additional experience and observation of the last twelve months.

The advantages to be secured may be briefly stated as follows :

1. That banks may be specially examined at any point of time between the dates of ordinary examination without exciting alarm in the community and without reflecting upon the management of the bank.

Such intermediate examinations are often very desirable in order to clear up doubtful inferences from reports of examiners and reports of condition, and to set at rest apprehensions excited by communications reaching the Comptroller's office. Banks are sometimes clandestinely assailed by local enemies, and sometimes a truthful warning comes from an obscure or a doubtful source. It is impossible for the Comptroller to discriminate between the true and the false in such charges, while their simple existence places him under a responsibility from which the present system of examination provides no method of relief. If he orders a special examination and the charges prove to be false, the mere examination, by discrediting the bank, inflicts upon it unmerited and often irreparable injury. If the apprehension of these consequences should deter the Comptroller from ordering an examination in a case where the charges afterward turn out to have been true, he will find it difficult to escape censure from the community which has apparently had its losses aggravated by what seems to be indifference or something worse.

2. The visits of a supervising examiner will afford to the banks, especially those in remote localities, a protection which they can not now receive against arbitrary or otherwise improper conduct on the part of the local examiner, and will also protect both the banks and the public against injury in case the local examiner proves to be inattentive, incompetent, or corrupt.

3. Supervising examiners will carry with them all over the Union a knowledge of correct and uniform methods of business, and, if properly selected, will possess the capacity of instructing both the local examiners and the officials of the banks in respect to these matters. Statistics show that out of 100 failures of national banks, 27 are due wholly to bad management, and in 36 other cases bad management contributed to the failure. Sixty-three per cent. of failures thus appear attributable in whole or in part to ignorance and to loose methods of business.

4. Supervising examiners will have circuits beginning and ending with the office of the Comptroller, and they will supply a means by which this officer can obtain definite and comprehensive information about banking interests in remote sections and about the local examiners. Such information is very important to a proper administration of the office at Washington ; but it is still more important to the banks that the Comptroller should understand their circumstances and their needs, varying, as these do, according to the peculiarities of different sections, and that he should have trustworthy information as to the character, methods, and personal bias of the local examiners.

Sections 185 and 186 give to the Comptroller of the Currency a reasonable degree of supervision over national banks that have gone into voluntary liquidation. It appears to have been held in former years that after associations had, in accordance with law, made some progress in voluntary liquidation, the Comptroller might lawfully interpose and appoint a receiver to wind up their affairs. As the law now stands, it does not appear to me to justify action in accordance with these precedents, and, if this is the case, there is obviously a gap in the completeness of the protection which the law aims to extend to the creditors and stockholders of national banks.

Sections 188 and 189 prescribe the duties of the directors and officers of national banks that are in a position of insolvency. They embody existing provisions and the decisions of the courts in respect to matters not now provided for by statute.

Sections 195 to 197, inclusive, provide for the discharge of receivers of national banks in cases not provided for in the existing law. Justice seems to require some such enactments as are here proposed, and without them it may reasonably be expected that the difficulty now experienced of obtaining the best men for receivers will constantly increase.

Sections 198 and 199 supplement the present law for the selection of an agent of stockholders by supplying certain details now required by the Comptroller but which should have statutory force.

Section 206 affords to agents of stockholders the means of obtaining their discharge, no such means now existing.

Sections 207 to 209, inclusive, provide for the case of a bank which has been restored to solvency during the receivership, and which the stockholders desire to revive under its old name. Such a case was lately presented when, within thirty days of the appointment of a receiver for the Abington National Bank, of Abington, Mass., the creditors were paid in full, with interest, and sufficient assets remained to justify resumption of business upon a capital above the minimum limited to the locality. The name and reputation of this bank were regarded by its stockholders as of material value, and, being desirous that that value should not be lost to them by a change of name, they made application to be allowed to resume business. After careful examination of the laws, I could find nothing either permitting or forbidding compliance with this application; it appeared to be a matter not provided for either way, and therefore I could reply only that if the stockholders unanimously agreed to resume, I would recognize the bank as again in operation.

Section 213 re-enacts section 380 of the Revised Statutes, with a proviso which is intended to obviate the claim made by some district attorneys that the statute permits them to force upon receivers of national banks services which are neither required nor desired. I assume that it was not the intention of Congress to confer upon these officers a statutory right to act as counsel to receivers of national banks, irrespective of their qualifications or of their local interests and connections.

Section 217 amends the provision as to a semi-annual tax upon circulation by relieving banks from the tax on so much of their circulation as is predicated upon the minimum deposit of bonds required by law. While for more than one reason it may be well to tax circulation voluntarily taken out or maintained, neither reason nor justice appears to justify a tax on circulation represented by a compulsory deposit of bonds.

Section 223 re-enacts section 5219 of the Revised Statutes, with a change of phraseology aimed at securing to national banks adequate protection against such State and municipal assessment and taxation as places them at a disadvantage in competition with corporations which are doing the same business but which call their operations by special names.

It is only reasonable to believe that there was no intention on the part of Congress to make the discrimination, which has in some cases been inferred from the language of the present statute, between moneyed capital in the hands of individuals and moneyed capital managed by corporations.

Sections 227, 228, and 229 re-enact the provisions of section 5209 of the Revised Statutes, with some changes suggested by experience, others prompted by precaution, and some additions applying to persons appointed to be examiners of national banks.

Section 232 extends the general provisions for the punishment of forgers and other like offenders to persons who, without authority of law, affix signatures to the blank circulating notes printed for national banks, or who issue or circulate such notes knowing that they have not been duly signed by the proper officers of the association for which they were printed. The present law contains no provision for this offense, which is a manifest omission.

Section 235 re-enacts section 5243 of the Revised Statutes, and provides for its enforcement. In the last Report of the Comptroller of the Currency the attention of Congress was called to several instances of violation of section 5243 which have been of long standing, and of which no judicial notice has been taken, either before that report was made or since.

An act relating to national-banking associations.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, as follows:

CHAPTER I.—THE BUREAU OF THE CURRENCY.

SECTION 1. There shall be in the Department of the Treasury a bureau charged with the execution of all laws passed by Congress relating to national banking associations; the chief officer of which bureau shall be called the Comptroller of the Currency, and shall perform his duties under the general direction of the Secretary of the Treasury. (Sec. 324, R. S.)

SEC. 2. The Comptroller of the Currency shall be appointed by the President, on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of five years unless sooner removed by the President, upon reasons to be communicated by him to the Senate; and he shall be entitled to a salary of five thousand dollars a year. (Sec. 325, R. S.)

SEC. 3. The Comptroller of the Currency shall, within fifteen days from the time of notice of his appointment, take and subscribe the oath of office, and he shall give to the United States a bond in the penalty of one hundred thousand dollars, with not less than two responsible sureties, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. (Sec. 326, R. S.)

SEC. 4. There shall be in the Bureau of the Comptroller of the Currency a Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, to be appointed by the Secretary, who shall be entitled to a salary of three thousand five hundred dollars a year, and who shall possess the power and perform the duties attached by law to the office of Comptroller during a vacancy in the office or during the absence or inability of the Comptroller. The Deputy Comptroller shall also take the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and shall give a like bond in the penalty of fifty thousand dollars. (Sec. 327, R. S.)

SEC. 5. The Comptroller of the Currency, when present and acting, may delegate to the Deputy Comptroller of the Currency such part of the powers and duties pertaining to the office of the Comptroller of the Currency as he may consider proper and expedient for the speedy and systematic performance of public business.

SEC. 6. It shall not be lawful for the Comptroller or for the Deputy Comptroller, of the Currency, either directly or indirectly, to be a stockholder or otherwise pecuniarily interested in any national banking association, or in any other institution, corporation, or firm engaged in any banking operations. (Sec. 329, R. S.)

SEC. 7. The seal devised by the Comptroller of the Currency for his office, and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall continue to be the seal of office of the Comptroller, and may be renewed when necessary. A description of the seal, with an impression thereof, and a certificate of approval of the Secretary shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. (Sec. 330, R. S., as amended by an Act February 18, 1875.)

SEC. 8. There shall be assigned from time to time to the Comptroller of the Currency by the Secretary of the Treasury suitable rooms in the Treasury building for conducting the business of the Currency Bureau, containing safe and secure fireproof vaults, in which the Comptroller shall deposit and safely keep all valuable things belonging to his office; and the Comptroller shall from time to time furnish the necessary furniture, stationery, fuel, lights, and other proper conveniences for the transaction of the business of his office. (Sec. 331, R. S.)

SEC. 9. The Comptroller of the Currency shall employ from time to time the necessary clerks, to be appointed and classified by the Secretary of the Treasury, to discharge such duties as the Comptroller shall direct. (Sec. 328, R. S.)

SEC. 10. The Comptroller of the Currency shall make an annual report to Congress at the commencement of its session, exhibiting—

(1) A summary of the state and condition of all the associations from which reports have been received the preceding year, at the several dates to which such reports refer, with an abstract showing the whole amount of banking capital returned by them, the whole amount of their debts and liabilities, the amount of circulating notes outstanding, and the total amount of their means and resources, specifying the amount of lawful money held by them at the times of their several returns, and such other information in relation to such association as, in his judgment, may be useful.

(2) A statement of the associations which have withdrawn from business during the year, with the amount of their circulation redeemed and the amount outstanding.

(3) A statement of the associations which have failed during the year, or which for any other reason have been placed in the hands of a receiver, together with a special report in each case as to the cause of failure, and the liabilities, assets, and so forth.

(4) A statement exhibiting under appropriate heads the resources and liabilities and the condition of the banks, banking companies, and savings banks, organized under the laws of the several States and Territories, which information shall be obtained by the Comptroller from the reports made by such banks, banking companies, and savings banks to the legislatures or officers of the different States and Territories, and, where such reports cannot be obtained, the deficiency shall be supplied from such other authentic sources as may be available.

(5) The names and compensation of the clerks employed by him, and the whole amount of the expenses of the Bureau of the Currency during the year.

(6) Such suggestions as he may deem proper for the amendment and improvement of the laws relating to national banking associations. (Sec. 333, R. S.)

SEC. 11. The expenses necessarily incurred in executing the laws respecting the procuring of circulating notes, and all other expenses of the Bureau of the Currency, except as otherwise provided, shall be paid out of the proceeds of the taxes or duties assessed and collected on the circulation of national banking associations under this act. (Sec. 5173, R. S.)

CHAPTER II.—ORGANIZATION OF ASSOCIATIONS.

SEC. 12. Associations for carrying on the business of banking under this act may be formed by any number of natural persons, not less in any case than five. (Sec. 5133, R. S.)

SEC. 13. The persons forming the associations shall enter into articles of association, which shall specify in general terms the object for which the association is formed, and may contain any other provisions, not inconsistent with law, which the association may see fit to adopt for the regulation of its business and the conduct of its affairs. These articles shall be signed by the persons uniting to form the association, and a copy of them shall be forwarded to the Comptroller of the Currency, to be filed and preserved in his office. (Sec. 5133, R. S.)

SEC. 14. The persons uniting to form such association shall, under their hands make an organization certificate, which shall specifically state—

(1) The name assumed by such association, which name shall be subject to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency.

(2) The place where its operations of discount and deposit are to be carried on, designating the State, Territory, or District, and the particular county, and the city, town or village.

(3) The amount of capital stock, and the number of shares into which the same is to be divided.

(4) The names and places of residence of the shareholders, and the number of shares held by each of them.

(5) The fact that the certificate is made to enable such persons to avail themselves of the advantages of this act. (Sec. 5134, R. S.)

SEC. 15. The organization certificate shall be acknowledged before a judge of some court of record, or notary public, and, together with the acknowledgment thereof, authenticated by the seal of such court or notary, shall be transmitted to the Com-

troller of the Currency, who shall record and carefully preserve the same in his office. (Sec. 5135, R. S.)

SEC. 16. Upon duly making and filing articles of association and an organization certificate, the association shall become, as from the date of the execution of its organization certificate, a body corporate. (Sec. 5136, R. S.)

SEC. 17. The capital stock of associations organized under this act shall not be less than the amounts following:

(1) Every association in a city having more than fifty thousand inhabitants, two hundred thousand dollars.

(2) Every other association, one hundred thousand dollars, except that, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, associations with a capital stock of not less than fifty thousand dollars each may be organized in any place having not more than six thousand inhabitants. (Sec. 5138, R. S.)

SEC. 18. The capital stock of each association shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each and be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable on the books of the association in such manner as may be prescribed in the by-laws or articles of association. Every person becoming a shareholder by such transfer shall, in respect to the shares thus acquired, succeed to all the rights and liabilities of the prior holder of such shares. (Sec. 5139, R. S.)

SEC. 19. At least fifty per centum of the capital stock of every association shall be paid in money within thirty days from the execution of the organization certificate and before the association shall be authorized to commence business; and the remainder of the capital stock shall be paid in installments of at least ten per centum each on the whole amount of the capital as frequently as one installment at the end of each succeeding month from the time the association shall be authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to commence business. The payment of each installment shall be certified to the Comptroller, under oath, by the president or cashier of the association. (Sec. 5140, R. S.)

SEC. 20. Whenever any shareholder, or his assignee, fails to pay any installment on the stock when the same is required by the preceding section to be paid, the directors of such association may sell the stock of such delinquent shareholder at public auction to any person who will pay the highest price therefor, to be not less than the amount then due thereon, with the expenses of advertisement and sale; and the excess, if any, shall be paid to the delinquent shareholder. Three weeks' previous notice of such sale shall be given in a newspaper of general circulation published in the city or county where the association is located. (Sec. 5141, R. S.)

SEC. 21. If no bidder can be found who will pay for such stock the amount due thereon to the association, and the cost of advertisement and sale, the amount previously paid shall be forfeited to the association, and such stock shall be sold as the directors may order, within six months from the time of such forfeiture, and if not sold it shall be canceled and deducted from the capital stock of the association. (Sec. 5141, R. S.)

SEC. 22. If such cancellation and reduction shall reduce the capital of the association below the minimum of capital required by law, the capital stock shall, within thirty days from the date of such cancellation, be increased to the required amount; in default of which a receiver may be appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency to close up the business of the association. (Sec. 5141, R. S.)

SEC. 23. Whenever a certificate is transmitted to the Comptroller of the Currency, as provided in this act, and the association transmitting the same notifies the Comptroller that at least fifty per centum of its capital stock has been duly paid in, and that such association has complied with all the provisions of this act required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking, the Comptroller shall examine into the condition of such association, ascertain especially the amount of money paid in on account of its capital, the name and place of residence of each of its directors, the amount of the capital stock of which each is the owner in good faith, and generally whether such association has complied with all the provisions of this act required to entitle it to engage in the business of banking; and he shall cause to be made and attested by the oaths of a majority of the directors, and by the president or cashier of the association, a statement of all the facts necessary to enable him to determine whether the association is lawfully entitled to commence the business of banking. (Sec. 5168, R. S.)

SEC. 24. If, upon a careful examination of the facts so reported, and of any other facts which may come to his knowledge, whether by means of a special commission appointed by him for the purpose of inquiring into the condition of such association or otherwise, it appears that such association is lawfully entitled to commence the business of banking, the Comptroller of the Currency shall give to such association a certificate, under his hand and official seal, that such association has complied with all the provisions required to be complied with before commencing the business of banking, and that such association is authorized to commence such business. But the Comptroller may withhold from any association his certificate authorizing the commencement of business, whenever he has reason to suppose that the shareholders have formed the same for any other than the legitimate objects contemplated by this act. (Sec. 5169, R. S.)

SEC. 25. The association shall cause the certificate issued under the preceding section to be published for at least sixty days next after the receipt thereof in some newspaper published in the city or county where the association is located. (Sec. 5170, R. S.)

SEC. 26. Any association, after filing notice in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, may, by the vote of shareholders owning two-thirds of the shares, increase its capital stock, in accordance with the provisions of this act, to any sum, notwithstanding the limit fixed in its original articles of association and determined by the Comptroller. No increase of capital shall be valid until the whole amount of such increase is paid in, and notice thereof has been transmitted to the Comptroller of the Currency, and his certificate obtained specifying the amount of such increase of capital stock, and that it has been duly paid in as part of the capital of such association; but failure to notify the Comptroller and to obtain his certificate shall not exempt subscribers to such increase of capital from any obligation or responsibility undertaken by them or arising out of such subscription. No increase of the capital stock of any association, either within or beyond the limit fixed in its original articles of association, shall be made except in the manner herein provided. (Act May 1, 1886, sec. 1, and sec. 5142, R. S.)

SEC. 27. Any association, by the vote of shareholders owning two-thirds of the stock may reduce its capital stock to any sum not below the amount required by section seventeen of this act, and not below the amount required for its outstanding circulation. But no such reduction shall take effect and no payments shall be made on account thereof until the action of the shareholders has been duly certified to the Comptroller of the Currency, and his approval has been obtained. (Sec. 5143, R. S.)

SEC. 28. Any association, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, may change its title by vote of shareholders owning two-thirds of the stock. (Act May 1, 1886.)

SEC. 29. Any association, by a vote of shareholders owning two-thirds of the stock, and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, may change its location to any place within the same State not more than thirty miles distant. But if the capital stock of the association is less than the amount prescribed for associations to be established in the place to which the association is to remove, it must be increased to the required amount before such removal; and if the increase of capital involves an increase in the amount of bonds to be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, the additional bonds shall be deposited before the removal. (Act May 1, 1886.)

SEC. 30. A duly authenticated notice of the new title or location selected, and of the vote authorizing the change, shall be sent to the office of the Comptroller of the Currency; and no change of title or location shall be made or claimed until the Comptroller shall have issued his certificate of approval of the same. (Act May 1, 1886.)

SEC. 31. All rights, privileges, and powers, and all debts and liabilities of the association under its old title or at its old location shall devolve upon and inure to the association under its new title and at its new location. No change of title or location shall release any association from any liability incurred previous to such change, or affect any action or proceeding in law to which it is a party, or in which it is interested. (Act May 1, 1886.)

SEC. 32. No association shall make any change in its articles of association by which the rights, remedies, or security of existing creditors of the association shall be impaired. (Sec. 5139, R. S.)

SEC. 33. The affairs of each association shall be managed by a board of directors, not less than five in number, exclusive of the vice-president, cashier, assistant cashier, or any other officer, except the president, who may be a member of the board. (Sec. 5145, R. S.)

SEC. 34. The directors shall be elected by the shareholders at a meeting to be held at any time before the association is authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to commence the business of banking, and afterward at meetings to be held on such day in January of each year as is specified in the articles of association. They shall hold office for one year, and until their successors are elected and have qualified. (Sec. 5145, R. S.)

SEC. 35. If the articles of association do not fix the day on which the election shall be held, the day for the election shall be designated by the board of directors in their by-laws, or otherwise; or if the directors fail to fix the day, shareholders representing two-thirds of the shares may do so. (Sec. 5149, R. S.)

SEC. 36. If, from any cause, an election of directors is not made at the time appointed, the association shall not be dissolved on that account, but an election may be held on any subsequent day. Thirty days' notice of such election shall be given in all cases in a newspaper published in the city, town, or county in which the association is located. (Sec. 5149, R. S.)

SEC. 37. In all elections of directors, and in deciding all questions at meetings of shareholders, each shareholder shall be entitled to one vote on each share of stock held by him. Shareholders may vote by proxies duly authorized in writing; but no officer or employee of such association shall act as proxy. No vote shall be allowed on any share of which the certificate is held by or for the association as collateral security, or otherwise, or on which there is any installment or assessment due and unpaid, in whole or in part. (Sec. 5144, R. S.)

SEC. 38. Any vacancy in the board shall be filled by appointment by the remaining directors, and any director so appointed shall hold his place until the next election. (Sec. 5148, R. S.)

SEC. 39. The directors shall choose one of their number to be the president of the board. (Sec. 5150, R. S.)

SEC. 40. Every director must, during his whole term of service, be a citizen of the United States, and at least three-fourths of the directors must have resided in the State, Territory, or District in which the association is located, for at least one year immediately preceding their election, and three-fourths of every board must at all times consist of permanent residents in such State, Territory, or District. Every director during his continuance in office must own in his own right, free from any lien, at least ten shares of the capital stock of the association of which he is a director. (Sec. 5146, R. S.)

SEC. 41. Any director who ceases to be the owner of ten shares of the capital stock of the association, or who becomes in any other manner disqualified, shall thereby vacate his place. Notice of any vacancy so arising shall at once be given to the Comptroller of the Currency by the president or cashier. (Sec. 5146, R. S.)

SEC. 42. Each director, when appointed or elected, shall take an oath that he will at all times inform himself as to the business and condition of such association, and so far as the duty devolves on him will diligently and honestly administer its affairs; that he will not knowingly violate, or willingly permit to be violated, any of the laws relating to national banking associations; and that he is the owner, in good faith and in his own right, of the number of shares of stock required by this act, subscribed by him, or standing in his name on the books of the association, and that the same is not hypothecated, or in any way pledged as security for any loan or debt. Such oath, subscribed by the director making it and certified by the officer before whom it is taken, shall be immediately transmitted to the Comptroller of the Currency, and shall be filed and preserved in his office. (Sec. 5147, R. S.)

SEC. 43. If any person elected or appointed a director shall fail to qualify, by taking the prescribed oath, within thirty days from the date of such election or appointment, his place in the board shall be deemed to be vacant and shall be filled as in other cases of vacancy.

SEC. 44. Any director may resign from the board upon serving upon the president, vice-president, or cashier written notice of his intention so to do. But such resignation shall not take effect until an acknowledgment or proof of such service shall have been filed with the Comptroller of the Currency, and his certificate to that effect shall have been obtained, and shall have been published for at least thirty days in every issue of the newspaper in which the association is accustomed to publish its statements of condition. A like certificate must be obtained by the association and similarly published whenever a vacancy occurs in the board by the death, removal, or disqualification of a director.

SEC. 45. Any director may request the Comptroller of the Currency at any time, upon a written statement of his reasons therefor, to cause an examination to be made into the affairs of the association; and the Comptroller, if he is satisfied that the request is made in good faith and upon reasonable grounds, may order such examination to be made. But the Comptroller may require the director making the request to enter into a stipulation to pay the cost of such examination, if it shall prove to have been unnecessary, and to deposit beforehand a sufficient sum of money for that purpose.

SEC. 46. If the directors of any national banking association shall knowingly violate or knowingly permit any of the officers, agents, or servants of the association to violate any of the provisions of this act, all the rights, privileges, and franchises of the association shall be thereby forfeited. But before the association shall be declared dissolved such violation shall be determined and adjudged by a proper circuit, district, or Territorial court of the United States, in a suit brought for that purpose by the Comptroller of the Currency, in his own name. In case of such violation, every director who participated in or assented to the same shall be held liable in his personal and individual capacity for all damages which the association, its shareholders, or any other person shall have sustained in consequence thereof. (Sec. 5239, R. S.)

SEC. 47. Any bank incorporated by special law, or any banking institution organized under a general law of any State, may become a national banking association under this act by the name prescribed in its organization certificate; and in such case the articles of association and the organization certificate may be executed by a majority of the directors of the bank or banking institution; and the certificate shall declare that the owners of two-thirds of the capital stock have authorized the directors to make such certificate and to change and convert the bank or banking institution into a national banking association. A majority of the directors, after executing the articles of association and organization certificate, shall have power to execute all other papers, and to do whatever may be required to make the organization perfect and complete as a national banking association. (Sec. 5154, R. S.)

SEC. 48. The shares of any such association may continue to be for the same amount each as they were before the conversion; and any State bank which is a stockholder in any other bank by authority of State laws, may continue to hold its stock, although either bank, or both, may be organized under, and may have accepted the provisions of this act. (Sec. 5154, R. S.)

SEC. 49. When the Comptroller of the Currency has given to such association a certificate, under his hand and official seal, that the provisions of this act have been complied with, and that it is authorized to commence the business of banking, the association shall have the same powers and privileges and shall be subject to the same duties, responsibilities, and rules, in all respects, as are prescribed for other associations originally organized as national banking associations, and shall be held and regarded as such an association. But no such association shall have a less capital than the amount prescribed for associations organized under this act. (Sec. 5154, R. S.)

SEC. 50. The directors at the time of the conversion may continue to be the directors of the association until others are elected or appointed in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. (Sec. 5154, R. S.)

SEC. 51. No bank having branches shall continue to operate such branches after being converted into a national banking association.

SEC. 52. Associations may be organized under this act for the purpose of issuing notes payable in gold; and, except as specially provided, such associations shall be subject to all the provisions of law to which the other associations organized under this act are subject. (Sec. 5185, R. S.)

SEC. 53. Any association organized for the purpose of issuing notes payable in gold may be converted into an association with the same powers and obligations in all respects as the other associations organized under this act. Such conversion shall be effected in the same manner in which banks organized under State laws are converted into national banking associations. But the organization certificate shall bear the date of the original organization of the association. (Act February 14, 1880.)

SEC. 54. Nothing in this act shall affect any appointments made, acts done, or proceedings had or commenced in or toward the organization of any national banking association under any laws previously in force; but all associations which were organized or in process of organization under any such law, shall enjoy all the rights and privileges granted, and be subject to all the duties, liabilities, and restrictions imposed by this act. (Sec. 5156, R. S.)

CHAPTER III.—EXTENSION OF PERIOD OF SUCCESSION.

SEC. 55. Any association at any time within two years next previous to the date of the expiration of its original period of corporate existence, and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, may, by amending its articles of association, extend its period of succession for a term of not more than twenty years from the expiration of the period of succession named in the articles of association, and shall have succession for such extended period. But such amended articles of association shall not be valid until the Comptroller shall have given to the association a certificate as hereinafter provided. (Act July 12, 1882, secs. 1 and 2.)

SEC. 56. Such amendment of the articles of association shall be authorized by the consent in writing of shareholders owning not less than two-thirds of the capital stock of the association; and the board of directors shall cause such consent to be certified under the seal of the association, by its president or cashier, to the Comptroller of the Currency, accompanied by an application made by the president or cashier for the approval of the amended articles of association by the Comptroller. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 2.)

SEC. 57. Upon the receipt of the certificate and application provided for in the preceding section, the Comptroller of the Currency shall cause a special examination to be made, at the expense of the association, to determine its condition, and if after such examination, or otherwise, the condition of the association shall appear to him to be satisfactory, he shall give to such association a certificate under his hand and seal that the association has complied with all the provisions required to be complied with, and is authorized to have succession for the extended period named in the amended articles of association; but if the condition of the association appears to be unsatisfactory, he shall withhold such certificate of approval. (Act July 12, 1882, secs. 2 and 3.)

SEC. 58. Any association so extending the period of its succession shall continue to enjoy all the rights, privileges, and immunities granted to, and shall continue to be subject to all the duties, liabilities, and restrictions imposed upon national banking associations; and it shall continue to be in all respects the identical association it was before the extension of its period of succession. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 4.)

SEC. 59. If any shareholder not assenting to the amendment extending the period of succession shall, within thirty days from the date of the Comptroller's certificate of approval, give to the directors notice in writing of his desire to withdraw from the association, he shall be entitled to receive from the association the value of the shares so held by him. Such value shall be ascertained by an appraisal made by a committee of three persons, one to be selected by the dissenting shareholder, one by the directors, and the third by these two. If the directors refuse or unnecessarily delay to appoint an appraiser to act for them, the Comptroller of the Currency may make the appointment. In case the value fixed by the committee shall not be satisfactory to the shareholder or to the association, either may appeal to the Comptroller, who shall cause a reappraisal to be made, which shall be final and binding; and if the reappraisal shall change the value fixed by the committee, the expense of reappraisal shall be paid by the party against whom such change is made. The value so ascertained and determined shall be deemed to be a debt due to the shareholder from the association, and shall be forthwith paid by it; and the shares so surrendered and appraised shall be sold at public sale, after due notice, within thirty days after the final appraisal provided for in this section. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 5.)

SEC. 60. In the organization of any association intended to replace another association, and retaining the name thereof, the holders of stock in the expiring association, in proportion to their shares, respectively, shall be entitled to preference in the allotment of the shares of the new association. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 5.)

CHAPTER IV.—POWERS AND OBLIGATIONS.

SEC. 61. Every national banking association, in the name designated in its organization certificate, shall have power—

- (1) To adopt and use a corporate seal.
- (2) To have succession for the period of twenty years from its organization, unless it is sooner dissolved according to the provisions of its articles of association, or by the act of its shareholders owning two-thirds of its stock, or unless its franchise becomes forfeited by some violation of law.
- (3) To make contracts.
- (4) To sue and be sued, complain and defend, in any court of law or equity, as fully as natural persons.
- (5) To elect or appoint directors, and by its board of directors to appoint a president, vice-president, cashier, and other officers, define their duties, require bonds of them and fix the penalty thereof, dismiss such officers or any of them at pleasure, and appoint others to fill their places.
- (6) To prescribe, by its board of directors, by-laws not inconsistent with law, regulating the manner in which its stock shall be transferred, its directors elected or appointed, its officers appointed, its property transferred, its general business conducted, and the privileges granted to it by law exercised and enjoyed.
- (7) To exercise, by its board of directors, or duly authorized officers or agents, subject to law, all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking; by discounting and negotiating promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and other evidences of debt; by receiving deposits; by buying and selling exchange, coin, and bullion; by lending money on personal security; and by obtaining and issuing circulating notes according to the provisions of this act.

But no association shall transact any business, except such as is incidental and necessarily preliminary to its organization, until it has been authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to commence the business of banking. (Sec. 5136, R. S.)

SEC. 62. A national banking association may purchase, hold, and convey real estate for the following purposes, and for no others:

- (1) Such as shall be necessary for its adequate accommodation and protection in the transaction of its business.
- (2) Such as shall be mortgaged to it as security for debts previously contracted.
- (3) Such as shall be conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings.
- (4) Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees, or mortgages held by the association, or shall purchase in order to secure debts due to it.

But no loan shall be made upon any understanding that the association is afterward to receive a mortgage or lien upon real estate as security therefor, or to take any conveyance of real estate in payment thereof, in whole or in part. And no association shall hold for a longer period than five years the possession of any real estate upon which there is any mortgage or lien, or the title and possession of any real estate or any interest therein, otherwise than for the purpose specified in subdivision one of this section. (Sec. 5137, R. S.)

SEC. 63. All associations designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be depositaries of public money, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary; and they may also be employed as financial agents of the Government; and they shall perform all such reasonable duties, as depositaries of public moneys and financial agents of the Government, as may be required of them. The Secretary shall require the associations thus designated to give satisfactory security, by the deposit of United States bonds and otherwise, for the safe keeping and prompt payment of the public money deposited with them, and for the faithful performance of their duties as financial agents of the Government. Every association so designated as receiver or depositary of the public money shall take and receive at par all of the national currency bills, by whatever association issued, which may form part of the public money deposited with it. (Sec. 5153, R. S.)

SEC. 64. The president and cashier of every association shall cause to be kept at all times in the office where its business is transacted a full and correct list of the names and residences of all the shareholders in the association, and the number of shares held by each. Such list shall be subject to the inspection of all the shareholders and creditors of the association, and of the officers authorized to assess taxes under State authority, during business hours of each day in which business may be legally transacted. A copy of such list, as the same shall be on the first Monday of July of each year, verified by the oath of the president or cashier, shall be transmitted to the Comptroller of the Currency within five days from that date, under penalty of ten dollars for each day of delay thereafter. (Sec. 5210, R. S.)

SEC. 65. The shareholders of every association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. (Sec. 5151, R. S.)

SEC. 66. The provisions of the preceding section shall not apply to shareholders of any banking association now existing under State laws, having not less than five millions of dollars of capital actually paid in, and a surplus of twenty per centum on hand, both to be determined by the Comptroller of the Currency; but such shareholders shall be liable only to the amount invested in their shares. Such surplus of twenty per centum shall be kept undiminished and be in addition to the surplus provided for in this act, and if at any time there is a deficiency in such surplus of twenty per centum, the association shall not pay any dividends to its shareholders until the deficiency is made good, and in case of such deficiency the Comptroller of the Currency may compel the association to close its business and wind up its affairs under the provisions of chapter VIII. of this act. (Sec. 5151, R. S.)

SEC. 67. Whenever the surplus fund of any association shall exceed by twenty per centum the amount of its capital stock, the shareholders of such association may be relieved of the individual liability imposed by section sixty-six of this act; and the shareholders of every association may be relieved of such liability in the proportion which the surplus, after deducting an amount equal to twenty per centum of the capital, bears to the whole amount of the capital stock. But no exemption from individual liability shall be obtained through any process by which any portion of the capital stock of an association may be, or may have been, converted into surplus, and in no case shall the shareholders of any association be relieved of any proportion of their individual liability until all the conditions of the two succeeding sections are complied with.

SEC. 68. Whenever the shareholders of an association shall become entitled to any exemption from individual liability, the directors of such association, if they deem advisable, and at such times as shall seem to them proper, may cause the president or cashier to certify to the Comptroller of the Currency the amount of the surplus fund accumulated by the association; and upon the receipt of such certificate the Comptroller shall cause to be made, at the expense of the association, a special examination of its affairs; and if, after such examination had, the Comptroller shall be satisfied that the association is solvent, and that its capital and surplus are represented by good and adequate assets, he shall give to the association a certificate, under his hand and seal, setting forth that the association has complied with all the provisions required to be complied with by this and the preceding section, and specifying the proportion of the exemption from liability on each share of the capital stock.

SEC. 69. The association shall cause the certificate of the Comptroller of the Currency issued under the preceding section to be printed in each issue of a newspaper published in the city or county where the association is located for at least sixty days next after the issuing thereof.

SEC. 70. If any association, of which the shareholders have become exempt from any portion of their individual liability, shall have its surplus reduced, by losses or otherwise, below the amount required for such exemption, such association, within three months after receiving notice thereof from the Comptroller of the Currency, shall make good the deficiency in the surplus by assessment upon the shareholders pro rata for the amount of capital stock held by each; and, upon notice from the Comptroller, the Treasurer of the United States shall withhold the interest upon all bonds which the association has on deposit with him until otherwise notified by the Comptroller. If any association shall not make good its surplus as herein required, and shall fail to go into liquidation within three months after receiving notice from the Comptroller, a receiver may be appointed by the Comptroller to close up the business of the association.

SEC. 71. If any shareholder shall neglect or refuse to pay within two months any assessment made by the directors for the purpose of restoring reduced surplus, the directors shall cause a sufficient amount of the capital stock of such shareholder to be sold at public auction to make good the deficiency, and the balance, if any, shall be returned to such delinquent shareholder or shareholders. Ten days' notice of such sale shall be posted in the office of the association and shall be published in a newspaper of the city or town where the association is located.

SEC. 72. Persons holding stock as executors, administrators, guardians, or trustees shall not be personally subject to any liabilities as stockholders; but the estates and funds in their hands shall be liable in like manner and to the same extent as the testator, intestate, ward, or person interested in such trust-funds would be, if living and competent to act and hold the stock in his own name. (Sec. 5152, R. S.)

SEC. 73. All savings banks or other banks now organized, or which shall hereafter be organized in the District of Columbia, under any act of Congress, shall be subject to all the laws of the United States applicable to national banking associations, so far as those laws may be applicable to such savings banks or other banks. But no savings bank now established and which has a capital stock paid up in whole or in part shall be required to have a paid-in capital exceeding one hundred thousand dollars. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 6.)

CHAPTER V.—ISSUE AND REDEMPTION OF CIRCULATING NOTES.

SEC. 74. The term "United States bonds," as used throughout this chapter, shall be construed to mean registered bonds of the United States bearing interest; and any reference to the value of such bonds shall be construed to mean the par value, unless the market value is specified. (Sec. 5158, R. S.)

SEC. 75. Every association, before it shall be authorized to commence banking business, shall transfer and deliver to the Treasurer of the United States United States registered bonds, bearing interest, in the amounts following:

(1) Every association having a capital not exceeding two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, an amount equal to not less than one-tenth of the capital stock.

(2) Every association having a capital in excess of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, an amount not less than twenty-five thousand dollars.

The deposit of bonds made by each association shall be increased as its capital may be increased, so that every association shall at all times have on deposit with the Treasurer United States bonds to the amount herein prescribed. (Secs. 5159 and 5160, R. S.; Act July 12, 1882, sec. 8, and Act June 20, 1874, sec. 4. Sec. 5160, R. S.)

SEC. 76. The bonds transferred to the Treasurer of the United States under the requirements of the preceding section shall be received by him upon deposit, and shall be by him safely kept in his office, until they shall be otherwise disposed of, in pursuance of the provisions of this act; and such bonds shall be held exclusively as security for the circulating notes of the association by which they were transferred, until such notes are redeemed, except as otherwise provided. (Secs. 5159 and 5167, R. S.)

SEC. 77. To facilitate a compliance with section seventy-five of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to receive from any association, and cancel, any United States coupon bonds, and to issue in lieu thereof registered bonds of like amount, bearing a like rate of interest, and having the same time to run. (Sec. 5161, R. S.)

SEC. 78. All transfers of United States bonds made by any association under the provisions of this act shall be made to the Treasurer of the United States in trust for the association, with a memorandum written or printed on each bond, and signed by the cashier, or some other officer of the association making the deposit. A receipt shall be given to the association by the Comptroller of the Currency, or by a clerk appointed by him for that purpose, stating that the bond is held in trust for the association on behalf of which the transfer is made, and as security for the redemption and payment of any circulating notes that have been or may be delivered to such association. (Sec. 5162, R. S.)

SEC. 79. No assignment or transfer by the Treasurer of the United States of any bond deposited with him under the provisions of this act shall be valid unless countersigned by the Comptroller of the Currency. Every such transfer or assignment, immediately after it is so countersigned, shall be entered in a book to be kept by the Comptroller in his office for that purpose. The Comptroller shall state in such entry the name of the association from the account of which the transfer is made, the name of the party to whom it is made, the par value, and the numerical designation and the denomination of each bond transferred. (Secs. 5162 and 5163, R. S.)

SEC. 80. The Comptroller of the Currency, immediately upon countersigning and entering any transfer or assignment by the Treasurer of the United States of any bonds belonging to a national banking association, shall advise by mail the association from the account of which the transfer is made of the kind and numerical designation of the bonds and the amount thereof so transferred. (Sec. 5164, R. S.)

SEC. 81. The Comptroller of the Currency shall have at all times, during office hours, access to the books of the Treasurer of the United States for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any transfer or assignment of bonds presented for his countersignature; and the Treasurer shall have the like access to the book mentioned in section seventy-nine of this act, to ascertain the correctness of the entries in the same. The Comptroller shall also have like access to the bonds on deposit with the Treasurer, to ascertain their amount and condition. (Sec. 5165, R. S.)

SEC. 82. Every association having bonds deposited in the office of the Treasurer of the United States shall, once or oftener in each fiscal year, examine and compare the bonds pledged by the association with the books of the Comptroller of the Currency and with the accounts of the association, and, if they are found correct, shall execute to the Treasurer a certificate setting forth the different kinds and the amounts thereof, and that the same are in the possession and custody of the Treasurer at the date of the certificate. Such examination shall be made at such time or times, during the ordinary business hours, as the Treasurer and the Comptroller, respectively, may select. It may be made by an officer or agent of such association, duly appointed in writing for that purpose; and the certificate before mentioned, when made by such officer or agent, shall be of the same force and validity as if executed by the president or cashier. A duplicate of such certificate, signed by the Treasurer, shall be retained by the association. (Sec. 5166, R. S.)

SEC. 83. If any association fail to appoint one of its officers or an agent to make the examination required by the preceding section, or if such officer or agent fail to attend at the time designated, or to make the examination, or to execute the certificate specified, the examination may be made and the certificate may be executed by some person designated for the purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury. And such person, upon a faithful performance of such duties, shall be entitled to recover from the association reasonable compensation therefor, to be fixed by the Comptroller of the Currency.

SEC. 84. The Comptroller of the Currency shall give to each association powers of attorney to receive and appropriate to its own use the interest on the bonds which it has so transferred to the Treasurer. But such powers of attorney shall not apply to any portion of such interest withheld in pursuance of any provision of this act; and they shall become wholly inoperative whenever such association fails to redeem its circulating notes, or is placed in the hands of a receiver or other agent of the Comptroller in accordance with law. (Sec. 5167, R. S.)

SEC. 85. Whenever the market or cash value of any bonds deposited with the Treasurer by any association is reduced below the rate of one hundred dollars for ninety dollars of the circulation issued for the same, the Comptroller of the Currency may demand of the association and receive from it the amount of such depreciation in other United States bonds at cash value, or in money, to be deposited with the Treasurer as long as such depreciation continues. (Sec. 5167, R. S.)

SEC. 86. The Comptroller of the Currency, upon the terms prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, may permit an exchange to be made of any bonds deposited with the Treasurer by any association for other bonds of the United States authorized to be received as security for circulating notes, if he is of the opinion that such an exchange can be made without prejudice to the United States. (Sec. 5167, R. S.)

SEC. 87. Upon a deposit of bonds as prescribed by section seventy-five of this act, the association making the same shall be entitled to receive from the Comptroller of the Currency circulating notes of different denominations, in blank, registered and countersigned as hereinafter provided, equal in amount to ninety per centum of the current market value, not exceeding par, of the United States bonds so transferred and delivered; but at no time shall the total amount of circulating notes supplied to any association exceed ninety per centum of its capital stock at such time actually paid in. (Sec. 5171, R. S., and Act July 12, 1882, sec. 10.)

SEC. 88. In order to furnish suitable notes for circulation, the Comptroller of the Currency, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall cause plates and dies to be engraved, in the best manner to guard against counterfeiting and fraudulent alterations, and shall have printed therefrom and numbered, such quantity of circulating notes, in blank, of the denominations of five dollars, ten dollars, twenty dollars, fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, and one thousand dollars, as may be required to supply the associations entitled to receive the same. Such notes shall bear upon their face the statement that they are secured by United States bonds deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, which statement shall be attested by the written or engraved signatures of the Treasurer and Register and by the imprint of the seal of the Treasury. They shall likewise express upon their face the promise of the association to which they are supplied to pay the amount thereof on demand; and for the proper attestation of this promise blank spaces shall be left for the signatures of the president or vice-president and the cashier. There shall also be printed upon such notes, under such regulations as the Secretary shall prescribe, the charter number of the association to which they are supplied; and they shall bear such devices and statements other than those herein specified, and shall be in such form as the Secretary shall, by regulation, direct. (Sec. 5172, R. S., and Act June 20, 1874, sec. 5.)

SEC. 89. The plates, dies, bed-pieces, and other appliances prepared for the printing of the national-bank notes, together with the original engraved plates, the cylinders and other material used in the preparation thereof, shall be kept in suitable vaults in the building of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. They shall be at all times, when not in actual use, under the control and direction of the Comptroller of the Currency, but in the special charge of a custodian, who shall be responsible for the safe keeping of such appliances as come into his charge, and for the proper issue and due return, the same day, of every piece taken out for use. The custodian shall keep an accurate record of every such issue and return, and at the end of each calendar month he shall transmit to the Comptroller of the Currency a report in such form as that officer may prescribe. (Secs. 5173 and 5174, R. S.)

SEC. 90. The custodian shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall be entitled to a salary of three thousand dollars a year. He shall give to the United States a bond in the penalty of twenty-five thousand dollars, with not less than two responsible sureties to be approved by the Secretary, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties.

SEC. 91. Once in each year the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause to be examined all the plates, dies, bed-pieces, cylinders, and other appliances used in the preparation of the national-bank notes, and a correct list to be taken thereof, and such list to be compared with the list made the previous year, and all differences to be noted and accounted for, and a full report made to him of such examination and the results.

SEC. 92. All material prepared for or used in the printing of the notes of associations which are in liquidation, or have closed business, and all other material not required for present or future use, shall be destroyed, under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Comptroller of the Currency and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 93. The examination and destruction provided for by the two preceding sections shall be conducted by a committee of three persons, one to be selected by the Comptroller of the Currency, one by the Treasurer of the United States, and one by the Register of the Treasury, all subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such committee shall perform its duties under regulations to be established by the Secretary, and each member thereof shall be entitled to such compensation as may be provided by such regulations. But no person appointed for this duty shall hold any position or office under either of the officers charged with the selection of the committee, nor shall the same person be twice appointed upon the committee.

SEC. 94. The expenses of such examinations and destructions shall be paid out of any appropriation made by Congress for the special examination of national banking associations and bank-note plates.

SEC. 95. Every association shall reimburse the Treasury the cost of engraving the plates required for printing its circulating notes. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 3, and Act June 12, 1882, sec. 6.)

SEC. 96. Upon deposit with the Treasurer of the United States of any United States bonds, bearing interest, payable in gold, in the manner prescribed for other associations, it shall be lawful for the Comptroller of the Currency to furnish to any association organized under section fifty-two of this act circulating notes of different denominations, but none of them of less than five dollars, and not exceeding in amount ninety per centum of the par value of the bonds deposited, which notes shall express the promise of the association to pay them, upon presentation at the office at which they are issued, in gold coin of the United States, and they shall be so redeemable. (Sec. 5185, R. S.)

SEC. 97. After any association receiving circulating notes under this act has caused its promise to pay such notes on demand to be signed by its president or vice-president and cashier, in such manner as to make them obligatory promissory notes payable on demand, at its place of business, such association may issue and circulate the same as money. And the same shall be received at par in all parts of the United States in payment of taxes, excises, public lands, and all other dues to the United States, except duties on imports; and also for all salaries and other debts and demands owing by the United States to individuals, corporations, and associations within the United States, except interest on the public debt, and in redemption of the national currency. They may also be counted as a part of the lawful-money reserve which any association is required to keep on hand against its deposits; but they shall not be available for deposit with the Treasurer of the United States in the redemption fund of five per centum upon circulation. (Sec. 5182, R. S.)

SEC. 98. The cashier, with the approval of the board of directors, which approval shall be entered upon the directors' minutes, and certified to the Comptroller of the Currency, may appoint a deputy to affix the cashier's signature to the circulating notes of the association. But such notes shall not be signed by any assistant or acting cashier.

SEC. 99. No national banking association shall issue any notes or other obligations to circulate as money, except the circulating notes authorized by this act. (Sec. 5183, R. S.)

SEC. 100. The Comptroller of the Currency shall receive, when delivered to him in sums of one hundred dollars or any multiple thereof, worn or mutilated circulating notes issued by any association, and shall furnish to the association other blank circulating notes to an equal amount in place thereof; and, also, upon due proof of the destruction of any circulating notes, he shall deliver to the association by which such notes were issued other blank circulating notes to an equal amount. (Sec. 1584, R. S.)

SEC. 101. The Comptroller of the Currency shall establish regulations for registering in proper books all worn or mutilated notes received by him and all notes which have been redeemed or surrendered to be canceled, and he shall cause all such notes, after identification and registration, to be destroyed by maceration, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and in the presence of four persons, one to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, one by the Comptroller of the Currency, one by the Treasurer of the United States, and one by the association interested in such destruction. A certificate of such destruction, signed by the parties witnessing the same, shall be made in the books of the Comptroller, and a duplicate thereof shall be by him forwarded to the association the notes of which are thus destroyed. If any association shall fail to appoint some person to witness the destruction of its notes, the Comptroller may designate some person to act as witness for it; and the person so appointed shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for such services. (Sec. 5184, R. S., and Act June 23, 1874.)

SEC. 102. The Comptroller of the Currency may direct any bonds to be returned, in sums of not less than one thousand dollars, to the association which transferred the same, upon the surrender to him and the cancellation of a proportionate amount of its circulating notes. But no such return of bonds shall be made if thereby the remaining bonds which the association has on deposit would be reduced below the amount required by section seventy-five of this act, or below the amount required, either at par or in cash value, to secure the unsurrendered circulating notes of the association. (Sec. 5167, R. S.)

SEC. 103. Any association may take up the bonds deposited by it with the Treasurer of the United States, in excess of the amount it is required to keep on deposit, if no circulating notes have been issued thereon, or when notes have been issued thereon, if a proportionate amount of such notes are surrendered to the Comptroller of the Currency for cancellation without replacement. Any association closing up its business and dissolving its organization may take up, in sums of not less than one thousand dollars, the bonds deposited by it, upon surrendering to the Comptroller a proportionate amount of its circulating notes; and in like manner any association which reduces its capital stock may take up the bonds it has on deposit in excess of the amount required by section seventy-five of this act. (Sec. 5160, R. S.)

SEC. 104. Every association shall at all times keep and have on deposit in the Treasury of the United States, in lawful money of the United States, a sum equal to five per centum of its circulating notes, to be held and used for the redemption of such notes. And when the circulating notes of any associations, assorted or unassorted, shall be presented for redemption to the Treasurer of the United States, in sums of one thousand dollars or any multiple thereof, the same shall be redeemed in United States notes, or, at the option of the Treasurer, in coin of equal current value with such United States notes. Upon the request of the person presenting any national-bank notes for redemption, the Treasurer may, if convenient, pay the same in gold or silver coin certificates. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 3.)

SEC. 105. All notes redeemed by the Treasurer of the United States under the preceding section shall be charged by him to the respective associations issuing the same, and he shall notify them severally, on the first day of each month, or oftener, at his discretion, of the amount of such redemptions; and whenever such redemptions for any association shall amount to the sum of five hundred dollars, such association so notified shall forthwith deposit with the Treasurer in United States notes, or in such coin or coin certificates as the Treasurer may accept as equivalent thereto, a sum equal to the amount of its circulating notes so redeemed. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 3.)

SEC. 106. When such redemptions have been reimbursed as required, the circulating notes redeemed shall be forwarded to the respective associations by which they were issued; but if any of such notes are worn, mutilated, defaced, or otherwise unfit for use, they shall be forwarded to the Comptroller of the Currency to be destroyed and replaced. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 3.)

SEC. 107. Any association desiring to withdraw any of its circulating notes, may, upon the deposit of lawful money with the Treasurer of the United States, in sums of not less than four thousand five hundred dollars, take up the bonds which it has transferred to the Treasurer for the security of such circulating notes, in the order in which it makes such deposit of lawful money; and the outstanding notes of such association, to an amount equal to the lawful money deposited, shall be redeemed at the Treasury of the United States, and destroyed, as prescribed in this chapter. But the bonds on deposit to secure the circulating notes of such association shall not be reduced below the amount required by section seventy-five of this act. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 4, and Act July 12, 1882, sec. 8.)

SEC. 108. Not more than three millions of dollars of lawful money shall be deposited during any calendar month for the purpose of withdrawing circulating notes as provided in the preceding section. But this provision shall not apply where bonds on deposit with the Treasurer are called by the Secretary of the Treasury for redemption. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 9.)

SEC. 109. Every association which shall go into voluntary liquidation shall, within six months from the date of the vote to liquidate its affairs, deposit with the Treasurer of the United States lawful money of the United States sufficient to redeem all its outstanding circulation. The Treasurer shall execute duplicate receipts for money thus deposited, stating the amount received by him and the purpose for which it has been received, and shall deliver one to the association and the other to the Comptroller of the Currency; and the money shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and placed to the credit of such association upon redemption account. (Sec. 5222, R. S.)

SEC. 110. Whenever a sufficient deposit of lawful money to redeem the outstanding circulation of an association proposing to close its business has been made, the bonds deposited by the association to secure payment of its notes shall be reassigned to it. And thereafter the association and its shareholders shall stand discharged from all liabilities upon the circulating notes, and those notes shall be redeemed at the Treasury of the United States. If any such association shall fail to make the deposit and take up its bonds for thirty days after the expiration of the time specified, the Comptroller of the Currency shall have power to sell, at public auction in New York City, the bonds pledged to secure the circulating notes of such association, and, after providing for the redemption and cancellation of such notes, and the necessary expenses of the sale, to pay over any balance remaining to the association or its legal representative. (Sec. 5224, R. S., as amended by Act February 18, 1875.)

SEC. 111. Whenever the Treasurer of the United States has redeemed any of the notes of an association which has commenced to close its affairs, he shall cause the notes to be mutilated and charged to the redemption account of the association; and all notes so redeemed by the Treasurer shall, every three months, be certified to and destroyed by maceration, in the manner prescribed in section one hundred and one of this act. (Sec. 5225, R. S.)

SEC. 112. The provisions of the three preceding sections shall apply also to associations of which the corporate existence expires, and which do not extend their succession, the deposit of lawful money to be made within six months from the expiration of such corporate existence. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 7.)

SEC. 113. An association which is in good faith winding up its business for the purpose of consolidating with another association shall not be required to deposit lawful money for its outstanding circulation; but its bonds on deposit and its outstanding circulating notes shall be reported by the association with which it is in process of consolidation. (Sec. 5223, R. S.)

SEC. 114. When any association shall extend the period of its succession, the circulating notes issued to it prior to such extension shall be redeemed at the Treasury of the United States, as provided in section one hundred and four of this act; and such notes when redeemed shall be forwarded to the Comptroller of the Currency and destroyed. From time to time as such notes are redeemed new circulating notes shall be supplied to the association. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 6.)

SEC. 115. Any gain that may arise from the failure to present for redemption the circulating notes of any association shall inure to the benefit of the United States (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 6.)

SEC. 116. All notes of national banking associations redeemed at the Treasury of the United States shall be canceled, except when returned to the association by which they were issued, as provided by section one hundred and six of this act. (Sec. 5223, R. S.)

SEC. 117. All notes of national banking associations, worn, defaced, mutilated, or otherwise unfit for circulation, when received by an assistant treasurer, or by any designated depository of the United States, shall be forwarded to the Treasurer of the United States for redemption as provided in section one hundred and four of this act. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 3.)

SEC. 118. Whenever any association fails to redeem in the lawful money of the United States any of its circulating notes, upon demand of payment duly made during the usual hours of business, at the office of such association, the holder may cause the same to be protested, in one package, by a notary public, unless the president or cashier of the association offers to waive demand and notice of the protest, and, in pursuance of such offer, makes, signs, and delivers to the party making such demand an admission in writing, stating the time of the demand, the amount demanded, and the fact of the non-payment thereof. The notary public, on making such protest, or upon receiving such admission, shall forthwith forward such admission or notice of protest to the Comptroller of the Currency, retaining a copy thereof. If, however, satisfactory proof is produced to the notary public that the payment of the notes demanded is restrained by order of any court of competent jurisdiction, he shall not protest the same. (Sec. 5226, R. S.)

SEC. 119. All fees for protesting the notes of any association shall be paid by the person procuring the protest to be made, and such association shall be liable therefor; but no part of the proceeds of any bonds deposited by such association shall be applied to the payment of such fees, nor shall such fees be preferred to other claims against an insolvent association. When the holder of any notes causes more than one note or package to be protested on the same day he shall not acquire a claim for more than one protest fee; and no fees shall in any case be allowed for protesting the notes of any association after it has closed its doors in consequence of insolvency. (Secs. 5226 and 5238, R. S.)

SEC. 120. On receiving notice that any national banking association has failed to redeem any of its circulating notes the Comptroller of the Currency, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, may appoint a special agent, of whose appointment immediate notice shall be given to such association, who shall immediately proceed to ascertain whether it has refused to pay its circulating notes in the lawful money of the United States, when demanded, and shall report to the Comptroller the fact so ascertained. (Sec. 5227, R. S.)

SEC. 121. If from the protest, and from the report made by the agent appointed under the preceding section, the Comptroller of the Currency is satisfied that such association has refused to pay its circulating notes and is in default, he shall, within thirty days after he has received such report, declare the bonds deposited by such association forfeited to the United States, and they shall thereupon be so forfeited. (Sec. 5227, R. S.)

SEC. 122. Immediately upon declaring the bonds of an association forfeited for non-payment of its notes the Comptroller of the Currency shall give notice, in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury, by general rules or otherwise, shall direct, to the holders of the circulating notes of such association to present them for payment at the Treasury of the United States, and the same when presented shall be paid in lawful money of the United States; whereupon the Comptroller shall cause the bonds pledged by such association, or so much of them as may be necessary to redeem its outstanding notes, to be sold at public auction in the city of New York, after giving thirty days' notice of such sale to the association. (Secs. 5229 and 5230, R. S.)

SEC. 123. When all the bonds of an association have been sold, as provided in the preceding section, and the proceeds thereof are insufficient for the payment of the outstanding notes of the association, the United States shall have a paramount lien upon all the assets of the association for the amount of the deficiency; and such deficiency shall be made good out of such assets in preference to any and all claims whatsoever, except the necessary costs and expenses of administering the same. (Sec. 5230, R. S.)

SEC. 124. The Comptroller of the Currency, if he deems it for the interest of the United States, may sell at private sale any of the bonds of an association shown to have made default in paying its notes, and receive therefor either money or the circulating notes of the association. But no such bonds shall be sold by private sale for less than par, nor for less than the market value thereof at the time of sale; and no sales of any such bonds, either public or private, shall be complete until the transfer of the bonds shall have been made with the formalities prescribed by section seventy-nine of this act. (Sec. 5231, R. S.)

SEC. 125. Every association the circulating notes of which shall be redeemed by the Treasurer of the United States, as provided in section one hundred and four of this act, and every association making any deposit of lawful money with the Treasurer for reducing its circulation, shall be assessed the cost of transporting and assorting its notes, and such assessment shall be in proportion to the circulating notes redeemed, and shall be charged to the fund deposited with the Treasurer under the requirement of said section one hundred and four, and every association which shall make a deposit of lawful money for retiring its circulation in full shall, at the time of such deposit, be assessed, for the cost of transporting and redeeming its notes then outstanding, a sum equal to the average cost of the redemption of national-bank notes during the preceding year, and shall thereupon pay such assessment. (Act June 20, 1874, sec. 3, and Act July 12, 1852, sec. 8.)

SEC. 126. The Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time make such regulations respecting the perpetuation of the evidence of the payment of circulating notes presented at the Treasury of the United States for redemption as may seem to him proper. (Sec. 5232, R. S.)

CHAPTER VI.—THE BANKING BUSINESS.

SEC. 127. The usual business of each association shall be transacted at an office or banking house located in the place specified in its organization certificate. But, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency first obtained, any association may have in such place more than one office for receiving deposits, paying checks, and buying and selling exchange; and in every such case the association shall conform to the requirements of the Comptroller as to the clerical force to be employed and the accounts to be kept at and for each such office, and as to the extra compensation for examinations thereof. (Sec. 5190, R. S.)

SEC. 128. For the purposes of this act the cities of Albany, Baltimore, Boston, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Louisville, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Omaha, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Saint Joseph, San Francisco, and Washington shall be known as reserve cities; and the cities of Chicago, New York, and Saint Louis shall be known as central reserve cities. (Sec. 5191, R. S.)

SEC. 129. Upon the application, in writing, of three-fourths in number of the associations located in any city of the United States having fifty thousand inhabitants, the Comptroller of the Currency shall have authority to designate such city a reserve city. (Act March 3, 1887.)

SEC. 130. Upon the application, in writing, of three-fourths in number of the associations located in any city of the United States having two hundred thousand inhabitants, the Comptroller of the Currency shall have authority, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to designate such city a central reserve city. But if any city named in section one hundred and twenty-eight of this act as a reserve city shall be designated a central reserve city, it shall thereafter be known only as a central reserve city. (Act March 3, 1887.)

SEC. 131. Every association in a reserve city, or in a central reserve city, shall at all times have on hand lawful money of the United States equal to at least twenty-five per centum of its deposits and other liabilities payable on demand, and every other association shall at all times have on hand lawful money of the United States equal to at least fifteen per centum of its deposits and its liabilities so payable. But no association is required to keep on hand lawful money on account of Government deposits, except as provided in section one hundred and thirty-six of this act. (Sec. 5191, R. S., and Act March 3, 1887.)

SEC. 132. Whenever the lawful money of any association shall be below the amount required by the preceding section, such association shall not impair its cash resources by making any new loans or discounts, otherwise than by discounting or purchasing bills of exchange payable at sight or on demand, nor make any dividend of its profits until the required proportion between its deposits and its lawful money of the United States has been restored. (Sec. 5191, R. S.)

SEC. 133. Whenever the lawful-money reserve of any association is found to be below the amount required, the Comptroller of the Currency may notify the association to make good its reserve; and if the association shall fail so to do for thirty days after such notice, the Comptroller, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, may appoint a receiver to wind up its business. (Sec. 5191, R. S.)

SEC. 134. Three-fifths of the reserve of fifteen per centum required by section one hundred and thirty-one of this act may consist of cash balances due from associations in reserve cities or in central reserve cities; and one-half of the lawful money reserve of associations in reserve cities may consist of cash balances due from associations in central reserve cities. But every association with which any part of the lawful-money reserve of any other association is kept shall first be approved for that purpose by the Comptroller of the Currency. (Secs. 5192 and 5195, R. S.; Act June 20, 1874, and Act March 3, 1887, sec. 2.)

SEC. 135. Certificates representing specie or lawful money specially deposited by the members of any clearing-house association for the purpose of settling balances between them shall, when owned and held by any association which is a member of such clearing-house, be deemed to be lawful money within the meaning of section one hundred and thirty-one of this act. (Sec. 5192, R. S.)

SEC. 136. Any association designated by the Secretary of the Treasury as a depository of public money may be required by the Secretary to keep on hand on account of such deposits such reserve fund as he may deem expedient. But such deposits shall not be counted in estimating the reserve required under section one hundred and thirty-one of this act.

SEC. 137. The Secretary of the Treasury may receive, at the Treasury or at any sub-treasury, from any national banking association United States notes on deposit, without interest, in sums of not less than ten thousand dollars, and issue certificates therefor in such form as he may prescribe, in denominations of not less than five thousand dollars, payable on demand in United States notes at the place where the deposits were made. The notes so deposited shall not be counted as part of the lawful-money reserve of the association; but the certificates issued therefor may be counted as such, and may be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States as a part of the five per cent. fund for the redemption of the circulating notes of the association. (Sec. 5193, R. S.)

SEC. 138. The power conferred on the Secretary of the Treasury by the preceding section shall not be exercised so as to create any expansion or contraction of the currency. And United States notes for which the certificates are issued under that section, or other United States notes of like amount, shall be held as special deposits in the Treasury and used only for the redemption of such certificates. (Sec. 5194, R. S.)

SEC. 139. No association shall be a member of any clearing-house in which gold certificates issued under the authority of the act of July twelfth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and silver certificates shall not be receivable in the settlement of clearing-house balances. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 12.)

SEC. 140. Every association shall take and receive at par, for any debt or liability to it, any and all notes or bills issued by any lawfully organized national banking association. This provision shall not apply to any association organized for the purpose of issuing notes payable in gold; but every such association shall receive at par in the payment of debts the gold notes of every other such association which at the time of such payment is redeeming its circulating notes in gold coin of the United States. (Secs. 5186 and 5196, R. S.)

SEC. 141. No association shall at any time, or for any purpose, pay out or put in circulation the notes of any bank or banking association which are not at such time receivable, at par, on deposit, and in payment of debts by the association so paying out or circulating them; nor shall any association knowingly pay out or put in circulation any notes issued by any bank or banking association which at the time of such paying out or putting in circulation is not redeeming its circulating notes in lawful money of the United States. (Sec. 5206, R. S.)

SEC. 142. No association shall, either directly or indirectly, pledge or hypothecate any of its notes of circulation, for the purpose of procuring money to be paid in on its capital stock, or to be used in its banking operations, or otherwise; nor shall any association use its circulating notes, or any part thereof, in any manner or form, to create or increase its capital stock. (Sec. 5203, R. S.)

SEC. 143. No association shall make any loan or discount on the security of the shares of its own capital stock, nor be the purchaser or holder of any such shares, unless such security or purchase shall be necessary to prevent loss upon a debt previously contracted in good faith; and stock so purchased or acquired shall be sold at public or private sale within six months from the time of such purchase or acquisition or, in default thereof, a receiver may be appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency to close up the business of the association. (Sec. 5201, R. S.)

SEC. 144. No association shall, during the time it shall continue its banking operations, withdraw, or permit to be withdrawn, either in the form of dividends or otherwise, any portion of its capital stock. But nothing herein shall prevent the reduction of the capital stock of the association under section twenty-seven of this act. (Sec. 5204, R. S.)

SEC. 145. Every association of which the capital stock is not paid up as required by law, and every association of which the capital stock may become impaired by losses or otherwise, shall, within three months after receiving notice thereof from the Comptroller of the Currency, pay the deficiency in the capital stock, by assessment upon the shareholders in proportion to the shares held by each; and the Treasurer of the United States, upon notice from the Comptroller, shall withhold the interest upon all bonds held by him in trust for any such association until otherwise notified by the Comptroller. If any such association shall fail to pay up its capital stock and

SEC. 146. If any shareholder shall neglect or refuse to pay within two months any assessment made by the directors for the purpose of restoring impaired capital, the directors shall cause a sufficient amount of the capital stock of such shareholder to be sold at public auction to make good the deficiency, and the balance, if any, shall be returned to such delinquent shareholder. Ten days' notice of such sale shall be posted in the office of the association, and shall be published in a newspaper of the city or town where the association is located. (Act June 30, 1876.)

SEC. 147. No association shall take, either in its own name, or in the name of any person or corporation for its benefit, any mortgage or lien upon real estate as security for a contemporaneous loan or for future advances made or to be made by it; nor shall any association purchase or hold any bond, note, or evidence of debt so secured, or the shares or debentures of any company or corporation dealing in real-estate securities.

SEC. 148. The provisions of the preceding section shall not apply in either of the following cases:

(1) The discount for an indorser in the ordinary course of business of a bona fide bill of exchange or negotiable promissory note having not more than four months to run, which is deemed by the board of directors a good asset without reference to any mortgage or lien collateral thereto.

(2) The taking of a bill or note so secured which has not more than four months to run, when the same is assigned to the association, in good faith, for the purpose of procuring the extension of a debt previously incurred.

(3) The taking of a mortgage or lien on real estate, or any obligation secured thereby, for the purpose of securing a debt previously contracted in good faith.

But in all the cases specified in this section a full record of the transaction, and of the reasons therefor, shall be entered upon the directors' minutes, and shall be attested by the signatures of a majority of the board.

SEC. 149. Nothing in this act shall be held to invalidate the title of any association to any bonds, debentures, or stocks acquired by it, or to any bill, note, or evidence of debt discounted by it, nor to render any mortgage or lien upon real estate invalid, nor to deprive any association or its assigns of the title to or possession of any real estate, or of any of the remedies to which mortgagees or persons holding liens upon real estate are entitled by the laws of the State, Territory, or District in which the property is situated.

SEC. 150. Every association offending against the provisions of section one hundred and forty-seven of this act shall be liable to a penalty for each infraction at the rate of one per centum per month upon the amount involved therein during the entire period that such obligations or securities are held by it, or by any person or corporation for its benefit.

SEC. 151. The total liabilities to any association, of any person, firm, company, or corporation, for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a firm or company the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed one-tenth part of the capital stock actually paid in. But the discount of bills of exchange drawn in good faith against actually existing values, shall not be considered as money borrowed by the drawers or indorsers thereof; nor shall the discount of commercial paper actually owned by the persons for whom such discount is made be regarded as money borrowed by the makers of such paper; but in all such cases the limitation herein specified shall apply to the person, firm, company, or corporation, for whose use or benefit, directly or indirectly, any such loans or discounts are made. (Sec. 5200, R. S.)

SEC. 152. The prohibition of the preceding section shall not apply to loans made upon convertible collateral security, of which the cash market value is not less than the amount borrowed thereon, if neither the value nor the convertibility of the security is dependent upon the solvency or the success of any party to the loan. But the total liabilities of any person, firm, or corporation to an association, including loans on collaterals, shall at no time exceed twenty per centum upon the aggregate of its paid-in capital stock and surplus fund.

SEC. 153. Any association which shall make any loan contrary to the provisions of section one hundred and fifty-one of this act shall be subject to a penalty at the rate of one per centum per month on the entire amount of such loan for the period for which it shall have been made, and during which it shall continue.

SEC. 154. No association shall at any time be indebted, or in any way liable, to an amount exceeding the amount of its capital stock at such time actually paid in and remaining undiminished by losses or otherwise, except on account of demands of the nature following:

(1) Notes of circulation.

(2) Moneys deposited with or collected by the association.

(3) Bills of exchange or drafts drawn against money actually on deposit to the credit of the association or due thereto.

(4) Liabilities to the stockholders of the association for dividends and reserved profits. (Sec. 5202 R. S.)

SEC. 155. All losses sustained by any association shall be promptly charged against its undivided profits, and like charge shall be made of all bad debts; and no association shall at any time make or publish any statement of its condition which does not reflect the deduction from its undivided profits of all losses incurred up to that time, and of all bad debts.

SEC. 156. The directors of any association, at stated periods, to be fixed by the by-laws and reported to the Comptroller of the Currency, may declare dividends out of its net earnings, or any portion thereof, except the portion required by section one hundred and fifty-eight of this act to be passed to surplus account; but no dividend shall be made by any association, while it continues its banking operations, to an amount greater than its net profits then on hand, after deducting all losses and bad debts.

SEC. 157. In all cases before any dividend is declared or paid the directors shall ascertain by personal examination that all losses and bad debts have been charged off and that the association otherwise is in a good condition to make such distribution of net earnings; and every director shall be held to have assented to any dividend declared by the board, unless he shall at once notify the Comptroller of the Currency of his dissent.

SEC. 158. Every association shall accumulate a surplus fund equal to at least twenty per centum of its capital stock, by appropriating thereto ten per centum or more of its net profits as ascertained by deducting from the gross earnings and profits all bad debts as defined in section one hundred and sixty-six of this act, and all losses, expenses, and taxes.

SEC. 159. The ascertainment of net profits shall be made by the officers and accountants of the association, under the supervision of the board of directors, at half-yearly intervals, and every time a dividend is to be declared. And whenever the surplus fund of any association is less than twenty per centum of its capital stock, the association shall not declare or pay any dividend until after the ascertainment herein required shall have been made, and until at least ten per centum of the net profits of the last half year or shorter period, if dividends are oftener paid, has been carried to the credit of surplus-fund account.

SEC. 160. No part of the surplus fund shall be withdrawn, in the form of dividends or otherwise, except so much thereof as may be in excess of the amount specified in section one hundred and fifty-eight of this act.

SEC. 161. It shall be unlawful for any officer, clerk, or agent of any national banking association to certify, accept, or otherwise render the bank liable for any check drawn upon the association, unless the person or company drawing the check has on deposit with the association, at the time such check is certified, an amount of money equal to the amount specified therein. Any check so certified by a duly authorized officer shall be a good and valid obligation against the association; but for any act of any officer, clerk, or agent, in violation of this section, the Comptroller of the Currency may assess a penalty upon such association not exceeding one per centum of the amount so unlawfully certified. (Sec. 5208, R. S.)

SEC. 162. The prohibition of the preceding section shall not apply to the certification of checks drawn by regular customers of an association to meet drafts upon them to which bills of lading or transportation receipts for produce or marketable commodities or securities are attached, if these, or other securities equally valuable and convertible, are held by the certifying bank until the overdraft is made good.

SEC. 163. Any association may take, receive, reserve, and charge, on any loan or discount made, or upon any note, bill of exchange, or other evidence of debt, interest at the rate allowed by the laws of the State, Territory, or District where the bank is located, and no more, except that where by the laws of any State a different rate is limited for banks of issue organized under State laws, the rate so limited shall be allowed for associations organized or existing in any such State under this act. When no rate is fixed by the laws of the State, Territory, or District, and no agreement is made in advance with the borrower, an association may take, receive, reserve, or charge a rate not exceeding seven per centum, and such interest may be taken in advance, reckoning the days for which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt has to run. The purchase, discount, or sale of a bona fide bill of exchange, payable at another place than the place of such purchase, discount, or sale, at not more than the current rate of exchange for sight drafts in addition to the interest, shall not be considered as taking or receiving a greater rate of interest. (Sec. 5197, R. S.)

SEC. 164. The taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section, when knowingly done, shall be deemed a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of the debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon. (Sec. 5198, R. S.)

SEC. 165. In case a rate of interest greater than is allowed by this act has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover back from the association taking or receiving the same, in an action in the nature of an action of debt, twice the amount of the interest thus paid. But such action must be commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred. (Sec. 5198, R. S.)

SEC. 166. All debts due to any association, on which interest is past due and unpaid for a period of six months, shall be considered bad debts within the meaning of this act, unless the same are well secured or are in process of collection.

SEC. 167. The penalties authorized to be imposed by sections one hundred and fifty, one hundred and fifty-three, and one hundred and sixty-one of this act shall be assessed against the offending association by the Comptroller of the Currency, subject to an appeal to the Secretary of the Treasury; and in default of payment, the amount thereof shall be withheld by the Treasurer from the interest on the United States bonds deposited by such association to secure its circulating notes. In case any penalty in default shall amount to more than the interest due to such association at the next quarterly payment of interest on such bonds, the excess thereof, and the amount of other penalties in default, may be recovered from the association by suit instituted by the Comptroller, in his own name, in the United States district court for the district in which the association is located.

CHAPTER VII.—REPORTS AND EXAMINATIONS.

SEC. 168. Every association shall make to the Comptroller of the Currency, according to the form which may be prescribed by him, not less than five reports during each year, each verified by the oath or affirmation of the president, vice-president, or cashier of such association, and attested by the signatures of at least three other directors. Each such report shall exhibit, in detail and under appropriate heads, the resources and liabilities of the association making the same at the close of business on any past day specified by the Comptroller; and it shall be transmitted to the Comptroller within five days after the receipt of a request or requisition therefor from him. (Sec. 5211, R. S.)

SEC. 169. Each report made to the Comptroller of the Currency under the requirements of the preceding section shall, in the same form in which it is made to the Comptroller, be published, at the expense of the association by which it was made, in a newspaper published in the place where such association is established; and such proof of publication shall be furnished as may be required by the Comptroller. (Sec. 5211, R. S.)

SEC. 170. The Comptroller of the Currency shall have power to call for special reports from any particular association whenever, in his judgment, the same are necessary in order to a full and complete knowledge of its condition. (Sec. 5211, R. S.)

SEC. 171. In addition to the other reports required by this act each association shall report to the Comptroller of the Currency, within ten days after declaring any dividend, the amount of such dividend, the amount of net earnings in excess thereof, and such other facts touching the declaration of such dividend as the Comptroller shall prescribe. Such reports shall be attested by the oath of the president, vice-president, or cashier of the association. (Sec. 5212, R. S.)

SEC. 172. Any association failing to make and transmit any report required by this chapter shall be subject to a penalty of ten dollars for each day it delays so to do after the periods respectively mentioned, which penalty shall be assessed by the Comptroller of the Currency. Whenever any association delays or refuses to pay the penalty so assessed, the amount thereof shall be retained by the Treasurer of the United States, upon the order of the Comptroller, out of the interest, as it may become due to the association, on the bonds deposited to secure circulation. (Sec. 5213, R. S.)

SEC. 173. All savings banks or savings and trust companies organized under authority of any act of Congress shall make to the Comptroller of the Currency, and shall publish all the reports which national banking associations are required to make and publish under the provisions of this chapter, and shall be subject to the same penalties for failure to make or publish such reports as are herein provided; which penalties may be collected by suit before any court of the United States in the district in which such savings banks or savings and trust companies may be located. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 6.)

SEC. 174. The Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall, as often as shall be deemed necessary or proper, appoint a suitable person or persons to make an examination of the affairs of every national banking association and of every savings bank or savings and trust company organized under authority of any act of Congress. Such persons shall be known as examiners of national banks, and each such examiner shall have power to make a thorough examination into all the affairs of the association, and, in doing so, to examine any of the officers and agents thereof, on oath, and shall make to the Comptroller a full and detailed report of the condition of the association. But no person shall be appointed to examine the affairs of any association in which, or adversely to which, he has any interest, personal or pecuniary. (Sec. 5240, R. S.)

SEC. 175. The Comptroller of the Currency may from time to time assign examiners of national banks to certain cities or districts, and require them to reside at some convenient place therein, or at a point readily accessible thereto, and to exercise a general inspection over all national banking associations therein. But no examiner shall visit or examine any bank except by direction, either general or special, of the Comptroller.

SEC. 176. Every person appointed an examiner of national banks shall take an oath that he will perform faithfully all the duties of his office, and preserve inviolate all confidences reposed in him by the Comptroller of the Currency, or by the officers or agents of any association; and that he will not divulge any information obtained by examination of any bank, except in his official reports or when called to testify in some competent court, nor use, directly or indirectly, such information or his official position or opportunities in any manner not authorized by this act.

SEC. 177. The compensation of persons appointed to examine associations not located in a reserve city or in a central reserve city, or in either of the States of Colorado, Oregon, California, and Nevada, or in any Territory, shall be an annual salary equal to two cents on every thousand dollars of aggregate liabilities of the associations examined during the year, and for each examination an additional sum as follows:

(1) For examining an association having a capital not exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, twenty dollars.

(2) For examining an association having a capital exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and not exceeding three hundred thousand dollars, twenty-five dollars.

(3) For examining an association having a capital exceeding three hundred thousand dollars and not exceeding five hundred thousand dollars, thirty dollars.

(4) For examining an association having a capital exceeding five hundred thousand dollars and not exceeding seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, forty dollars.

(5) For examining an association having a capital exceeding seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars and not exceeding one million dollars, fifty dollars.

(6) For examining an association having a capital of over one million dollars, sixty dollars, and one dollar additional for every one hundred thousand dollars of capital in excess of one million dollars. (Sec. 5240, R. S., as amended by Act February 19, 1875.)

SEC. 178. The compensation of persons appointed to examine associations located in any reserve city, or in any central reserve city, or in either of the States of Colorado, Oregon, California, and Nevada, or in any Territory, shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the recommendation of the Comptroller of the Currency. (Sec. 5240, R. S., as amended by Act February 19, 1875.)

SEC. 179. The fees for examining associations shall be assessed by the Comptroller of the Currency upon the respective associations so examined; and shall be paid by such associations. (Secs. 5283 and 5240, R. S.)

SEC. 180. The Comptroller of the Currency is authorized, whenever he may deem it useful, to cause examination to be made into the condition of any bank in the District of Columbia organized under act of Congress. The Comptroller, at his discretion, may report to Congress the results of such examination. The expense necessarily incurred in any such examination, and all expenses of any preliminary or other special examination into the condition of any association, wherever situated, shall be paid out of any appropriation made by Congress for special bank examinations; but this provision does not include special examinations of associations in liquidation. (Sec. 332, R. S.)

SEC. 181. No association shall be subject to any visitorial powers other than such as are authorized by this act, or are vested in the courts of justice. (Sec. 5241, R. S.)

CHAPTER VIII.—LIQUIDATION AND RECEIVERSHIP.

SEC. 182. When the corporate existence of an association, as fixed in section sixty-one of this act, expires, and is not extended, such corporate existence shall continue for the sole purpose of liquidating the affairs of the association until such affairs are finally closed. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 7.)

SEC. 183. Any association may go into liquidation and be closed by the vote of shareholders owning two-thirds of its stock. (Sec. 5220, R. S.)

SEC. 184. Whenever a vote to go into liquidation is taken the board of directors shall cause such fact to be certified, under the seal of the association, by its president or cashier, to the Comptroller of the Currency, and shall cause notice to be pubtished that the association is closing up its affairs, and that all its circulating notes and all other claims against it are to be presented for payment. Such publication shall be made for a period of two months in a newspaper published in the city of New York, and also in a newspaper published in the city or town in which the association is located. Like publication shall be made whenever an association is to be wound up by reason of the expiration of its corporate existence. (Sec. 5221, R. S., and Act July 12, 1882, sec. 7.)

SEC. 185. Every association in liquidation shall, on the first of January and first of July of each year, report the progress of such liquidation to the Comptroller of the Currency, in such form as he may require; and the Comptroller, if he deems it expedient, may cause such reports to be verified by a special examination at the expense of the association. The reports required by this section shall be made upon the oath or affirmation of the president, vice-president, or cashier of the association, and shall be attested by the signatures of at least three directors.

SEC. 186. Upon the request of any of the creditors or shareholders of an association in liquidation, the Comptroller of the Currency, after due hearing and inquiry, may appoint a receiver to wind up the affairs of such association. Such receiver, in addition to his other powers, shall have power to inquire into the doings of the persons previously conducting the liquidation, and to proceed against them for damages in case they shall appear to have wasted or misappropriated the assets, or to have failed in any other way to administer the affairs of the association prudently and equitably.

SEC. 187. When any association has gone into liquidation the individual liability of the shareholders may be enforced by any creditor of such association by bill in equity, in the nature of a creditor's bill, brought by such creditor on behalf of himself and of all other creditors of the association against the shareholders thereof in any court of the United States having original jurisdiction in equity for the district in which such association was located. (Act June 30, 1886, sec. 2.)

SEC. 188. Whenever an association has failed to pay its circulating notes on demand or to pay the current demands of its depositors, or is otherwise in a position of insolvency, it shall not be lawful for such association or any of its directors, officers, clerks, or agents to pay out any of its notes or other moneys, to receive deposits, to discount or purchase any notes or bills, or in any other way, directly or indirectly, to prosecute the business of banking. But nothing herein shall forbid an association to receive and safely keep money and other property belonging to it, or to redeem its circulating notes. (Sec. 2228, R. S.)

SEC. 189. All transfers of the property or credits of any association, and all acts which prevent or are intended to prevent the application of its assets in the manner prescribed in this chapter shall be utterly void, when made or done after an act of insolvency committed by such association, or in contemplation of insolvency, and with intent to defeat the pro-rata distribution of the assets of the association, or with intent to give any creditor preference over others. No attachment, injunction, or execution shall be issued against an insolvent association or its property before final judgment in any suit, action, or proceeding in any State, county, or municipal court; and where such process shall have been issued, it shall be immediately quashed or dissolved upon proof that the association was insolvent at the time of the issue thereof. (Sec. 5242, R. S.)

SEC. 190. In addition to the cases where the appointment of a receiver is especially provided for, a receiver of a national banking association may be appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency in either of the following cases:

(1) Whenever the Comptroller shall become satisfied, as specified in sections one hundred and eighteen and one hundred and twenty of this act, that the association has failed to pay its circulating notes and is in default.

(2) Whenever after due examination the Comptroller shall become satisfied that the association is insolvent.

(3) Whenever the association is dissolved, and its rights, privileges, and franchises are declared forfeited, as provided in section forty-six of this act.

(4) Whenever any creditor of the association who has obtained a judgment against it in any court of record makes application for the appointment of a receiver, and furnishes the certificate of the clerk of the court that such judgment has been rendered, and has remained unpaid for thirty days after the expiration of the time for taking an appeal or a writ of error. (Sec. 5234, R. S., and Act June 30, 1876, sec. 1.)

SEC. 191. The Comptroller of the Currency may require of the receiver appointed by him such bond and security as he may deem proper. (Sec. 5234, R. S.)

SEC. 192. The receiver appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency shall, under the direction of the Comptroller, take possession of the books, records, and assets of every description of the association, collect all debts, dues, and claims belonging to it, and, upon the order of a court of record of competent jurisdiction, may sell or compound all bad or doubtful debts, and, on a like order, may sell all the real and personal property of the association, on such terms as the court shall direct, and may, if necessary to pay the debts of the association, enforce the individual liability of the stockholders. The receiver shall pay over all money so obtained to the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the Comptroller; and he shall make report to the Comptroller of all his acts and proceedings. (Sec. 5234, R. S.)

SEC. 193. The Comptroller of the Currency, upon appointing a receiver, shall cause notice to be given, by advertisement in such newspapers as he may direct, for three consecutive months, calling on all persons who may have claims against the association to present the same, and to make legal proof thereof. (Sec. 5235, R. S.)

SEC. 194. From time to time, after full provision has been first made for refunding to the United States any deficiency in the funds specially devoted to redeeming the notes of the association, the Comptroller of the Currency shall make a ratable dividend of the money so paid over to him by the receiver on all such claims as may have been proved to his satisfaction or adjudicated in a court of competent jurisdiction; and, as the proceeds of the assets of the association are paid over to him, he shall make further dividends on all claims previously proved or adjudicated. But all expenses of any receivership shall be paid out of the assets of the association before final distribution of the proceeds thereof. (Secs. 5236 and 5238, R. S.)

SEC. 195. Whenever the assets of an insolvent association are exhausted and its affairs are wound up, the receiver, under instructions from the Comptroller of the Currency, may apply to the United States circuit court for the district in which the association was located, for a final discharge from further accountability; and if it shall appear that he has well and faithfully administered the trust, and that there are no further assets to be realized, the court shall have power to grant him a discharge and to require the cancellation and surrender of his bond or bonds; and thereupon both the receiver and the Comptroller of the Currency shall stand forever discharged from all further accountability for the debts and obligations of such association.

SEC. 196. When any person appointed receiver of an association is removed from such receivership by the Comptroller of the Currency, he may apply to the circuit court of the United States for the district in which such association was located to grant him a discharge from further accountability, and to cause his bond, or bonds, to be canceled and surrendered; and thereupon such court shall have power to summon the Comptroller of the Currency to show cause why such petition should not be granted and, after due hearing and investigation, the court may make such order as shall be deemed proper.

SEC. 197. If any person appointed receiver of an association shall die, or shall permanently absent himself from the country, or if he shall become in any other way unable to make a petition for discharge, or if he shall refuse or neglect to make such petition, such petition may be made in his behalf by his sureties, or by either of them.

SEC. 198. Whenever, after any association has been placed in the hands of a receiver by the Comptroller of the Currency, all claims against such association which have been proved and allowed, and all expenses of the receivership have been paid in full, and lawful money of the United States has been deposited for the redemption of the circulating notes of the association, the Comptroller shall call a meeting of the shareholders for the purpose of electing an agent to receive the remaining assets of the association. Such meeting shall be called by publishing notice for thirty days in a newspaper published in the place where the business of the association was carried on. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 199. No person shall be allowed to vote at such meeting upon any share of stock upon which the assessment has not been paid in full, or upon any share which has been surrendered to the receiver in compromise or settlement of debts to the association, but all such shares of stock shall be deducted from the whole number of shares, and a majority of such reduced number shall prevail in the election of an agent and in determining all other questions. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 200. The agent shall be elected by ballot; and he must receive votes representing at least a majority of the stock upon which votes can be cast. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 201. In selecting an agent, administrators or executors of deceased shareholders may act and sign as the decedent might have done if living, and guardians may so act and sign for their wards. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 202. Before any of the assets of the association are delivered to the agent some of the shareholders of the association shall execute and file a bond to the satisfaction of the Comptroller of the Currency, conditioned for the payment and discharge in full of any and every claim against the association that may thereafter be proved, before, and allowed by any competent court, and also for the faithful performance of all the duties of the trust. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 203. When the bond required by the preceding section has been filed, the Comptroller of the Currency and the receiver shall transfer to the agent all the undivided or uncollected or other assets and property of the association then remaining in their hands, or subject to their order or control whereupon the Comptroller and the receiver shall be discharged and released from any and all liability to such association, and to each and all of the creditors and shareholders thereof. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 204. For the purpose of enabling them to make the transfer provided for by the preceding section, the Comptroller of the Currency and the receiver are severally empowered to execute any deed, assignment, or other instrument that may be necessary and proper. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 205. The agent selected by the shareholders is authorized to sell, compromise, or compound the debts due to the association upon the order of the United States circuit court for the district where the business of the association was carried on, or other competent court. He shall hold, control, and dispose of the assets and property of the association which he may receive for the benefit of the shareholders of such association as they, or a majority of them in value or number of shares, may direct, distributing such assets and property among such shareholders in proportion to the shares held by each, discriminating equitably between those who have paid assessments in full, those who have paid in part, and those who have not paid at all; and he may in his own name, or in the name of such association, sue and be sued, and do all other lawful acts and things necessary to finally settle and distribute the assets and property in his hands. (Act June 30, 1876, sec. 3.)

SEC. 206. Whenever the agent of the shareholders has collected and distributed all the assets of the association, he may apply to the United States circuit court for the district in which the association was located for a final discharge from further accountability; and if it shall appear that he has well and faithfully administered his trust, and that there are no further assets to be collected and distributed, the court shall grant him a discharge from all further accountability for the debts and obligations of such association. And thereafter all claims against the association shall be forever barred.

SEC. 207. When the assets of any association which has been adjudged to be insolvent by the Comptroller of the Currency, and for which a receiver has been appointed, shall prove sufficient to pay all the creditors in full, with interest, such association shall not be deemed to be dissolved; but after the receiver shall have so paid such creditors, and shall have transferred and delivered to an agent of the shareholders the undivided or uncollected assets and property of the association, the association shall be entitled to resume the business of banking, if the shareholders owning two-thirds of the capital stock shall desire so to do. Before resuming business the association shall restore the entire amount of its capital stock. But, with the approval of the Comptroller, the capital stock may be reduced in the manner prescribed in section twenty-seven of this act before it is restored.

SEC. 208. Where any association has determined to resume business as provided in the preceding section, the agent elected by the shareholders shall certify such fact to the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Comptroller, when he shall be satisfied that the association has complied with all the requirements of the preceding section, and that the shareholders have reorganized the administration thereof by the election of a board of directors, shall issue his certificate that such association is entitled to resume the business of banking.

SEC. 209. The association shall cause the certificate of the Comptroller of the Currency, issued under the preceding section, to be printed in each issue of some paper published in the place where the association is located, for at least sixty days after the issuing thereof.

CHAPTER IX.—JURISDICTION, SUITS, AND EVIDENCE.

SEC. 210. All national banking associations established under the laws of the United States shall, for the purpose of all actions by or against them, real, personal, or mixed, and all suits in equity, be deemed citizens of the States in which they are respectively located; and in such cases the circuit and district courts of the United States shall not have jurisdiction other than such as they would have in cases between the individual citizens of the same State. But the provisions of this section shall not be held to affect the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in cases commenced by the United States, or by the direction of any officer thereof, or in cases for winding up the affairs of any such association. (Act March 3, 1887, sec. 4.)

SEC. 211. The jurisdiction for suits brought by or against any national banking association in any State, county, or municipal court, except suits between an association and the United States, or the officers and agents of the United States, shall be the same as, and not other than, the jurisdiction for suits by or against banks not organized under any law of the United States, which do or might do banking business where such national banking association may be doing business when such suits are commenced. (Act July 12, 1874, sec. 4.)

SEC. 212. All proceedings by any national banking association to enjoin the Comptroller of the Currency, under the provisions of any law relating to national banking associations, shall be had in the district where such association is located. (Sec. 736, R. S.)

SEC. 213. All suits and proceedings arising out of the provisions of law governing national banking associations, in which the United States or any of its officers or agents shall be parties, shall be conducted by the district attorneys of the several districts under the direction and supervision of the Solicitor of the Treasury. Nothing herein shall be construed to confer upon any district attorney the right to conduct any suits or proceedings on behalf of a receiver; but he may be employed by such receiver, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, and, in such case, shall receive for his services the same compensation as would be paid to other counsel out of the funds of the trust. (Sec. 380, R. S.)

SEC. 214. Whenever an association against which proceedings have been instituted, on account of any alleged refusal to redeem its circulating notes, denies having failed to do so, it may, at any time within ten days after it has been notified of the appointment of an agent, as provided in section one hundred and twenty of this act, apply to the nearest circuit, district, or territorial court of the United States to enjoin further proceedings in the premises; and such court, after citing the Comptroller of the Currency to show cause why further proceedings should not be enjoined, and after the decisions of the court or finding of a jury that such association has not refused to redeem its circulating notes, when legally presented, in the lawful money of the United States, shall make an order enjoining the Comptroller, and any receiver acting under his direction, from all further proceedings on account of such alleged refusal. (Sec. 5237, R. S.)

SEC. 215. Every certificate, assignment, and conveyance executed by the Comptroller of the Currency, in pursuance of law, and sealed with his seal of office, shall be received in evidence in all places and courts; and all copies of papers in his office, certified by him and authenticated by his official seal, shall in all cases be evidence equally with the originals. An impression of such seal directly on the paper shall be as valid as if made on wax or wafer. (Sec. 884, R. S.)

SEC. 216. Copies of the organization certificate of any national banking association, duly certified by the Comptroller of the Currency, and authenticated by his seal of office, shall be evidence in all courts and places within the jurisdiction of the United States of the existence of the association, and of every matter which could be proved by the production of the original certificate. (Sec. 885, R. S.)

CHAPTER X.—TAXATION.

SEC. 217. Every association shall pay to the Treasurer of the United States, in the months of January and July, a duty of one-half of one per centum each half-year upon the average amount of its notes in circulation, after deducting the amount of such notes represented by the minimum amount of bonds which such association is required to keep on deposit with the Treasurer. (Sec. 5214, R. S.)

SEC. 218. In order to enable the Treasurer to assess the duties imposed by the preceding section, each association shall, within ten days from the first days of January and July of each year, make a return, under the oath of its president or cashier, to the Treasurer, in such form as that officer may prescribe, of the average amount of its notes in circulation for the six months next preceding the most recent first day of January or July. (Sec. 5215, R. S.)

SEC. 219. Every association which fails to make the return required by the preceding section shall be liable to a penalty of two hundred dollars, to be collected either out of the interest as it may become due such association on the bonds deposited with the Treasurer, or, at his option, in the manner in which penalties are to be collected of other corporations under the laws of the United States. (Sec. 5215, R. S.)

SEC. 220. Whenever any association fails to make the required half-yearly return, the duties to be paid by such association shall be assessed upon the amount of notes delivered to such association by the Comptroller of the Currency, after making the deduction specified in section two hundred and seventeen of this act. (Sec. 5216, R. S.)

SEC. 221. Whenever an association fails to pay the duties imposed herein, the sums due may be collected in the manner provided for the collection of United States taxes from other corporations; or the Treasurer may reserve the amount out of the interest as it may become due on the bonds deposited with him by such defaulting association. (Sec. 5217, R. S.)

SEC. 222. In all cases where an association pays in excess of what is found due from it, on account of the duty required to be paid to the Treasurer of the United States, the association may state an account therefor, which, on being certified by the Treasurer, and found correct by the First Comptroller of the Treasury, shall be refunded in the ordinary manner by warrant on the Treasury. (Sec. 5218, R. S.)

SEC. 223. Nothing in this act shall prevent all the shares in any association from being included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares, in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the State within which the association is located; but the legislature of each State may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within the State, subject only to the two restrictions: first, that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate in proportion to their real value than is assessed upon the shares of other corporations engaged in receiving deposits, negotiating loans, or transacting any other business similar to that which national banks are authorized to transact, or at any rate which will amount on the aggregate of all the shares to more than is assessed upon a like amount of other capital similarly employed, whether in the hands of individuals or under the control of corporations; secondly, that the shares of any national banking association owned by non-residents of any State shall be taxed in the city or town where the association is located, and not elsewhere. Nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real property of associations from either State, county, or municipal taxes, to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed. (Sec. 5219, R. S.)

SEC. 224. Whenever any national banking association has ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, no tax shall be assessed or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States, on account of such association, which will diminish the assets thereof necessary for the full payment of all its depositors. (Act March 1, 1879, sec. 22.)

CHAPTER XI.—PENAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 225. No officer acting under the provisions of this act shall countersign or deliver to any association, or to any other company or person, any circulating notes contemplated by this act, except in accordance with the true intent and meaning of its provisions. Every officer who violates this section shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than double the amount so countersigned and delivered, and imprisoned not less than one year and not more than fifteen years. (Sec. 5187, R. S.)

SEC. 226. No association shall offer or receive United States notes or national-bank notes as security or as collateral security for any loan of money, or for a consideration agree to withhold the same from use, or offer or receive the custody or promise of custody of such notes as security or as collateral security or consideration for any loan of money. Any association offending against the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars and a further sum equal to one-third of the money so loaned. The officer or officers of any association who shall make any such loan shall be liable for a further sum equal to one-quarter of the money loaned. Any fine or penalty incurred by a violation of this section shall be recoverable for the benefit of the party bringing the suit. (Sec. 5207, R. S.)

SEC. 227. Every director, and every other person employed in or by any association who embezzles, abstracts, or willfully misapplies any of the moneys, funds, or credits of the association; or who, without authority from the directors, issues or puts in circulation any of the notes of the association; or who, without such authority, issues or puts forth any certificate of deposit, draws any order or bill of exchange, makes any acceptance, assigns any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree; or who makes any false representation as to the business or resources of the association or makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of the association, with intent, in either case, to injure or defraud the association or any other company, body politic or corporate, or any individual person, or to deceive the public, any officer of the association, or the Comptroller of the Currency, or any person appointed to examine the affairs of any such association; and every person who with like intent aids or abets any other person in any violation of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be imprisoned not less than five years nor more than ten. (Sec. 5209, R. S.)

SEC. 228. If any person appointed or directed by the Comptroller of the Currency to examine into the affairs of any association shall make any false entry in any report or statement made by him to the Comptroller, or shall suppress or conceal any material fact, with intent to deceive that officer, such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not less than five nor more than ten years.

SEC. 229. Every examiner of national banks who shall knowingly violate any confidences reposed in him by the Comptroller of the Currency, or by the officers or agents of any association, or who shall use his official position, or the information acquired in the discharge of his official duties, for any purpose not authorized by this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than one thousand, and not more than five thousand, dollars, and shall be imprisoned not less than one, and not more than five, years.

SEC. 230. It shall not be lawful to design, engrave, print, or in any manner make or execute, or to utter, issue, distribute, circulate, or use, any business or professional card, notice, placard, circular, hand-bill, or advertisement, in the likeness or similitude of any circulating note or other obligation or security of any banking association organized or acting under the laws of the United States which has been or may be issued under this act, or any act of Congress, or to write, print, or otherwise impress upon any such note, obligation, or security any business or professional card, notice, or advertisement, or any notice or advertisement of any matter or thing whatever. Every person who violates this section shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, recoverable one-half to the use of the informer. (Sec. 5188, R. S.)

SEC. 231. Every person who falsely makes, forges, or counterfeits, or causes or procures to be made, forged, or counterfeited, or willingly aids or assists in falsely making, forging, or counterfeiting any note in imitation of, or purporting to be in imitation of, the circulating notes issued by any banking association now or hereafter authorized and acting under the laws of the United States; or who passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, any false, forged, or counterfeited note, purporting to be issued by any such association doing a banking business, knowing the same to be falsely made, forged, or counterfeited, or who falsely alters, or causes or procures to be falsely altered, or willingly aids or assists in falsely altering, any such circulating notes, or passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, as true any falsely altered or spurious circulating note issued, or purporting to have been issued, by any such banking association, knowing the same to be falsely altered or spurious, shall be imprisoned at hard labor not less than five years nor more than fifteen years, and fined not more than one thousand dollars. (Sec. 5415, R. S.)

SEC. 232. Every person, who, without authority of law, affixes any signature to any blank circulating note printed for any national banking association, or, who issues or puts in circulation any such note, knowing that the same has not been duly signed by the proper officers of the association for which it was printed, shall be imprisoned at hard labor for not less than five, and not more than fifteen years, and shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars.

SEC. 233. Every person who mutilates, cuts, defaces, disfigures, or perforates with holes, or unites or cements together, or does any other thing to any bank bill, draft, note, or other evidence of debt issued by any national banking association, or who causes or procures the same to be done, with intent to render such bank bill, draft, note, or other evidence of debt unfit to be reissued by such association, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars, recoverable by the association. (Sec. 5189, R. S.)

SEC. 234. Any officer, clerk, or agent of any national banking association who shall willfully violate the provisions of section one hundred and sixty-one of this act, or who shall resort to any device, or receive any fictitious obligation, direct or collateral, in order to evade the provisions thereof, or who shall certify or accept checks before the amount thereof shall have been regularly entered to the credit of the dealer upon the books of the banking association, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof in any circuit or district court of the United States, be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or shall be imprisoned not more than five years, or both, in the discretion of the court. (Act July 12, 1882, sec. 13.)

SEC. 235. All banks not organized and transacting business under the national banking laws, and all persons or corporations doing the business of bankers, brokers, or savings institutions, except savings banks authorized by Congress to use the word "national" as a part of their corporate name, are prohibited from using the word "national" as a portion of the name or title of such bank, corporation, firm, or partnership; and any violation of this prohibition shall subject the party chargeable therewith to a penalty of fifty dollars for each day during which it is permitted or repeated. And it is hereby made the duty of the United States district attorney for the judicial district in which such bank is located, or such business carried on to proceed against all persons or corporations violating this section. (Sec. 5243, R. S.)

CHAPTER XII.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 236. The provisions of this act, which are expressed without restrictive words as applying to "national banking associations," or to "associations," apply to all associations organized to carry on the business of banking under any act of Congress. And the word "association" means national banking association, unless otherwise specially indicated. (Sec. 5157, R. S.)

SEC. 237. Any oath required by this act may be taken before any officer who is authorized, either by the laws of the United States or by the local municipal laws, to administer oaths in the State, Territory, or District where the oath may be administered; but when any such oath is taken before an officer not using an official seal, proper evidence of the authority of such officer to administer oaths shall be filed in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency. When taken in any foreign country, any such oath may be administered by any diplomatic or consular representative of the United States.

SEC. 238. All sums of money collected for penalties under this act shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, except as otherwise provided.

SEC. 239. In the absence or disability of the cashier all certificates and verifications required by this act to be made by him may be made by the assistant cashier, if the association has such an officer, and if it has no such officer, then by some one appointed by the directors to perform the duties of cashier.

SEC. 240. Where by this act publication is required to be made in a newspaper, it shall be made in a newspaper among those of most frequent issue and largest circulation in the place. If no newspaper is published in such place, the publication shall be made in some newspaper among those of the largest general circulation therein.

SEC. 241. This act shall be known as the National-Bank Code.

SEC. 242. All laws and parts of laws re-enacted herein are repealed ; but such repeal shall not extend to any matters other than those relating to national banking associations.

SEC. 243. Congress may at any time amend, alter, or repeal this act.

LEGAL DECISIONS.

The "Digest of National-Bank Cases" presented in the Report of 1886 is reproduced in the Appendix, page 133,* enlarged by the incorporation of decisions announced during the last twelve months. There will also be found in the Appendix, page 155,* a digest of decisions determining questions arising in practical banking. An examination of this digest will bring out very clearly how wide apart, and even contradictory, are the decisions which have been rendered in different States in respect to substantially the same question. Considering how active and extended the interstate commercial relations now are, and how much of the business of the national banks consists of operations in exchange, arising out of transactions between the citizens of different States, it may not be out of place for the Comptroller to draw attention to the confusion and friction caused by these local differences of judicial construction.

The time may not yet be ripe for the enactment by Congress of an interstate commercial code, but such legislation appears to be in logical sequence to the establishment and extension of the national banking system and to the regulation by Congress of interstate transportation, and it would certainly be a great convenience to banks and merchants.

FOURTH.

STATE, SAVINGS, AND PRIVATE BANKS, AND LOAN AND TRUST COMPANIES.

In order to comply with the fourth requirement of section 333 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the Comptroller has obtained, through the courtesy of the authorities of 21 States, which exact returns of this nature, all the information received by them. This information, transmitted sometimes in detail and sometimes compiled by the State officers, embraces the affairs of 1,620 incorporated institutions and 182 private banking concerns, making 1,802 in all.

In order to obtain the information about the institutions of like character in States and Territories where no returns are made to local authorities, resort was had to an extended and laborious correspondence. The names and addresses of over 4,000 concerns were collected, and to each a circular was sent asking for the information desired, and inclosing blank forms to be filled and returned. Out of the total number thus approached less than 1,400 have returned answers available for the purpose in view, and in many of these cases further correspondence was necessary in order to elicit all the information desired. In addition to this correspondence, each bank reporting its condition through the medium of State officials was written to individually, and requested to report the distribution of its stock.

The returns of 1,620 institutions obtained from the State authorities embrace a statement of the condition of 914 banks operated under State charters; aggregate capital, $114,830,660; surplus and undivided profits, $44,943,984; deposits, $390,821,688; of 42 loan and trust companies, capital, $21,858,797; surplus and undivided profits, $18,308,324; deposits, $199,799,370; of 664 savings banks, of which 580 report no capital, and 84 report capital aggregating $6,991,166. The aggregate surplus and undivided profits of the 664 savings banks is $120,187,883, and their aggregate deposits amount to $1,157,867,483. One hundred and eighty-two private banks report capital to the amount of $5,896,144, surplus and undivided profits of $1,720,192, and deposits of $18,843,930.

In response to circulars sent directly, reports of condition have been received from 1,354 concerns in States and Territories where no reports are required to be made to local authorities, viz, from 499 State banks having an aggregate capital of $26,169,717, surplus and undivided profits of $8,028,226, and deposits of $55,738,334; from 16 loan and trust companies, with capital of $14,496,972, surplus and undivided profits of $8,884,995, and deposits of $40,391,341; from 20 savings banks, with capital of $3,099,700, surplus and undivided profits of $6,712,360, and deposits of $77,868,586; and from 819 private banks with capital of $34,183,294, surplus and undivided profits of $16,443,708, and deposits of $77,736,527.

The 1,471 incorporated banks and loan and trust companies, reporting their condition officially and unofficially, have an aggregate capital of $177,356,146, and of these 1,120 furnished statements as to the distribution of their stock, aggregating $151,587,705 in par value. From examination of the details of those statements, it appears that the par value of the share ranges from $10 to $1,000, and the average par value of all the shares is $79.53.*

It was desired to make a classified report of the holdings of gold, silver, legal tenders, and national-bank notes, but as only a comparatively small number of associations outside of the national-bank system separate the items composing "cash on hand," and as the majority of the State reports simply show "cash on hand" and "cash in bank," the result is not as satisfactory as was hoped for. From the reports in which "cash on hand" is classified, it appears that the amount held by 1,360 such associations in gold coin is $27,015,952; in gold certificates, $937,710; in silver coins, $1,824,657; in silver certificates, $598,313; in specie (not classified), $13,744,873; and in legal tenders and national-bank notes, $35,462,589.

A table in the Appendix, page 175, shows, by States and Territories, the estimated population of each, and the aggregate capital, surplus, undivided profits, and individual deposits of national and State banks, loan and trust companies, and savings and private banks in the United States on June 1, 1887; the average of these per capita of population, and the per capita averages of such resources in each class of banks, from which it appears that the estimated population of the United States, June 1, 1887, is 59,893,000; total banking funds amount to $4,563,192,203, which is an average of $76.19. The per capita averages of such resources in each class of banks are: National banks, $34.91; State banks, $10.69; loan and trust companies, $5.07; savings banks, $22.92; and private banks, $2.58.

The Comptroller is indebted for the estimates of population to Mr. E. B. Elliott, Government Actuary, whose national reputation for skill and accuracy in reaching conclusions by mathematical methods is the surest guaranty that the figures given are as nearly correct as possible.

The following table, stating, by geographical divisions, the number of private banks in the United States, with the aggregate amount of their capital, deposits, and investments in United States bonds, for the six months ending May 31, 1882, has appeared in previous Reports. It is repeated for the reason that it has been impossible to obtain similar information from any official source since the date above mentioned:

NOTE.—Names and compensation of officers and clerks are omitted, but they will be found in the separate editions of the Comptroller's report.

EXPENSES OF THE OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1887.

|                                                    |             |
|----------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| For special dies, plates, printing, etc.....       | $31,454.10 |
| For salaries.....                                  | 97,653.00   |
| For salaries, reimbursable by national banks ..... | 15,047.97   |

The contingent expenses of the office are not paid by the Comptroller, but from the general appropriation for contingent expenses of the Treasury Department; no separate account of them is kept.

ORGANIZATION AND EXPENSES OF THE BUREAU OF THE CURRENCY.

One subject of material importance to the banks and to the public is the more complete organization and better equipment of the office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Each year greater numbers of new banks are organized, involving increased correspondence, explanation, and book-keeping, and more packages of currency to be kept safely; each year the number of banks in operation grows larger, calling for a wider scope of supervision, more reports to be examined, corrected, and compiled, more letters from banks to be received, more letters to be written to banks, more examiners to be employed, and more correspondence maintained with them.

The number of receiverships also increases annually, causing more work, more correspondence, and more book-keeping. The labor and anxiety of continuous and simultaneous attention to twenty-eight active receiverships can not be described. Almost every one of them is involved in serious litigation, while in many of the cases pending not only large amounts of money and great interests, but important principles, are at stake.

On the other hand, no relief comes from the reduction of circulation, for the work in the divisions of issue and redemption varies with the number of banks and not with the amount of bonds deposited or of circulation issued, while every change in either bonds or circulation increases the work in these or other divisions. Changes of bonds and circulation become more frequent annually.

Without entering into wearisome details, it must be obvious that the growth of the national-bank system must impose upon the Comptroller and the officers and clerks who assist him labors and responsibilities which increase year by year, and if the annual reports made to Congress are compared with each other it will be found that they are constantly becoming not only more voluminous but more complex in their contents, and more exacting upon those charged with their preparation. Not only is this the case, but the growing complexity and amplitude both of mass and of detail which mark the annual Reports also reflect a corresponding augmentation of mass and differentiation of detail in the daily work of the Bureau.

The volume and the minute particularity of the contents of these Reports imply antecedent operations of investigation, collocation, arrangement, analysis, compilation, and statistical interpretation, which were not possible when the national-bank system was less fully developed, and which can not be adequately described.

In order that the present work of the Bureau may be properly performed the following changes are essential:

1. The Deputy Comptroller should have a salary of $3,500. No less sum can be depended upon to secure or to permanently retain any one entirely qualified for the position.

2. There should be provided for the Bureau a responsible legal adviser, with such clerks and books as may be necessary to the proper examination of the questions that are daily presented in almost every branch of commercial law.

3. There should be added to the four divisions now existing a division of archives and statistics.

Provision should be made by appropriation for an annual conference in Washington of all examiners of national banks, for the employment of supervising examiners, as recommended elsewhere, for such traveling expenses as may be incurred by the Comptroller or Deputy Comptroller in visiting different sections of the country in connection with the banks and banking interests there, and for the accumulation of a library of standard books of reference on subjects related to banking and financial legislation and administration.

In order that some measure of justice may be done to the officers and clerks of the Bureau for the assiduity and intelligence by which alone it has been possible to accomplish the constantly increasing tasks devolved upon them, the subjoined tables are respectfully submitted.

The first table has been made up from a report lately prepared for a select committee of the Senate, and it shows the number of letters and papers handled, and the value of circulating notes and of incomplete currency passing in and out of the Bureau during each of the last three years.

The second table shows the number and compensation of officers, clerks, messengers, and laborers employed in the Bureau, and the total salaries during each year from 1863 to 1887, inclusive.

No words can add force to the testimony of these figures, and yet they represent only imperfectly the annually growing disparity between the work accomplished in the Bureau and the number and compensation of those upon whom the burdens and the responsibilities rest.

If the considerations here presented should be deemed insufficient to justify more liberal appropriations, there is the further reason that without more enlarged facilities the valuable information continually accumulating will soon get beyond the present overtaxed capacity of the Bureau, and its value will become lost.

INFORMATION.

Section 333 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in prescribing the scope of the annual Report to be made by the Comptroller of the Currency, imposes upon that officer the further duty of submitting to Congress such other information in relation to the banks as in his judgment may be useful. The following information is accordingly submitted:

The following table gives the number of national banks organized in each State and Territory during the year ending October 31, 1887, with their aggregate capital, bonds, and circulation:

The First National Bank of Pine Bluff, Ark., failed because of the failure of its president, who was engaged in buying and shipping cotton on a scale too extensive for his means. To handle this business he made use of the bank, and at the date of failure he was maker or indorser of more than two-thirds of its bills receivable, the only security for which consisted of mortgages on land, crops, and plantation chattels. He had also undertaken a railroad enterprise which he was unable to carry through, and the bank had a great deal of money locked up in the stock and bonds of the railroad company. A large amount of bills receivable having been rediscounted, and the president being unable, through lack of railroad transportation, to make prompt shipments of cotton to meet their maturities, the bank suspended. No run was made by the depositors. A dividend of 25 per cent. was paid to the creditors of the bank, about five months after date of failure, on claims aggregating $64,956.08.

The Palatka National Bank, of Palatka, Fla., suffered an impairment of capital through losses attributable mainly to the gradual withdrawal of deposits by customers who were moving out of the locality, general stagnation of business, and a marked decline in the enterprises of the town. The directors made an abortive effort to place the bank in voluntary liquidation, but the requisite stockholders' vote could not be obtained. In less than sixty days after appointment of the receiver the creditors were paid principal and interest in full on claims aggregating $9,379.69, and the remaining assets of the bank have been turned over to an agent of the stockholders, under the provisions of the act approved June 30, 1876.

The Fidelity National Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, was reduced to insolvency through the reckless management of its board of directors, who suffered certain of their number to divert its funds and to prostitute its credit in support of a speculation in wheat in Chicago during the months of March, April, May, and June of this year. In the progress of this nefarious enterprise many provisions of the national banking laws were violated, and the public was deceived by false statements as to the capital, surplus, and business of the association. While entertaining grave apprehensions as to the management of this bank, the Comptroller had no evidence, either from its reports of condition or from an examination made in March, to justify any measure on his part likely to discredit it, or to embarrass its directors in the conduct of its affairs.

On June 20 the Comptroller received notice of the protest in New York of $200,000 of its drafts, and immediately notified the examiner, who had been waiting in Cincinnati and the vicinity for several weeks to act upon any information which should justify a re-examination. He entered the bank immediately, and finding it insolvent took possession under instructions. The doors were not opened on the morning of the 21st, and on June 27 a receiver was appointed and took charge of its affairs. Upon obtaining evidence sufficient for the purpose, the Comptroller caused proceedings to be taken under section 5239, Revised Statutes, to dissolve the corporation and to have its franchises declared forfeited. A decree to this effect was made July 12 in the United States circuit court for the southern district of Ohio. No appeal was taken. Upon the basis thus prepared suit has been brought by the receiver against every director implicated in the violations of law, and such damages as the courts will grant, and the personal means of the directors can be made to supply, will be collected and applied to the relief of those who have suffered loss or damage. A dividend was declared on October 31 of 25 per cent. on all claims proved and allowed, amounting to $2,386,569.20.

A very large number of accounts with corresponding banks are still unadjusted, and claims are in dispute aggregating about $1,000,000 of which it is feared the larger part can be settled only by litigation. Both the examiner and the receiver were early instructed to supply to the United States district attorney for the southern district of Ohio all evidence they could find indicating criminal misconduct on the part of any of the directors or officers of the bank, and arrests were promptly made upon the evidence furnished by them. The Attorney-General joined with the Comptroller in the employment of special means for detecting the persons implicated in the misappropriation of the bank's funds, and the Solicitor of the Treasury, the district attorney, the Chief of the Secret Service Division of the Treasury, and the officers detailed for the work entered heartily and efficiently into all measures for discovering and establishing their guilt. Indictments have been found against several persons, and their trials will shortly take place. It is to be hoped that this conspicuous instance of fraudulent conduct and lax administration may furnish occasion for establishing a just degree of responsibility on the part of directors.

The Henrietta National Bank of Henrietta, Tex., became involved in the cattle business of its president and four other directors, who constitute a majority of the board, and own more than half the capital stock of the bank. In the names of their several firms these five directors had each borrowed from the bank amounts largely in excess of the limit prescribed by law, and their aggregate indebtedness exceeded the entire capital stock. The drought in Texas last summer caused heavy losses in the cattle trade, and as soon as the firms referred to became embarrassed their property was attached, and this precipitated the failure of the bank. While the management is to be condemned, it must be said that the principal debtors of the bank had been men of large means, and that its other assets were fairly sound. Within sixty days of its suspension a dividend of 50 per cent. was paid to the creditors on claims aggregating $64,784.31.

The National Bank of Sumter, S. C., closed its doors on August 20. Two days before the cashier had absconded, carrying with him a considerable amount of money belonging to the bank. This person performed the duties of cashier, teller, and book-keeper, and was thus in a position to conceal his embezzlements until they exceeded in amount the capital stock of the bank. The president seems to have been often absent and habitually negligent, and although a committee was appointed quarterly by the board of directors to examine the affairs of the bank, the members of it must have been incompetent or neglectful of the trust thus confided to them. No evidence has been as yet obtained sufficient to justify proceedings under section 5239, United States Revised Statutes, and in presence of the decision in the case of Movius, receiver, v. Directors of the First National Bank of Buffalo, the Comptroller has not felt justified in subjecting this impoverished trust to the expenses of a suit against the directors at common law. The assets are estimated to be good, and a dividend of 75 per cent. will probably be paid before the end of this year.

The First National Bank of Dansville, N. Y., was wrecked by its president, who telegraphed to the Comptroller August 26 that the bank had closed its doors, and immediately absconded to Canada. When the national-bank examiner took possession of the bank the most important books and papers were missing, and those which remained contained little that was true. Nothing but a judicial investigation will unravel the tangle of falsehood and chicanery by which the public has been deceived and robbed, and a once honored family disgraced. The stock of the bank belonged almost wholly to a single family, and all its losses are chargeable to the operations of the president and one of his brothers. Evidence sufficient to justify a criminal investigation has been laid before the district attorney of the United States for the western district of New York, by whom proceedings have been commenced against the only parties within the jurisdiction of the court.

The First National Bank of Corry, Pa., was crippled by mismanagement several years ago. Its stockholders have had no dividends since 1881. In 1883 a change was made in the officers and directors, but the new men proved unequal to the exigency. It appears that the president lived several miles away from Corry, and that the cashier was negligent, and a poor business man, while the directors were weak or inattentive. In consequence of general neglect the bank went from bad to worse, and the cashier is particularly censured for not fully informing the directors of the true condition of a large amount of paper which was thus allowed to become entirely worthless. Added to the effects of weak management there was a constant shrinkage in the value of the old assets, and recently adverse decisions were rendered in important litigation, and the losses on current business proved to be large.

The bank suspended on September 16, and upon examination it appeared that about 80 per cent. of the capital was lost. Ample time was allowed the stockholders to make this good, in accordance with section 5205 United States Revised States, but their efforts proving unsuccessful, a receiver was appointed, who qualified and took possession on October 11. The assets as at present estimated should pay the creditors in full, but no dividend has yet been declared owing to slow collections.

The Stafford National Bank of Stafford Springs, Conn., lost upward of $100,000 by its cashier, who is now under arrest, charged with embezzlement and misappropriation of the funds of the bank. It appears that he was intrusted with the entire management of the bank's affairs, and was successful in deceiving the president and directors by means of fictitious notes and cash items, and the manipulation of the accounts of correspondent banks. His operations extended over a considerable period of time, and involve very large amounts of money lent to a lumber company, of which he was treasurer. The true condition of this bank was ascertained by a special examination ordered in September, out of the regular term, and the arrest of the cashier was the first notice the public had of the bank's being in trouble. The loss to the bank is nearly equal to the amount of its capital, but it is expected that enough will be realized from the assets to nearly or quite pay the creditors in full.

Tables will be found in the Appendix, pp. 206-212, showing the amount of capital, nominal assets, amounts collected, claims proved, and dividends paid, according to the facts in each of these cases, and other statistical information in relation to all insolvent national banks.

A table, Appendix, p. 212, has been prepared with great care and minute accuracy, showing every item of public interest connected with each bank that has been placed in the hands of a receiver since January 1, 1877. It was desired to embrace in this table similar information as to all failed national banks, but it appears that prior to 1877 the various items in the reports of receivers were not always classified, as they have been since that date, and their uniform classification involved so much labor that it could not be completed in time for this Report. In some of the earliest cases the information on file seems to be very meager.

THE ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL BANKS.

As the laws now stand a national banking association may be formed by any number (not less than five) of natural persons, and any banking corporation having a State or Territorial charter may be converted into a national banking association. Every person applying for information as to the formation of a national bank, or the conversion of a State bank, is supplied with a copy of the national-bank laws and a book of instructions as to the practical steps to be taken in effecting either of these purposes. He is also requested to cause a formal notice to be filed, setting forth the name of the place at which the bank is to be located, the title selected, and the names of at least five among those who intend to subscribe for the capital stock. After notice has been filed the person or persons acting in the matter are furnished with blank forms to be used in effecting an organization, and the title which they have selected, if it is approved, is reserved for them for a reasonable period. The forms sent include articles of association, organization certificate, certificate upon which officers and directors are to set forth the facts which it is necessary for the Comptroller to know before authorizing the bank to begin business, oaths of directors, and a blank order for circulating notes. As soon as these papers are returned, duly executed, and all the requirements of the law have been complied with by the corporators, the Comptroller's certificate to that effect is issued. The requirements of law for the formation of new banks are simple and reasonable, the only one appearing onerous being that which requires the bank to deposit in the Treasury certain amounts of United States registered bonds bearing interest.

Under the act of February 25, 1863, national banking associations were required to deposit with the Treasurer United States bonds to the amount of one third their paid-in capital. In 1864 this provision was amended by fixing $30,000 as the minimum amount of bonds for any bank.

The act of June 20, 1874, permitted associations to withdraw any bonds they might have on deposit in excess of $50,000. Obviously this affected only banks of which the capital exceeded $150,000.

The act of July 12, 1882, specified that banks of which the capital does not exceed $150,000 should be required to keep on deposit bonds to the amount of one-fourth of their capital.

By a special provision of law banks and banking corporations having State charters may be converted into national banks upon satisfying the Comptroller of the Currency that they are in sound financial condition, and upon complying with such of the general requirements of the law as are applicable to them.

CONVERTED AND ORIGINAL BANKS.

It will be seen from the foregoing statement that banks that enter the national system are of two classes, viz, institutions already organized under State laws, converted to national banks under section 5154, Revised Statutes of the United States, and national banking associations primarily organized as such under various acts of Congress:

The following tables show the history of these two classes:

The figures in the table as to the number of banks organized under these two acts, respectively, conform to the records of the office, but are not in conformity with the Comptroller's reports of previous years.

The discrepancy is attributable to the fact that certain banks originally organized under the act of 1863 afterward went into voluntary liquidation and were reorganized under the act of 1864. In the records of the office they stand among the banks organized under the latter act, while in the reports they have been included with banks organized under the act of 1863. It is perhaps a matter of but little consequence, but upon principle it seems best that the report should reflect accurately the records as they are.

From the foregoing table it will be found that all of the banks organized under the national currency act of 1863 have either ceased to exist or have had their corporate existence extended, while of those organized prior to July 12, 1882, under the national-bank act of 1864, 1,760 are still in operation under their original certificates of organization.

The following table shows how many of these 849 banks will reach the expiration of their corporate existence during each year from 1888 to 1901, inclusive, with their capital and circulation:

| Years.     | No. of banks. | Capital.      | Circulation. | Years.      | No. of banks. | Capital.      | Circulation. |

The number, capital, and circulation of the national banks of which the periods of succession terminated between October 31, 1886, and October 31, 1887, are shown by the following table, which also indicates the number of which the corporate existence has been extended:

SHAREHOLDERS IN BANKS.

In the report of last year tables were given by which a comparison could be made between the distribution of the shares of national banks in 1886 and the distribution as shown by tables reproduced from the Comptroller's Report of 1876.

The tables subjoined hereto afford a comparison between the distribution of national-bank stock and that of the stock of State banks and loan and trust companies, so far as the latter can be ascertained.

NOTE.—The difference in the amount of capital stock as shown by this table and by the reports of condition on August 1 is accounted for by the fact that a number of banks organized during the five months just preceding that date had not paid up their capital stock.

CIRCULATING NOTES.

Upon the security of its bonds, deposited with the Treasurer, each bank is entitled to receive, and the Comptroller of the Currency is by law required to issue to it upon demand of its officers, circulating notes to the amount of 90 per cent. of the market value, and not more than 90 per cent. of the par value, of the bonds. Any bank may deposit more than the minimum of bonds, and may take out circulating notes for 90 per cent. of its deposit, provided its entire outstanding circulation against bonds does not exceed 90 per cent. of its capital stock actually paid in. The circulating notes when issued by the Comptroller are in sheets, and are not valid until signed by the bank officers designated by the statute.

Under the present law the minimum deposit of bonds required to be made by the 3,049 national banks in operation in the United States on October 5, 1887, amounts to $89,912,347.

A table in the Appendix* shows by States and geographical divisions the national banks in operation on October 5, 1887, separated into two classes, namely, banks of which the capital does not exceed $150,000, and banks of which the capital exceeds $150,000. The first class contains 2,150 banks, with an aggregate capital of $179,849,390; the second, 899 banks, with an aggregate capital of $398,613,375. The minimum of bonds required to be kept on deposit by the entire body of banks in the first class is $44,962,347; the minimum for the 899 banks of the second class is $44,950,000. If all banks held only the minimum of bonds, the total national-bank circulation could not exceed $80,921,113, while the possible maximum of circulation, namely, 90 per cent. of the aggregate of the national-bank capital, would be $520,616,489.

The actual circulation on October 5, 1887, was $272,387,176, inclusive of $102,719,440 still outstanding, but which, having been surrendered by the banks that issued it, is no longer represented by bonds, but by that amount of lawful money deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to redeem the notes as they are presented.

The $169,667,736 of circulation for which the banks are responsible consists of $71,536,500 secured by the bonds deposited by the 2,150 banks having $150,000 capital and less, and $98,131,236 secured by the bonds belonging to the 899 banks of which the capital exceeds $150,000. The first class of banks have, therefore, $31,070,387 more than their minimum and $90,327,951 less than their possible maximum circulation, while the larger banks have $57,676,236 more than their minimum and $260,620,802 less than their maximum.

The following table shows the number of banks organized from July 1, 1882, to July 1, 1887, their capital stock, amount of bonds deposited, and the circulation issued thereon:

* This Appendix, which is omitted for want of space, will be found in the bound volume of the Comptroller's report.

From the foregoing table it appears that 991 banks have been organized between the dates given, with a capital of $110,698,300; that they have received circulation to the amount of $21,495,110 on bonds deposited to the amount of $23,892,100, and that the minimum deposit of bonds required by law for these banks is $20,623,250.

The actual deposit of bonds during the whole period exceeds the minimum by about 15 per cent. only, and taken year by year the percentage of excess has decreased from 28 per cent. in 1882-'83 to less than  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. in 1886-'87.

Of the 217 national banks organized during the past fiscal year, 102 have a capital of $50,000 each, amounting to $5,100,000; 76 have a capital of over $50,000 and not exceeding $150,000, amounting to $7,044,000; and 39 have a capital of $19,300,000. The 39 largest banks deposited the exact amount of bonds required by law, and out of 178 banks of which the capital does not exceed $150,000 only 8 have deposited bonds in excess of the requirement.

Tables will be found in the Appendix, pp. 183, etc., showing for the national banks in each State, Territory, and reserve city the minimum amount of bonds required by law, the bonds actually held, and the circulation thereon outstanding October 5, 1887; also all other information deemed useful as to circulation.

Banks are privileged to change their deposited bonds from time to time, to increase and to reduce the amount, within limits, and are required to inspect once a year the bonds held for them in trust by the Treasurer. The Comptroller of the Currency is the agent and medium of all such changes; his indorsement on the bonds establishes their ownership and alone validates their transfer. Section 5163 of the Revised Statutes requires him to record every act of deposit, transfer, and withdrawal, and to keep a set of books for the purpose, all of which has been carefully complied with.

INTEREST-BEARING FUNDED DEBT OF THE UNITED STATES, AND THE AMOUNT HELD BY NATIONAL BANKS.

The connection between the banks and the distribution of the funded debt of the United States renders the following statement appropriate:

The public debt at its maximum, on August 31, 1865, amounted to $2,844,649,626, of which obligations not bearing interest amounted to $461,616,311, leaving interest-bearing debt $2,383,033,315. On October 31, 1887, the interest-bearing debt amounted to $1,041,770,742.

The following table shows the class of bonds, authorizing act, date of maturity, rate of interest, and intermediate changes :

‡ Pacific railroad bonds; authorizing act, July 1, 1862, and July 2, 1864; date of maturity, 1895 to 1899.

The Navy pension fund, amounting to $14,000,000 in 3 per cents, the interest upon which is applied to the payment of naval pensions exclusively, and $155,080 of refunding certificates are not included in the table.

The act approved July 12, 1882, authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to receive at the Treasury any bonds of the United States bearing 3½ per cent. interest, and to issue in exchange therefor an equal amount of registered bonds of the United States bearing interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum—

Provided, That the bonds herein authorized shall not be called in and paid so long as any bonds of the United States heretofore issued bearing a higher rate of interest than three per centum, and which shall be redeemable at the pleasure of the United States, shall be outstanding and uncalled.

Under this act $305,581,250 of 3 percents were issued, but the largest amount outstanding at any time was $305,529,000, on August 7, 1883, $52,250 having been redeemed before the last issue was made.

The largest amount of 3 percents held by the national banks on deposit as security for circulation was $202,386,750, on August 16, 1883.

On October 31, 1886, there was outstanding $95,850,050 3 per cent. bonds, of which $31,607,400 had been called. The $64,242,550 then remaining uncalled have been called during the past year, except that bonds amounting to $605,150 were voluntarily presented for redemption under Treasury circulars dated August 30, 1886, and September 15, 1886. Of the $63,637,400 called, $1,448,400 was still outstanding October 31, 1887.

Of this amount the national banks on that date held $144,500, deposited with the Treasurer of the United States as security for circulation, and $550,000 was held by him for them as security for public deposits.

REDEMPTION OF LOAN OF JULY 2, 1882, KNOWN AS THREE PER CENT. BONDS.

Since the last annual report the whole amount of 3 per cent. bonds then outstanding has been called in for redemption.

The following tables show the general progress of this redemption, and its effect upon national-bank circulation, from September 15, 1886, to July 1, 1887.

The first table relates to the entire mass of 3 per cent. bonds outstanding September 15, 1886, including both those held by the Treasurer for the banks and those held by others. It gives the date and maturity of each call since August 1, 1886, the amount of bonds embraced in each, the bonds then outstanding, and those thereafter redeemed.

The second table shows the amount of 3 per cent. bonds held by the Treasurer as security for national-bank circulation on September 15, 1886, the amount of such bonds included in each call for redemption since August 1, 1886, the total amount so held at each date at which interest ceased under any call for redemption, the amounts redeemed at those dates, and the amounts held on which interest had ceased.

It will be seen by reference to foregoing tables that call No. 140 was dated August 12, 1886. On that day the Treasurer held as security for circulation of national banks 3 per cent. bonds amounting to $103,351,650, of which $1,720,000 had ceased to bear interest, having matured under previous calls.

Upon the assumption that it would be found practicable and desirable to continue the redemption of these bonds, it became a matter of solicitude with a great many banks holding only 3 percents to ascertain whether their bonds could remain on deposit with the Treasurer as a basis for circulation after interest on them had ceased. Singular as it may seem, some strong and ordinarily well managed banks left large amounts of called bonds on deposit for months, preferring to forego all interest rather than to replace them with other bonds at the then prevailing premium, but as a rule the banks that resisted the replacement of called bonds were those of small capital in sections where money was scarce and dear.

The language of the statute makes it clear that only interest-bearing registered bonds can be deposited, but in the clause requiring the deposit to be maintained up to a certain minimum, registered bonds only are mentioned, nothing being said about their being also interest-bearing.

Taking advantage of this ambiguity in the law, it was contended on behalf of certain banks, that when a deposit was once made of interest-bearing registered bonds of the United States, the requirement of the statute was fulfilled, and that banks could not be compelled against their will to replace those bonds, or to retire the circulation issued upon them, because without any action on their part, and even without their consent, the Government had called the bonds for redemption, and had thereby acquired the right to cease paying interest.

On the other hand, it has always been maintained in the Treasury Department, that bonds upon which interest has ceased are not such bonds as the statute requires national banks to keep on deposit as a basis for circulation.

The controversy at one time became very serious, as it was represented that banks in all parts of the country were resolved to go out of the system if they should be compelled to withdraw their called bonds.

With a view of terminating the controversy as to the meaning of the law, the Secretary of the Treasury was requested to submit the question to the Attorney-General, and this being done the Attorney-General decided that bonds on which interest had ceased could not be lawfully held by the Treasurer as security for national-bank circulation.

If at any time within six months after August 12, 1886, the true position of the banks had been known, especially how many of them held no bonds but 3 per cents, or if peremptory measures had been taken to compel the immediate replacement of called bonds, a speculation in the 4 and 4½ per cent. bonds would no doubt have been precipitated, and in that event the formation of new banks would have been arrested, and many of those already in the system would have been forced into liquidation.

If by accident or inadvertence the magnitude of the necessary bond replacements had got out, or if the ambiguity of the law had not afforded opportunity for temporizing with the reluctant banks, there is little doubt that the banks would have been cornered for available bonds, and while the corner lasted no new banks could have been formed, and a greater or less number of the several hundred which held only 3 per cent. bonds would have been forced into liquidation.

It is needless to specify the steps taken to avert these consequences, and at the same time to bring about an acquiescence in the requirement of the law without having recourse to coercive measures, but it is, perhaps, proper to state that between August 12, 1886, and July 1, 1887, nearly $102,000,000 of 3 per cent. bonds were surrendered by the banks for redemption, and that replacements were made in 4 and 4½ per cent. bonds to the amount of upward of $20,000,000, while during the same time new banks deposited 4 and 4½ per cent. bonds to the amount of $4,532,300, and the amounts of these bonds held to secure deposits of public moneys increased by over $12,000,000. Thus fully $37,000,000 of 4 and 4½ per cent. bonds were obtained by the banks and transferred to the Treasury within less than twelve months, without exciting any speculative advance in the premium of either loan, as will appear from the subjoined table.

OPENING, HIGHEST, AND LOWEST PRICES OF UNITED STATES REGISTERED FOUR AND FOUR AND A HALF PER CENT. BONDS IN NEW YORK FOR EACH WEEK FROM AUGUST 14, 1886, TO JULY 2, 1887, BOTH DATES INCLUSIVE.

It is of grave importance for Congress to observe the perilous contingencies involved in the existence of the present relations between the public debt and the national bank circulation.

It is neither wise nor prudent to maintain a condition of things which makes the possession of official information, necessarily accessible even to clerks in the Departments, an incentive or a temptation to speculation in public securities, nor should the natural and healthy growth of the national-bank system be exposed to the danger of being suddenly arrested by legitimate and discreet operations of the Treasury, directed to the reduction of the public debt.

During the year ending October 31, 1887, $5,379,250 of 4 percents and $19,455,400 of 4½ percents were purchased for sinking-fund purposes, making a total of $24,834,650. Of this amount $297,500 of 4 percents and $687,500 of 4½ percents were withdrawn by the national banks from deposit to secure circulation, making total withdrawals from this cause $985,000, while the replacement by deposits of 4 percents amounted to only $279,650.

Changes in the debt have induced corresponding changes in the bonds held by the national banks. In January 1866, 1,582 banks, with a capital, surplus, and undivided profits of $475,330,204, held $440,380,350 of United States bonds. On October 5, 1887, 3,049 banks, with a capital, surplus, and undivided profits of $823,827,373, held only $223,754,450 of bonds. The total bank circulation on January 1, 1866, was $213,239,530, and on October 5, 1887, that which was secured by bonds was $167,283,343.

The amount and classes of United States bonds owned by the banks, including those pledged as security for circulation and for public deposits, on June 30 in each year since 1865, are exhibited in the following table:

| Years.                     | United States bonds held as security for circulation. |                            |                     |                    |               | United States bonds held for other purposes at nearest date. | Grand total.  |

The foregoing tables show how the banks have shifted their investments from one class of bonds to another, and the following table exhibits especially the steady decrease in the amount of bonds held for and by the banks, and in connection with other tables in this report it tends to establish the proposition that the banks are gradually reducing their investments in these securities.

Table showing the decrease of national-bank circulation during each of the years ending October 31, from 1884 to 1887, inclusive, and the amount of lawful money on deposit at the end of each year:

The following table shows the diminishing scale on which banks organized during each of the past five years have availed themselves of the privilege of issuing circulation upon bonds in excess of the minimum which the law obliges them to keep on hand.

For the sake of conciseness in the table the circulation is omitted, but as every bank has received circulation to the amount of 90 per cent. of the bonds deposited, the proportions of the table reflect faithfully the features of the circulation.

NUMBER AND CAPITAL OF NATIONAL BANKS ORGANIZED IN EACH GEOGRAPHICAL DIVISION OF THE UNITED STATES FROM OCTOBER 31, 1882, TO OCTOBER 31, 1887, SHOWING THE AMOUNT OF BONDS DEPOSITED TO SECURE THEIR CIRCULATION, THE MINIMUM AMOUNT OF BONDS REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF JULY 12, 1882, AND THE EXCESS DEPOSITED OVER REQUIREMENTS BOTH IN AMOUNT AND PERCENTAGE.

BANKS WITHOUT CIRCULATION.

As reported last year, some national banks have not availed themselves of the privilege of taking out circulating notes, and others have surrendered their entire circulation. The following list is unchanged since October 31, 1886:

| Title of bank.                                        | Capital.    | Bonds.    |

DISSOLUTION.

The total number of national banks organized since February 25, 1863, is 3,805, of which there are now in operation, as shown elsewhere, 3,061; passed out of the system, 744, accounted for thus:

|                                                                     |           |

|                                                                     | <hr/> 745 |
| Less restored to solvency and resumed business .....                | 1         |
|                                                                     | <hr/> 744 |
| Total passed out of system.....                                     | 744       |

The corporate existence of five national banks expired during the year ending October 31, 1887, and in each case an extension has been obtained in accordance with the provisions of the act of July 12, 1882.

There were eight failures of national banks during the year ending October 31, 1887, and, as has been shown, in one case the creditors have been paid in full, principal and interest, in another they have received 50 per cent., and in two others 25 per cent. on account of the claims proved.

The affairs of five failed banks have been closed during the past year, and final dividends have been paid to their creditors. These banks, with the total dividends paid in each case, are given below:

| Name and location of bank.                    | Date of appointment of receiver. | Total dividends on principal. | Proportion of interest paid. |

INACTIVE RECEIVERSHIPS.

There still remain in the hands of receivers a small number of banks of which the affairs have been liquidated as far as possible, but the receiverships are kept open by matters pending in the courts. In these cases the expenses of the receivership are reduced to a minimum, and the compensation of the receiver is made dependent as far as practicable upon services rendered and results obtained.

The following table shows the receiverships that are in this condition:

| First National Bank of Union Mills, Union City, Pa.....      | Mar. 24, 1883                    | 65               |

* Thirty-eight of these have been reorganized.

†And interest.

By reference to the Report of 1886 it will be seen that the number of these inactive receiverships has been reduced during the past year by two, viz, that of the New Orleans National Banking Association, and the First National Bank of Butler, Pa.

The New Orleans National Banking Association was interested in the case No. 897, Supreme Court of the United States, New Orleans National Banking Association, appellant, v. E. D. Le Breton, appellee, which was decided on March 21, 1887, adversely to the receiver. When the last dividend was declared, there was reserved only money enough to defray the expenses of this litigation, so that when the decision was rendered the trust was closed. Out of the amount reserved, however, a small sum was applied to publishing in New Orleans a list of creditors who had not drawn dividends, and by this means unclaimed dividend checks to the amount of $511.83 have since been delivered.

The First National Bank of Butler, Pa., was kept open because of the unadjusted accounts of the receiver. An adjustment was reached during the past year, and a final dividend was declared of 11 per cent., making 81 per cent. in all, and closing the trust.

The receivership of the National Bank of the State of Missouri in Saint Louis seems to have been placed in an anomalous position by reason of the assets proving more valuable than they were supposed to be.

The receiver was appointed June 23, 1877, and on October 2, 1879, an assessment of 25 per cent. was ordered on the stock of the bank.

This assessment, which amounted to $510,025, yielded only $245,108, and although the creditors were paid in full before October 31, 1882, the receivership seems to have been continued because of apprehended disagreements among shareholders as to the relative rights of those who had paid their assessments in full, those who had paid in part, and those who had not paid.

In order to comply with the law the Comptroller caused a meeting of shareholders to be called on June 16, 1887, at which an agent was duly elected, but up to the present time he has failed to give the requisite bond.

There is some litigation in progress of immense importance to the interests involved in this trust, and it is necessary, therefore, that its affairs should be looked after. The stockholders have shown very little concern about the matter.

On March 1, 1882, a final dividend for balance due on principal and interest was declared and paid to the creditors of the Third National Bank of Chicago, Ill. No assessment upon the shareholders had been levied. On June 7, 1882, in pursuance of instructions from the Comptroller, a meeting of the shareholders was held for the purpose of selecting an agent to receive the remaining assets of the bank. In consequence of the failure of the shareholders to select such agent, the receivership was continued. During the past year another meeting was called, in accordance with instructions from the Comptroller, with the same result. A resolution distinctly refusing to elect an agent was adopted by shareholders representing 5,828 shares out of a total of 7,500, being based upon statements entered in the records of the meeting that grave complications would arise in the sale and disposition of the remaining assets of the trust, to the financial injury of the shareholders.

The law affords no means by which shareholders can be coerced into availing themselves of the privilege of taking charge of their own affairs.

Out of 3,805 national banks organized since February, 1863, only 120, or about 3 per cent., have been placed in the hands of receivers; this includes 9 which had been previously placed in liquidation by their stockholders, but upon their failing to pay their depositors the Comptroller appointed receivers to wind up their affairs. Out of the above total of 120 failed banks, 41 have paid their creditors in full, while 23 have besides paid interest, 18 in full and 5 in part. The affairs of 85 banks of the 120 have been finally closed, leaving 35 in process of settlement, of which, as has been seen, 7 are virtually closed with the exception of pending litigation, leaving 28 receiverships only in active operation.

The total amount so far paid to creditors of insolvent national banks has been $29,434,986, upon proved claims amounting to $46,938,388. The amount paid during the year has been $2,135,878, which includes $29,675 paid in dividends declared prior to November 1, 1886, on claims proved since that date. Assessments amounting to $9,945,250 have been made upon stockholders of insolvent national banks under section 5151 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. From this source the gross collections amount to $4,682,563, of which there has been received during the past year $636,755. Suits are pending in some cases.

It will be observed that the gross collections from stockholders of insolvent banks amount to only about 47 per cent. of the assessments. Unfortunately the cost of the litigation attending such collections can not be accurately ascertained from the records in this office, but it has been very great, and should be deducted from gross collections. The Comptroller is disposed to think the net amount actually realized to creditors from this source has been under, rather than over, 40 per cent. of the total assessments. In any case the figures show that the security afforded to creditors by subjecting shareholders to liability beyond the loss of their stock is quite disproportionate to the damage inflicted upon solvent shareholders. This personal-liability feature tends to discourage prudent business men from investing in national-bank stock, while contested assessments generally develop an amount of chicanery and fraud which must exercise an injurious influence upon morals.

ISSUES AND REDEMPTIONS.

Notes of gold banks are not included in this table.

A table showing the number and denomination of national-bank notes issued and redeemed, and the number of each denomination outstanding on October 31, for the last twenty years, will be found on page 178 in the Appendix.

Distinct accounts are kept for the incomplete currency issued to banks in replacement of notes redeemed and destroyed under the provisions of the act of June 20, 1874, to banks taking out new circulation upon an extension of their corporate existence under the act of July 12, 1882, and to old and new banks increasing the volume of their circulation by adding to the amount of bonds deposited. The notes issued in the three latter cases have heretofore been designated (on the books of this office and in previous reports) "additional circulation," but this term applies properly only to the two cases last above mentioned.

In order that the following table, showing by States the amount of "additional circulation" issued during the year ending October 31, 1887, and the total amount of such circulation issued since June 20, 1874, may conform to previous reports, the three classes of issue are distributed into two columns, one showing amounts issued under the act of 1882 and the other the issues which are properly additional. This table also shows the amount of circulation retired during the year and the total amount retired since June 20, 1874.

The duties devolving upon the clerical force in the division of issue of this office are of great responsibility, requiring absolute accuracy and promptness on the part of those to whom these duties are assigned. The records of receipts and issues are balanced daily with the vault accounts, and the work of each day is completed before that of another day is begun. During the past year 29,993 packages of currency were forwarded to banks by express, the same number of receipts prepared for signature and return by the banks, and a large amount of correspondence was conducted.

REDEMPTION.

The provisions of law relating to the redemption of the circulating notes of national banks have undergone many changes, but no change has at any time been made in the only two provisions contained in the act of February, 1863.

These are, first, that every bank must redeem on demand at its place of business any of its circulating notes presented there for redemption during business hours ; and second, that the medium of redemption must be "lawful money of the United States."

By the act of June 3, 1864, every association located in Saint Louis, Louisville, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Albany, Leavenworth, San Francisco, or Washington City was required to select, subject to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, some national bank in the city of New York, "at which it will redeem its circulating notes at par;" and each association not organized within any of the cities named had likewise to select as its redemption agent some association in one of these cities.

The Comptroller was required to give public notice of the redemption agent of every association, and of any changes made in such agents, and in case any bank failed to select an agent, or to redeem its notes, as provided by the act, the Comptroller, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, might appoint a receiver to wind up its affairs.

The act of June 20, 1874, established the National Bank Redemption Agency of the Treasury at Washington, repealed all requirements as to redemption agents elsewhere, relieved the banks of the obligation to keep a reserve upon their circulating notes, and substituted therefor the requirement that every bank should keep up a redemption fund in the hands of the Treasurer of the United States equal to 5 per cent. of its outstanding circulation.

The following table, compiled from the Treasurers' reports, shows the practical working of the law as to the 5 per cent. redemption fund:

REDEMPTION OF CIRCULATION OF BANKS IN THE HANDS OF RECEIVERS, OF THOSE IN VOLUNTARY LIQUIDATION, AND OF THOSE REDUCING CIRCULATION UNDER THE ACT OF JUNE 20, 1874.

The redemption of the circulating notes of failed banks at the United States Treasury was provided for originally as it is now, by giving the Comptroller power to cancel or to sell the bonds of the banks, and in case of deficiency in the proceeds to make it good out of the assets of the corporation; but before the act of 1874 went into effect the notes of such banks were called in by public advertisement, whereas now they are left in circulation until they are brought by the ordinary currents of redemption into the office of the Treasurer or of one of the assistant treasurers, or into the hands of a designated depository of public moneys, or one of the national-bank depositaries.

Section 8 of the act of June 20, 1874, requires the Treasurer, assistant treasurers, designated depositaries, and national-bank depositaries to assort and return to the Treasury for redemption the notes of such national banks as have failed, or have gone into voluntary liquidation, and of all such as shall thereafter fail or go into such liquidation.

The following table, compiled from the records of the Bureau of the Currency, shows the course of redemption of the notes of failed banks:

Total circulation of all failed banks, $14,818,276; amount redeemed, $13,392,311; balance outstanding or lost, $1,425,965.

TABLE SHOWING, BY YEARS, FROM OCTOBER 1, 1865, TO NOVEMBER 1, 1887, THE TOTAL CIRCULATION OF BANKS FAILED, THE AMOUNT REDEEMED, AND THE BALANCE OUTSTANDING AT CLOSE OF EACH YEAR. (COMPILED FROM REPORTS OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY.)

to the amount of bonds to be withdrawn, and up to July 14, 1870, banks for one year after going into voluntary liquidation had to resort to the same means in order to withdraw their bonds, but after the expiration of the year such banks might deposit lawful money for the difference between the whole amount of circulation issued to them and the amount surrendered, and thereupon get back the rest of their bonds. The amount of such deposits and the time at which they should be made were left to the voluntary choice of the bank. The act of July 14, 1870, made the deposit of lawful money obligatory upon liquidating banks, and the act of June 20, 1874, fixed six months after notice of liquidation as the limit of time allowed for making such deposits.

The act of June 20, 1874, provided also that any national banking association might withdraw its circulating notes upon the deposit of lawful money with the Treasurer of the United States in sums of not less than $9,000. Under this act, and on account of liquidating and insolvent banks, and under section 6 of the act of July 12, 1882, which provides for a deposit of lawful money to retire the old circulation of national banks whose corporate existence has been extended, $371,882,780 of lawful money has been deposited with the Treasurer. This includes $2,663,720 for redemption of the notes of national gold banks and $75,806,357 for the redemption of national-bank notes under section 6 of the act of July 12, 1882.

During the year ending October 31, 1887, lawful money to the amount of $61,387,320 was deposited with the Treasurer to retire circulation, of which $1,169,472 was deposited by banks in liquidation, $36,664,668 by banks reducing circulation under the act of June 20, 1874, and $23,553,180 by banks retiring old circulation under the act of July 12, 1882. The amount previously deposited under the acts of June 20, 1874, and July 12, 1882, was $260,463,378; by banks in liquidation, $64,276,892; making a total of $386,127,590. Deducting from the total the amount of circulating notes redeemed and destroyed without re-issue, which was $283,301,453, there remained in the hands of the Treasurer on October 31, 1887, $102,826,137 of lawful money for the redemption and retirement of national bank circulation, including $239,929 for the redemption of the circulating notes of national gold banks.

Prior to June 20, 1874, there were redeemed and destroyed $10,431,135, and since that date $272,870,317 of bank notes have been redeemed, destroyed, and retired. This latter amount includes $2,423,791 of the notes of national gold banks, and $30,728,515 of the notes of national banks whose corporate existence has been extended under the act of July 12, 1882.

There are at present no national gold banks in existence. Of those which had been organized, three went into voluntary liquidation and the others became currency banks, under the provisions of the act approved February 14, 1880.

Under all the laws now in operation the Treasurer has received for redemption up to November 1, 1887, national-bank notes aggregating in amount $1,795,093,803.

During the past year the receipts at the Treasury amounted to $83,243,017, of which amount $30,052,077, or 36 per cent., was received from the banks in the city of New York, and $11,006,900, or 13 per cent., from banks in the city of Boston. The amount received from Philadelphia was $6,896,189; from Chicago, $5,220,200; from Cincinnati, $2,650,868; from Saint Louis, $3,219,686; from Baltimore, $2,708,500; from New Orleans, $1,350,647; from Providence, $948,631, and from Pittsburgh, $600,889.

The following table exhibits the amount of national-bank notes received monthly for redemption by the Comptroller of the Currency during the year ending October 31, 1887, and the amount received during the same period at the redemption agency of the Treasury, together with the total amount received since the passage of the act of June 20, 1874:

There was received from the United States Treasurer $65,718,192, contained in 89,288 packages, and from banks direct, $279,620, contained in 64 packages. The work in this division, in handling this vast amount of mutilated notes, requires great accuracy, skill, and precision.

SUPERVISION.

The law imposes upon the Comptroller of the Currency the duty of exercising a supervision over the national banks, and to that end requires him to exact reports from them as to their condition on at least five days in each year, and reports of the dividends and earnings of each bank as often as dividends are declared.

The act of 1864 required reports of earnings to be made every six months, whether dividends were declared or not, and although this provision was omitted from the Revised Statutes, these reports have been continuously required by the Comptroller under the general authority to call for reports at his discretion.

The Comptroller is also authorized to cause examination of banks to be made from time to time by persons selected for that purpose by him and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The acts of 1863 and of 1864 seemed to contemplate only occasional examinations, and these by persons employed specially for the occasion. The compensation for each examination was $5 a day and mileage.

Afterwards experience appears to have led to the employment of regular examiners, and to their assignment to special districts; then followed periodical examinations, which in time arranged themselves at intervals of about twelve months.

The Revised Statutes adopted in 1874 changed the compensation of examiners from a per diem allowance and mileage to fees, graded in amount according to the capital of the bank examined, but this scale of fees was not made applicable to the examination of banks in reserve cities, in certain States named in the Statutes, and in the then Territories. In these excepted cases the Secretary of the Treasury was empowered, upon the recommendation of the Comptroller, to fix the compensation of examiner.

The act of February 19, 1875, readjusted the scale of fees.

From the beginning of the system, however, until now all examinations have been at the expense of the examined bank, which appears to be a sacrifice of principle to governmental economy.

It would appear that the supervision of the national banks by the Comptroller of the Currency was intended originally only to protect the revenue from being defrauded and the public from suffering loss through improper issues of circulating notes, but in process of time the supervision came to be extended so as to serve as a protection to depositors against the maladministration of directors; and quite recently it has been assumed that examiners are expected to discover the defalcations of cashiers and tellers, fraudulent entries in the books of banks, and false statements of assets and liabilities in cases where the president and directors, or some of them, have failed to make such discoveries.

However desirable it may be that examiners should be encouraged to fulfill this extreme expectation, yet no one of practical experience would rely upon an examiner who comes only once a year and who can afford to stay but a single day, to discover thefts or false entries that have been successfully concealed from directors who are always present and whose own money is being stolen.

All efforts must be futile that are directed to supplying by means of official examination an effective substitute for the vigilance and personal accountability of directors. Legislative or administrative force applied to such efforts will be misapplied and wasted.

The only reasonable theory of accountability and supervision is this: The officers of the bank should be accountable to the directors for the honesty and efficiency of its interior administration; the president and directors should be responsible to the public for such an organization as tends to prevent fraud and to detect irregularities. To this end they should especially be required to satisfy themselves personally that all the officers are of good character and reputable conduct; that they receive sufficient compensation to lift them above undue temptation; that the books of the bank are accurately kept and always up to date; that every statement and report emanating from the bank conforms to the books and the facts, and that no laxity of internal administration induces to fraud by displaying opportunities for its perpetration and concealment.

Only banks thus organized and administered are in condition to undergo official examination, which strictly should not be extended beyond the ascertainment, first, that the bank really is thus organized and administered; second, that no law has been violated in respect to loans, reserve, investments, bad debts, or dividends; and, third, that the assets are really worth the amounts representing them on the books of the bank.

Finally it should be the aim and duty of the Comptroller of the Currency to bring every national bank into the condition of organization and administration described, and he should labor to keep every bank in such condition by a scrutiny of its reports, by correspondence, and by means of examinations.

It is probable that the great majority of banks are properly organized and administered, but it is unfortunately certain that quite too many are not so, and among these arise from time to time the scandals that divert public attention from the general honesty and excellence of national-bank administration to sporadic cases of fraud or imbecility.

While the present system of examinations and reports has no doubt contributed materially to the general improvement of the banks, there are two things which seem to me essential to its completeness: first, a stern enforcement through the courts of the responsibilities of officers and directors, both criminal and pecuniary; and secondly, the assumption by the Government of the expense attending examinations.

Section 5209 of the Revised Statutes of the United States seems broad enough to cover most cases of misappropriation by directors and officers, and section 5239 subjects directors to pecuniary responsibility for all violations of law causing damages to depositors, stockholders or others.

When the capital of a bank is found to have been impaired by losses or otherwise, the Comptroller of the Currency is compelled to decide among the following:

1. He may permit a reduction of capital.
2. He may approve of voluntary liquidation.
3. He may require and empower the directors to assess the shareholders.
4. He may proceed against the corporation under section 5239 and subject the directors to damages for any losses to stockholders or to others by violations of law knowingly committed or permitted by them.

Manifestly the Comptroller can choose the latter course only when the losses can be shown to be fairly due to violations of law known to the directors as a body, and it is difficult to prove such knowledge, because the necessary evidence is generally controlled by the directors themselves. On the other hand, it is obviously unjust that stockholders should lose their investments, or be subjected to assessment, when the losses are due to violation of law committed within range of every director's scrutiny and often with the knowledge and for the benefit of one or more members of the board, but of which personal knowledge can not be specifically established in a sufficient number of cases.

It would appear from this point of view to be very important that the law should be so framed as to establish against all directors an antecedent presumption that they know and consent to whatever is done in the bank habitually, and to whatever else goes on there that an ordinarily intelligent business man would discover by the use of reasonable diligence.

If this were done, stockholders of national banks would come in for their due share of protection, and directors would attend to their duties more faithfully than many of them now do, while both the examinations, and the reports made to the Comptroller directly by the banks would be more trustworthy.

EXAMINATIONS.

It is of the highest importance to the banks as a body, as well as to the public, that examiners should be expert, vigilant, and trustworthy, and that the examinations should be frequent and unexpected.

While the examiners now employed are generally competent, and many of them are excellent, yet in some cases the territory to be covered is too large to permit of anything like sustained observation by the examiners, and the pay is too small to secure the best men for the work. Examiners must be considered as of two classes, those whose supervision is confined to comparatively a few banks in proximity to each other, and those who have to travel over a great area, visiting a number of solitary banks, each of limited resources.

In most of the large cities the banks are numerous enough to permit of an examiner being employed for each city exclusively, and the compensation is sufficient to secure thoroughly competent men.

Again, in the South and West the banks are so sparsely scattered over great areas that it takes a great deal of time and costs a great deal in traveling expenses to make the rounds of a district, while the capital of each bank is so small that a great many must be assigned to one man, in order that the aggregate fees may amount to enough to compensate him. For example, one examiner has to travel all over South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas to examine ninety banks.

If all the State banks in the West and South were in the national system, the examination districts in those sections could be subdivided to the great improvement of the supervision in thoroughness and effectiveness.

As has already been said, it would be a great improvement if the examiners could be paid by the Government, and I feel constrained to repeat the recommendation that provision be made for inspectors or supervising examiners. I also respectfully recommend that provision be made for periodical conferences of examiners.

REPORTS.

The reports made by banks upon the requisition of the Comptroller are of two classes, those intended to inform the public as to each bank's condition and those intended for the information of the Comptroller only.

The reports intended for the public are required to be published, and it is the duty of the Comptroller to see that this requirement is complied with. To this end a copy of each publication has to be filed in the Bureau, together with the affidavit of the publisher, verifying the bank's compliance with the law as to the number of insertions.

During the past year 14,802 reports of condition, about 6,000 reports of dividends and earnings, and 2,833 reports from examiners have been received at the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and fully 13,000 letters and circulars have been sent out in connection with them. The reports received are all carefully examined, compared with one another, and abstracts are made from them.

From these various reports, after examination and verification, the subjoined tables have been compiled, and other tables compiled from the same sources will be found in the Appendix, showing the condition of the reserve of national banks, their loans and discounts, abstract of reports of dividends and earnings, ratios to capital and to capital and surplus, and other valuable information as to the condition of the national banks on the date of the last report.

A large table, on folded sheet, appended hereto, exhibits for October 5, 1887, in aggregate, every detail embraced in the tabulated reports required of the banks. Similar tables are made up for the information of the Comptroller from the reports gathered from all banks five times each year. The amounts are given separately for each State, reserve city, and Territory.

DIAGRAM.

With the report of 1886 a diagram was submitted grouping graphically the main features of the national banking system, and showing by continuous lines the variations occurring between January 1, 1866, and October 7, 1886. It has not been considered necessary to reproduce this diagram, because any one interested in the subject can extend the lines by means of the figures contained in the summary of the condition of the banks, given on page 2 of this report.

The following table groups in a compendious form the most important facts shown in the diagram, extended to October 5, 1887. The exact figures in each case are given in the table; in the diagram they had to be abridged into round millions.

An examination of this table shows that the aggregate capital, surplus, undivided profits, circulation, and deposits have increased from $1,208,781,908 in January, 1866, to $2,240,587,843 in October, 1887, which is less than double, while the loans and discounts have gone up from $500,650,109 to $1,580,045,647, which is more than treble, showing how much more widely the banks are now identified with the general business of the country than they were twenty-two years ago.

The investments in bonds have taken an opposite course. Amounting to $440,380,350 in 1866, increasing to $712,437,900 in April, 1879, they had subsided by October 5 last to $223,754,450, almost exactly half what they were in 1866, and considerably less than a third of what they momentarily amounted to in 1879.

The specie, which at the beginning of the period was but $16,909,363, had got down in October, 1875, to $8,050,330, is now $165,085,454, and in July, 1885, was $177,612,492. In October, 1886, the specie amounted to $156,387,696.

It is interesting to see how these changes appear when reduced to percentages.

The capital, surplus, undivided profits, circulation, and deposits constitute together the fund upon which a bank does its business.

Loans and discounts, United States bonds, specie, etc., are different forms in which this fund is invested. Taking the fund at $1,208,731,908 in 1866, and at $2,240,587,843 in 1887, these investments represent the following proportions of those amounts, viz:

|                          | 1866.          | 1887.          |
|--------------------------|----------------|----------------|
|                          | Per ct. | Per ct. |
| Loans and discounts..... | 41 32          | 70. 52         |
| United States bonds..... | 36. 36         | 9. 98          |
| Specie.....              | 1. 57          | 7. 37          |
| Total.....               | 79. 25         | 87. 87         |

Another striking fact is that in 1866 the circulation was $213,239,530, and in 1887 it is only $167,283,343. At the former period, therefore, the circulation was nearly 45 per cent. of the capital, surplus, and undivided profits, while now it is only about 20 per cent.

LOANS.

The following table gives a classification of the loans of the national banks in each of the cities of New York, Chicago, and Saint Louis, and in the three cities of Boston, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, in the other reserve cities, and in the rest of the country, at nearly the same dates in each of the last three years:

RESERVE.

The act of February 25, 1863, contained the following provision :

SEC. 41. And be it further enacted, That every such association shall at all times have on hand, in lawful money of the United States, an amount equal to at least twenty-five per centum of the aggregate amount of its outstanding notes of circulation and its deposits; and whenever the amount of its outstanding notes of circulation and its deposits shall exceed the above-named proportion for the space of twelve days, or whenever such lawful money of the United States shall at any time fall below the amount of twenty-five per centum of its circulation and deposits, such association shall not increase its liabilities by making any new loans or discounts otherwise than by discounting or purchasing bills of exchange, payable at sight, nor make any dividend of its profits, until the required proportion between the aggregate amount of its outstanding notes of circulation and its deposits and lawful money of the United States shall be restored: Provided, however, That clearing-house certificates, representing specie or lawful money specially deposited for the purpose of any clearing-house association, shall be deemed to be lawful money in the possession of any association belonging to such clearing-house holding and owning such certificates, and considered to be a part of the lawful money which such association is required to have, under the foregoing provisions of this section: Provided, further, That any balance due to any association organized under this act in other places from any association in the cities of Boston, Providence, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, Saint Louis, or New Orleans, in good credit, subject to be drawn for at sight, and available to redeem their circulating notes and deposits, may be deemed to be a part of the lawful money which such association in other places than the cities of Boston, Providence, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, Saint Louis, and New Orleans are required to have by the foregoing provisions of this section, to the extent of three-fifths of the said amount of twenty-five per centum required. And it shall be competent for the Comptroller of the Currency to notify any such association whose lawful money reserve, as aforesaid, shall fall below said proportion of twenty-five per centum, to make good such reserve; and if such association shall fail for thirty days thereafter so to make good its reserve of lawful money of the United States, the Comptroller may, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, appoint a receiver to wind up the business of such association, as provided in this act.

The corresponding clauses of the act of June 3, 1864, are as follows:

SEC. 31. That every association in the cities hereinafter named shall, at all times, have on hand, in lawful money of the United States, an amount equal to at least twenty-five per centum of the aggregate amount of its notes in circulation and its deposits; and every other association shall, at all times, have on hand, in lawful money of the United States, an amount equal to at least fifteen per centum of the aggregate amount of its notes in circulation, and of its deposits. And whenever the lawful money of any association in any of the cities hereinafter named shall be below the amount of twenty-five per centum of its circulation and deposits, and whenever the lawful money of any other association shall be below fifteen per centum of its circulation and deposits, such association shall not increase its liabilities by making any new loans or discounts otherwise than by discounting or purchasing bills of exchange payable at sight, nor make any dividend of its profits until the required proportion between the aggregate amount of its outstanding notes of circulation and deposits and its lawful money of the United States shall be restored: Provided, That three-fifths of said fifteen per centum may consist of balances due to an association available for the redemption of its circulating notes from associations approved by the comptroller of the currency, organized under this act, in the cities of Saint Louis, Louisville, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Albany, Leavenworth, San Francisco, and Washington City: Provided, also, That clearing-house certificates, representing specie or lawful money specially deposited for the purpose of any clearing-house association, shall be deemed to be lawful money in the possession of any association belonging to such clearing-house holding and owning such certificate, and shall be considered to be a part of the lawful money which such association is required to have under the foregoing provisions of this section: Provided, That the cities of Charleston and Richmond may be added to the list of cities in the national associations of which other associations may keep three-fifths of their lawful money, whenever, in the opinion of the comptroller of the currency, the condition of the southern states will warrant it. And it shall be competent for the comptroller of the currency to notify any associations, whose lawful money reserve, as aforesaid, shall be below the amount to be kept on hand, as aforesaid, to make good such reserve; and if such association shall fail for thirty days thereafter so to make good its reserve of lawful money of the United States, the Comptroller may, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, appoint a receiver to wind up the business of such association, as provided in this act.

SEC. 32. That each association organized in any of the cities named in the foregoing section shall select, subject to the approval of the comptroller of the currency, an association in the city of New York at which it will redeem its circulating notes at par. And each of such associations may keep one-half of its lawful money reserve in cash deposits in the city of New York. And each association not organized within the cities named in the preceding section shall select, subject to the approval of the comptroller of the currency, an association in either of the cities named in the preceding section, at which it will redeem its circulating notes at par, and the comptroller shall give public notice of the names of the associations so selected at which redemptions are to be made by the respective associations, and of any change that may be made of the association at which the notes of any association are redeemed. If any association shall fail either to make the selection or to redeem its notes as aforesaid, the comptroller of the currency may, upon receiving satisfactory evidence thereof, appoint a receiver in the manner provided for in this act to wind up its affairs: Provided, That nothing in this section shall relieve any association from its liability to redeem its circulating notes at its own counter at par, in lawful money on demand; And provided, further, That every association formed or existing under the provisions of this act shall take and receive at par, for any debt or liability to said association, any and all notes or bills issued by any association existing under and by virtue of this act.

Sections 5191, 5192, and 5195 of the Revised Statutes preserved substantially the provisions of the act of 1864.

The act of June 20, 1874, evidently drafted before the adoption of the Revised Statutes, although not approved until afterward, made the following amendment of the act of June 3, 1864, which it enacts shall be hereafter known as the "National Bank Act":

SEC. 2. That section thirty-one of the "National Bank Act" be so amended that the several associations therein provided for shall not hereafter be required to keep on hand any amount of money whatever by reason of the amount of their respective circulations; but the moneys required by said section to be kept at all times on hand shall be determined by the amount of deposits in all respects as provided for in the said section.

SEC. 3. That every association organized, or to be organized, under the provisions of the said act, and of the several acts amendatory thereof, shall at all times keep and have on deposit in the Treasury of the United States, in lawful money of the United States, a sum equal to five per centum of its circulation, to be held and used for the redemption of such circulation; which sum shall be counted as a part of its lawful reserve, as provided in section two of this act; and when the circulating notes of any such associations, assorted or unassorted, shall be presented for redemption, in sums of one thousand dollars or any multiple thereof, to the Treasurer of the United States, the same shall be redeemed in United States notes. All notes so redeemed shall be charged by the Treasurer of the United States to the respective associations issuing the same, and he shall notify them severally, on the first day of each month, or oftener, at his discretion, of the amount of such redemptions; and whenever such redemptions for any association shall amount to the sum of five hundred dollars, such association so notified shall forthwith deposit with the Treasurer of the United States a sum in United States notes equal to the amount of its circulating notes so redeemed. And all notes of national banks, worn, defaced, mutilated, or otherwise unfit for circulation, shall, when received by any assistant treasurer, or at any designated depository of the United States, be forwarded to the Treasurer of the United States for redemption as provided herein. And when such redemptions have been so reimbursed, the circulating notes so redeemed shall be forwarded to the respective associations by which they were issued; but if any of such notes are worn, mutilated, defaced, or rendered otherwise unfit for use, they shall be forwarded to the Comptroller of the Currency and destroyed, and replaced as now provided by law: Provided, That each of said associations shall reimburse to the Treasury the charges for transportation, and the costs for assorting such notes; and the associations hereafter organized shall also severally reimburse to the Treasury the cost of engraving such plates as shall be ordered by each association respectively; and the amount assessed upon each association shall be in proportion to the circulation redeemed, and be charged to the fund on deposit with the Treasurer: And provided further, That so much of section thirty-two of said national-bank act requiring or permitting the redemption of its circulating notes elsewhere than at its own counter, except as provided for in this section, is hereby repealed.

It will be observed that a strict construction of the act of June 3, 1864, and of subsequent legislation, would exclude any association organized under the act of February 25, 1863, from acting as a reserve agent. This was probably not intended, but it should be corrected in justice to the older associations.

The act of March 3, 1887, is as follows:

That whenever three-fourths in number of the national banks located in any city of the United States having a population of fifty thousand people shall make application to the Comptroller of the Currency, in writing, asking that the name of the city in which such banks are located shall be added to the cities named in sections fifty-one hundred and ninety-one and fifty-one hundred and ninety-two of the Revised Statutes, the Comptroller shall have authority to grant such request, and every bank located in such city shall at all times thereafter have on hand, in lawful money of the United States, an amount equal to at least twenty-five per centum of its deposits, as provided in sections fifty-one hundred and ninety-one and fifty-one hundred and ninety-five of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 2. That whenever three-fourths in number of the national banks located in any city of the United States having a population of two hundred thousand people shall make application to the Comptroller of the Currency, in writing, asking that such city may be a central reserve city, like the city of New York, in which one-half of the lawful-money reserve of the national banks located in other reserve cities may be deposited, as provided in section fifty-one hundred and ninety-five of the Revised Statutes, the Comptroller shall have authority, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to grant such request, and every bank located in such city shall at all times thereafter have on hand, in lawful money of the United States, twenty-five per centum of its deposits, as provided in section fifty-one hundred and ninety-one of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 3. That section three of the act of January 14, 1875, entitled "An act to provide for the resumption of specie payments," be, and the same is, hereby amended by adding after the words "New York" the words "and the city of San Francisco, California."

A review and comparison of the course of legislation as to "reserve" shows that originally all associations, wherever located, were required to keep, either in cash or subject to sight draft, funds in hand equal to at least 25 per cent. of all obligations payable on demand. Subsequently a distinction was made between associations in certain named cities and those located elsewhere, and the latter were required to keep only 15 per cent. reserve upon the aggregate of deposits and circulation. The amount that might be kept with redemption agents was limited to three-fifths of 15 per cent. for associations generally, and to one-half of 25 per cent. for those in reserve cities, and in the latter case New York was the only place in which the banks in other redemption cities might have redemption agents.

At a later period the fund to be kept for the redemption of circulation was separated from the remaining reserve to be held against deposits; it was fixed at 5 per cent. of the outstanding circulation, and was required to be kept on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States. Besides being specifically devoted to the redemption of circulation, this fund is also authorized to be counted as part of the reserve against deposits.

Simultaneously with this provision as to the amount and location of the redemption fund the banks were relieved of the obligation to keep a reserve on circulation, but were required to keep in reserve funds to the amounts represented by 15 per cent. and 25 per cent. respectively upon their deposits.

The new regulation as to redemption of circulation dispensed with redemption agents, but the act of June 20, 1874, re-enacted the provision as to the proportion of reserve that might consist of balances due from approved associations in the cities formerly named as cities of redemption. These cities thus came to be called "reserve cities," and during the present year the term has been incorporated formally into the law, and provision has been made for central reserve cities as well, and also for an increase in the number of both reserve cities and central reserve cities.

Tables will be found in the Appendix,* showing by States, Territories, central reserve cities, and reserve cities the state of the reserve of the national banks therein at each report of condition during the years 1882 to 1887, both inclusive. These tables are worthy of careful examination, because they show that banks generally keep reserves in excess of the statutory requirement, and that banks remote from money centers keep not only nearly double the amount required, but that they habitually have in cash more than the 15 per cent. total requirement.

As some banks included in these tables are known to be often short of reserve, it is manifest that the majority must be habitually stronger than the averages here shown, and from this fact it may be inferred that the requirement of the law is in no degree excessive, and that banks that do not conform to it are not prudently managed.

These tables should be especially instructive to the managers of banks, encouraging and confirming as they do the wisdom of those who keep always strong, and rebuking and warning as they also do those who, too eager for gain, allow their reserves to fall below the line of prudence and of safety.

The including of the 5 per cent. redemption fund on deposit with the Treasurer at Washington in the reserve against deposits seems to be either a misconstruction of the act of June 20, 1874, or an anomaly in that act.

The language seems to admit of a strained construction opposite to that placed upon it, but if the most obvious construction is the correct one, then the provision should be repealed.

* See note, foot of page 456.

The money held by the Treasurer is never available for paying depositors, and it bears no constant ratio to the amount of deposits.

Several banks have so large a circulation and have such small deposits that the 5 per cent. redemption fund with the Treasurer fulfills the entire requirement as to reserve against deposits, and while these are extreme cases they serve to show the practical result of this provision of the law.

On the other hand, there is an anomaly in the assumption which appears to have been made heretofore that national bank notes on hand should not be counted in the reserve.

They are specifically made receivable by all national banking associations, and for all dues to the Government (except customs duties), and they are certainly current all over the country.

It is in the line of public policy to maintain the monetary function of these circulating notes upon the general plane on which the law places all the rest of the currency.

For these reasons these notes should obviously be no longer discriminated against by being excluded from a function to which all the other constituents of the currency are now admitted on equal terms.

On October 5, 1887, the total 5 per cent. fund amounted to $8,310,442 while the national bank currency held by all banks amounted to $21,937,884.

It would, therefore, be a relief to banks generally to be allowed to count in their reserve the latter instead of the former amount.

The subjoined table brings forward to the latest date the usual summary of information as to the course of deposits and reserves since the act of June 20, 1874, went into effect. It shows the amount of deposits and the state of the reserve at about October 1 of each year, in each central reserve city, in all the reserve cities, and in the States and Territories, together with a general summary embracing all banks.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE NEW YORK CLEARING-HOUSE.

The New York Clearing-House Association is composed of 65 members, of which 45 are national banks, 19 are State banks, and the other member is the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York. Two national banks and 15 State banks in the city do not belong to the association, but clear through associate members. Mr. W. A. Camp, the manager of the association, has kindly supplied the data for the following tables, showing the transactions during the year ending October 1, 1887:

* When the Government ceased issuing gold certificates, December 1, 1878, the New York banks agreed to have a common depository for their gold coin, and in that way retain the use of certificates at the clearing-house. This has been found convenient and saves the expense and cost of moving large amounts in specie. The Bank of America performs this function.

Following is a comparative statement of transactions of the New York Clearing-House for thirty-four years, showing for each year the number of banks, aggregate capital, clearings, and balances, average of the daily clearings and balances, and the percentage of balances and clearings:

† Exchanges.

From the above table it will be seen that the exchanges in New York City amounted to 66.9 per cent. of the whole sum, and the balances in that city were nearly 42.8 per cent. of the total balances.

DUTIES, ASSESSMENTS, AND REDEMPTION CHARGES.

National banks are subject to a semi-annual duty of one-half of 1 per cent. upon the average amount of their notes in circulation during the preceding six months. They are also required by the act of June 20, 1874, to pay the cost of the redemption of their notes at the office of the Treasurer of the United States at Washington, and the cost of the plates from which their notes are printed. Banks extending their corporate existence have to pay for new plates. Previously to the act of June 20, 1874, the expense of the plates had been paid out of the tax on the banks, which at that time attached to capital and deposits as well as to circulation.

The banks are further required to pay the fees of the examiners employed to ascertain their condition, under section 5240, Revised Statutes of the United States.

The taxes and assessments collected during the past year were as follows :

|                                                             |                   |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|
| Semi-annual duty on circulation.....                        | $2, 044, 922. 75 |

| Assessments for cost of plates, new banks.....              | 18, 850. 00       |
| Assessments for cost of plates, extended banks.....         | 1, 750. 00        |

It has not been customary heretofore to include assessments with taxes, but it seems proper to do so.

The following table is a comparative statement of taxes assessed as semi-annual duty on circulation, cost of redemption of notes, cost of plates, and examiners' fees for the past five years:

STATE TAXATION OF NATIONAL BANKS.

There has been for some years more or less friction arising out of what is claimed to be discrimination against national banks in the tax laws of some of the States, and in consequence a contention has been going on as to the meaning of so much of section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as imposes a restriction upon State legislatures in determining and directing the manner of assessing and collecting taxes on national-bank shares. Section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is as follows:

Nothing herein shall prevent all the shares in any association from being included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares, in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the State within which the association is located; but the legislature of each State may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within the State, subject only to the two restrictions, that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by non-residents of any State shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere. Nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real property of associations from either State, county, or municipal taxes, to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

It will be seen that the only restrictions upon State legislatures in determining and directing the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banks located within the State are two: first, a restriction as to the manner, viz: "that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the State;" and, secondly, a restraint as to the place of taxation, which it is needless to quote, as no doubt seems to have arisen as to its meaning.

The contention over the true interpretation of the clause applying to the rate of taxation has been serious.

In various States the banks have appealed from local assessors and tax collectors to the courts, and during the past year the Supreme Court has finally laid down the meaning and intent of this clause.

The only question now open is whether the clause, as construed by the Supreme Court during the past year, expresses the purpose of Congress, and this question can be answered by Congress alone.

It is claimed by the national banks in many States that the construction placed upon the law deprives them of the full measure of protection which it was the intention of Congress to provide.

Following is the full text of the decision of the Supreme Court:

Mr. Justice MATTHEWS delivered the opinion of the court.

The bill in this case was filed by the appellant, an association organized as a national bank, in the city of New York, the object and prayer of which were to restrain the collection of taxes assessed upon its stockholders in respect to their shares therein, on the ground that the taxes assessed and sought to be collected by the defendants were illegal and void under section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as being at a greater rate than those assessed under the laws of New York upon other moneyed capital in the hands of the individual citizens of that State. The assessment in question was made for the year 1885, by the proper officer, acting in pursuance of section 312 of an act of the legislature of the State of New York, passed July 1, 1882, entitled "An act to revise the statutes of this State relating to banks, banking and trust companies," which reads as follows:

SEC. 312. The stockholders in every bank or banking association organized under the authority of this State, or of the United States, shall be assessed and taxed on the value of their shares of stock therein; said shares shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of such stockholders in the assessment of taxes at the place, city, town, or ward where such bank or banking association is located, and not elsewhere, whether the said stockholders reside in said place, city, town, or ward or not; but in the assessment of said shares each stockholder shall be allowed all the deductions and exceptions allowed by law in assessing the value of other taxable personal property owned by individual citizens of this State, and the assessment and taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is made or assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of this State. In making such assessment there shall also be deducted from the value of such shares such sum as is in the same proportion to such value as is the assessed value of the real estate of the bank or banking association, and in which any portion of their capital is invested, in which said shares are held, to the whole amount of the capital stock of said bank or banking association. Nothing herein contained shall be held or construed to exempt the real estate of banks or banking associations from either State, county, or municipal taxes, but the same shall be subject to State, county, municipal, and other taxation to the same extent and rate and in the same manner according to its value, as other real estate is taxed. The local authorities charged by law with the assessment of the said shares shall, within ten days after they have completed such assessment, give written notice to each bank or banking association of such assessment of the shares of its respective shareholders, and no personal or other notice to such shareholders of such assessment shall be necessary for the purpose of this act.

The hearing in the circuit court was had upon an agreed statement of facts, as follows:

"It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the parties to the above-entitled suit, that, for the purpose of the trial of this cause, the facts hereinafter stated are true, and that the cause be submitted for trial and decree upon such statement alone, together with the pleadings:

"1. That the complainant, on the second Monday of January, A. D. 1885, and for several months prior thereto, had a capital stock of the par value of $1,000,000 and a surplus fund of $200,000; that nearly the whole of said capital and surplus fund was during that period, invested in bonds of the United States of the par value of $949,000, and of a market value and cost largely exceeding that sum; that its shares of stock were each of the par value of $100 and of the number of 10,000, and were then held by 142 persons and corporations, 50 of whom, owning 1,877 shares, were residents of States other than the State of New York, and the remainder residents of the State of New York.

"2. That, on the second Monday of January, 1885, the proper tax officers of the city of New York, acting under chapter 409 of the Laws of 1882 of the State of New York, did value and assess for taxation the shares of stock of said bank against the individual shareholders thereof, at the rate of $89 per share, after deducting the proportion of the assessed value of the real estate of said bank applicable to each share of stock, as by law required, making the total gross valuation of said shares in the hands of the shareholders the sum of $890,000, from which sum the debts of sundry indebted stockholders, amounting to $89,128, were deducted, as by law allowed, leaving the total valuation of said shares against said stockholders upon which taxes were thereafter assessed the sum of $800,872.

"3. That, on the second Monday of January, 1885, the aggregate actual value of the shares of stock of the incorporated moneyed and stock corporations incorporated by the laws of the State of New York deriving an income or profit from their capital or otherwise (not including life insurance companies, trust companies, banks, or banking associations, organized under the authority of this State or of the United States) amounted to the sum of $755,018,892; that 'Exhibit A,' hereto appended and made a part of this agreement, contains a list of the corporations whose shares of capital stock are embraced in said sum of $755,018,892, and also shows the total par value of the shares of capital stock of each of said corporations.

"4. That, at the period aforesaid, the aggregate actual value of the shares of stock of the life insurance companies incorporated under the laws of this State amounted to the sum of $3,540,000, and at the same period the aggregate value of the personal property of said companies, consisting of mortgages, loans with collateral security, State, county and municipal bonds, and railroad bonds and shares of stock of corporations (but not including the bonds of the United States nor the shares of corporations created by the State of New York), amounted to $195,257,305; all of which is shown in detail in the schedule hereto annexed, marked 'Exhibit B.'

"5. That, at the said period, the aggregate actual value of the shares of the capital stock of the trust companies existing in the State of New York and organized under its laws amounted to $32,018,900, as is shown in detail in the schedule hereto annexed, marked 'Exhibit C,' of which sum the amount of $30,215,900 was of trust companies located in the city of New York.

"6. That, at the same period, the aggregate actual value of the deposits due by the savings banks of this State to depositors was $437,107,501 (not including the surplus accumulated by the said corporations, amounting to $68,669,001).

"7. That the aggregate actual value of the bonds and stocks issued by the city of New York, subject to the provisions of chapter 552 of the Laws of 1880, at the said period, amounted to $13,467,000.

"8. That the aggregate actual value at the same period of the shares of stock of corporations created by States other than the State of New York, owned by the citizens of the State of New York, amounted to at least the sum of $250,000,000.

"9. The assessed valuation of all personal property, after making the deductions allowed by law, in the city of New York (at the said period), as shown by the annual record of the assessed valuation of real and personal estate of the said city for the year 1885, was $202,673,806. This sum included the capital of corporations (after making deductions for investments thereof in real estate, shares of New York corporations, taxable upon their capital stock under the laws of this State, and non-taxable securities), as follows:

|-------------------------------|---------------|
| Insurance companies .....     | $2, 146, 379 |
| Trust companies .....         | 156, 506      |
| Miscellaneous companies ..... | 29, 234, 409  |
| Railroad companies .....      | 12, 339, 871  |

"It also included:

|                                |              |
|--------------------------------|--------------|
| Shares of national banks ..... | 45, 046, 074 |
| Shares of State banks .....    | 15, 700, 220 |

"The sum so deducted for the value of the real estate belonging to said trust companies located in the city of New York did not exceed $2,336,572.31.

| The assessed value of the real estate in said city for said period is... | $1, 168, 443, 137 |
| And in the said State, including the city of New York, is.....           | 2, 761, 973, 845   |
| The latter sum including the sum of about.....                           | 340, 000, 000      | being the assessed value of the real estate located in said State belonging to corporations.

"The 'aggregate amount of the taxable personal estate' within the State of New York, exclusive of said city, after deducting debts due by the owners thereof for the year ending December 31, 1884, as assessed by the assessors and returned to the State comptroller, is $151,632,369.

"This sum included the capital of corporations (after making the deductions for investments thereof in real estate, shares of New York corporations taxable under their capital stock under the laws of this State and non-taxable securities), of the amount of $34,466,612.

The aggregate capital stock, taken at par, of the national banks outside of the city of New York, but within the State of New York, on December 20, 1884, as shown by the report of the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, was ..... $36,804,160

And that of State banks, outside of the said city, but within said State, as shown by the report of the bank superintendent of New York, is... 8,128,000

Total (outside of New York City) ..... 44,932,160

The total par value of the shares of national banks in said State, including the city of New York, for the period aforesaid, is ..... 83,054,160

And of the State banks ..... 32,815,700

"10. That it is the intention of the defendants, unless restrained by injunction, to collect the said tax levied by them against the shareholders of the said complainant upon said shares by the use of all needful legal process.

"11. That any statutes of the United States or of the State of New York may be cited and relied upon before the said court as if herein fully set forth."

From a decree dismissing the bill the present appeal is prosecuted.

Section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is as follows:

"Nothing herein shall prevent all the shares in any association from being included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the State within which the association is located; but the legislature of each State may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within the State, subject only to the two restrictions that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by non-residents of any State shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located and not elsewhere. Nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real property of associations from either State, county, or municipal taxes to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed."

In the present case no question is raised by the appellant as to the validity of section 312, chapter 409, of the Laws of New York of 1882, considered by itself, nor in reference to the rule of valuation or assessment which it prescribes. No exception is taken to the form of the assessment, nor is the case based in any degree upon the dereliction of the assessing officers in the discharge of their duties, there being no allegation and no proof that they have not performed their whole duty under the statutes of the State.

The proposition which the appellant seeks to establish is, that the State of New York, in seeking to tax national-bank shares, has not complied with the condition contained in section 5219 of the Revised Statutes, that such taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State, "in that, it has by its legislation expressly exempted from all taxes in the hands of the individual citizens numerous species of moneyed capital, aggregating in actual value the sum of $1,686,000,000, whilst it has by its laws subjected national-bank shares in the hands of individual holders thereof (aggregating a par value of $83,000,000), and State-bank shares (having a like value of $22,815,700), to taxation upon their full actual value, less only a proportionate amount of the real estate owned by the bank." This exemption, it is claimed, is of a "very material part relatively" of the whole, and renders the taxation of national-bank shares void.

The exemptions thus referred to are classified as follows:

1st. The shares of stock in the hands of the individual shareholders of all incorporated "moneyed or stock corporations deriving an income or profit from their capital or otherwise, incorporated by the laws of New York, not including trust companies and life insurance companies, and State or national banks." The value of such shares, it is admitted, amounts to $755,018,892.

2d. Trust companies and life insurance companies. The actual value of the shares of stock in trust companies amounts to $32,018,900, and the actual value of the shares in life insurance companies amounts to $3,540,000, which life insurance companies, it is admitted, are the owners of personal property consisting of mortgages, loans, stocks, and bonds to the value of $195,257,305.

3d. Savings banks and the deposits therein. The deposits amount to $437,107,501, and an accumulated surplus to $68,669,001.

4th. Certain municipal bonds issued by the city of New York under an act passed in 1880, of the value of $13,467,000.

5th. Shares of stocks in corporations created by States other than New York, in the hands of individual holders, residents of said State, amounting to $250,000,000.

It is argued by the appellant that these exemptions bring the case within the decision of Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S., 689. In that case, referring to the legislation of Pennsylvania, it was said: "The burden of county taxation imposed by the latter act has at all events been removed from all bonds or certificates of loan issued by any railroad company incorporated by the State; from shares of stock in the hands of stockholders of any institution or company of the State which in its corporate capacity is liable to pay a tax into the State treasury under the act of 1859; from mortgages, judgments, and recognizances of every kind; from moneys due or owing upon articles of agreement for the sale of real estate; from all loans, however made, by corporations which are taxable for State purposes when such corporations pay into the State treasury the required tax on such indebtedness."

This enumeration of exempted property, the amounts of which were stated in the bill and admitted by the demurrer, was held to include such a material portion relatively of the moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens as to make the tax upon the shares of national banks an unfair discrimination against that class of property, but no attempt was made in the opinion of the court to define the meaning of the words "moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens" as used in the statute, or to enumerate all the various kinds of property or investments that came within its description, or to show that shares of stock in the hands of stockholders of every institution, company, or corporation of a State, having a capital employed for the purpose of earning dividends or profits for its stockholders, were taxable as moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens.

It is accordingly contended on behalf of the appellees in the present case, first, that the shares of stock in the various companies incorporated by the laws of New York as moneyed or stock corporations, deriving an income or profit from their income or otherwise, including trust companies, life insurance companies, and savings banks, are not moneyed capital in the hands of the individual citizen within the meaning of the act of Congress; second, that if any of them are, then the corporations themselves are taxed under the laws of New York in such a manner and to such an extent that the shares of stock therein are in fact subject to a tax equal to that which is assessed upon shares of national banks; and third, that if there are any exceptions, they are immaterial in amount and based upon considerations which exclude them from the operation of the rule of relative taxation intended by the act of Congress.

In view of the nature of the contention between the parties to this suit, and the extent and value of the interests involved, it becomes necessary to review with care the previous decisions of this court upon the same subject, and to endeavor to state with precision the rule of relative taxation prescribed to the States by Congress on shares of national banks.

The national-banking act of 1864 (13 Stat., 111), in addition to the restrictions now imposed upon the State taxation of national-bank shares, declared "that the tax so imposed, under the laws of any State, upon the shares of any of the associations authorized by this act, shall not exceed the rate imposed upon the shares in any of the banks organized under the authority of the State where such association is located." In the re-enactment of this statute in 1868 (15 Stat., 34), this proviso was omitted. The case of Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wallace, 573, was decided under the act of 1864 as originally enacted. In that case the taxing law of New York, which was in question, was held to be invalid, because it levied no taxes upon shares in State banks at all, the tax being assessed upon the capital of the banks after deducting that portion which was invested in securities of the United States; and it was held that this tax on the capital was not a tax on the shares of the stockholders equivalent to that on the shares in national banks. It was also decided in that case that it was competent for the States, under the permission of Congress, to tax the shares of national-bank stock held by individuals, notwithstanding the capital of the bank was invested in bonds of the United States which were not subject to taxation.

It appears, therefore, as the result of the decision in that case, that a tax upon the capital of a State bank, levied upon the value thereof, after deducting such part as was invested in non-taxable Government bonds, was less than an equivalent for a tax upon the shares of national banks from which no such deduction was permitted. Accordingly, in the case of People v. The Commissioners, 4 Wallace, 244, the complaint was made on behalf of individual owners of national-bank stock taxed in New York, that no deduction was permitted to them from the value of their shares on account of the capital of the bank being invested in non-taxable Government bonds, while such deduction was allowed in favor of insurance companies and individuals in the assessment for taxation of the value of their personal property; and it was contended, therefore, that the relators in that case were taxed upon their shares of national-bank stock at a greater rate than was assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens. In reference to this supposed inequality the court said: "The answer is, that, upon a true construction of this clause of the act, the meaning and intent of the law-makers were that the rate of taxation of the shares should be the same or not greater than upon the moneyed capital of the individual citizen, which is subject or liable to taxation. That is, no greater proportion or percentage of tax in the valuation of the shares should be levied than upon other moneyed taxable capital in the hands of the citizens. This rule seems to be as effectual a test to prevent unjust discrimination against the shareholders as could well be devised. It embraces a class which constitutes the body politic of the State, who make its laws and provide for its taxes. They can not be greater than the citizens impose upon themselves. It is known as sound policy that in every well regulated and enlightened state or government, certain descriptions of property and also certain institutions, such as churches, hospitals, academies, cemeteries, and the like, are exempt from taxation; but these exemptions have never been regarded as disturbing the rates of taxation, even where the fundamental law had ordained that it should be uniform." The Court then proceeded to show that the exclusion, as the subject of taxation, of Government securities held by individuals, from their moneyed capital, was by authority of the United States, and hence it would be a contradiction to infer that Congress meant to include the same Government securities as a part of that moneyed capital which it required to be taxed by the States at a rate equal to that imposed by the latter upon the shares held by individuals of national-bank stock.

The other objection taken to the validity of the tax complained of was, that insurance companies created under the laws of the State were authorized to deduct from the amount of their capital and surplus profits, for purposes of taxation, such part as was invested in United States securities. In reference to this the court said: "The answer is, that this clause does not refer to the rate of assessments upon insurance companies as a test by which to prevent discrimination against the shares; that is confined to the rate of assessments upon moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens. These institutions are not within the words or the contemplation of Congress; but even if they were, the answer we have already given to the deduction of these securities in the assessment of the property of individual citizens is equally applicable to them."

In Lionberger v. Rouse, 9 Wallace, 468, it was held that the proviso originally contained in the act of 1864, and omitted from the act of 1868, expressly referring to State banks, was limited to State banks of issue. The court said (p. 474): "There was nothing to fear from banks of discount and deposit merely, for in no event could they work any displacement of national-bank circulation." Of course, so far as investments in such banks are moneyed capital in the hands of individuals, they are included in the clause as it now stands.

In the case of Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wallace, 480, it was decided to be competent for the State to value, for taxation, shares of stock in a national bank at their actual value, even if in excess of their par value, provided thereby they were not taxed at a greater rate than was assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the State. It was a further question in that case whether the exemption from taxation by statute of "all mortgages, judgments, recognizances, and moneys owing upon articles of agreement for the sale of real estate" made the taxation of shares in national banks unequal and invalid. This was decided in the negative on two grounds: first, that the exemption was founded upon the just reason of preventing a double burden by the taxation both of property and of the debts secured upon it; and, second, because it was partial only, not operating as a discrimination against investments in national-bank shares. The court said: "It could not have been the intention of Congress to exempt bank shares from taxation because some moneyed capital was exempt."

The subject was further considered in the case of Adams v. Nashville, 95 U. S., 19. One of the questions in that case had reference to an exemption from taxation by State authority of interest-paying bonds issued by the municipal corporation of the city of Nashville, in the hands of individuals. It was held that the exemption did not invalidate assessment upon the shares of national banks. The court said (p. 22): "The act of Congress was not intended to curtail the State power on the subject of taxation. It simply required that capital invested in national banks should not be taxed at a greater rate than like property similarly invested. It was not intended to cut off the power to exempt particular kinds of property, if the legislature chose to do so. Homesteads to a specified value, a certain amount of household furniture (the six plates, six knives and forks, six teacups and saucers, of the old statutes), the property of clergymen to some extent, school-houses, academies, and libraries, are generally exempt from taxation. The discretionary power of the legislatures of the States over all these subjects remains as it was before the act of Congress of June, 1864. The plain intention of that statute was to protect the corporations formed under its authority from unfriendly discrimination by the States in the exercise of their taxing power."

In People v. Weaver, 100 U. S., 539, it was held that the prohibition against the taxation of national-bank shares at a greater rate than that imposed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens could not be evaded by the assessment of equal rates of taxation upon unequal valuations, and that consequently where the State statute authorized individuals to deduct the amount of debts owing by them from the assessed value of their personal property and moneyed capital subject to taxation, the owners of shares of national banks were entitled to the same deduction. The cases of The Supervisors v. Stanley, 105 U. S., 305; Hills v. Exchange Bank, Ibid., 319; Evansville Bank v. Britton, Ibid., 322, and Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S., 153, are applications of the same principle.

The rule of decision in Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wallace, 573, is not inconsistent with that followed in People v. The Commissioners, 4 Wallace, 244. In the former of these cases the comparison was between taxes levied upon the shares of national banks and taxes levied upon the capital of State banks. In the valuation of the capital of State banks for this taxation, non-taxable securities of the United States were necessarily excluded, while in the valuation of shares of national banks no deduction was permitted on account of the fact that the capital of the national banks was invested in whole or in part in Government bonds. The effect of this was, of course, to discriminate to a very important extent in favor of investments in state banks, the shares in which eo nomine were not taxed at all, while their taxable capital was diminished by the subtraction of the Government securities in which it was invested, and against national-bank shares taxed without such deduction at a value necessarily and largely based on the value of the Government securities in which by law a large part of the capital of the bank was required to be invested. In the case of People v. The Commissioners the comparison was not between the taxation of shareholders in national banks and of shareholders in State banking institutions, but between the taxation of national-bank shares and that of personal property held by individuals and insurance companies from the valuation of which the deduction was permitted of the amount of non-taxable Government securities held by them respectively. The general ground of the decision was, that the exemption was not an unfriendly discrimination against investments in national banks in favor of other investments of a similar and competing character. It was held that the exemption, under State authority, of United States securities, which it was not lawful for the State to tax, could not be considered an unwarranted exemption in that case. It was also held that the language of the act of Congress which fixed the rate of taxation upon national-bank shares, by reference to that imposed by the State "upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens," excluded from the comparison moneyed capital in the hands of corporations, unless the corporations were of that character, such as State banks were held to be in the case of Van Allen v. The Assessors, that shares of stock in them fell within the description of "moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens." In that way a distinction was established between shares of stock held in banking corporations and those held in insurance companies and other business, trading, manufacturing, and miscellaneous corporations whose business and operations were unlike those of banking institutions.

It follows, as a deduction from these decisions, that "moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens" does not necessarily embrace shares of stock held by them in all corporations whose capital is employed, according to their respective corporate powers and privileges, in business carried on for the pecuniary profit of shareholders, although shares in some corporations, according to the nature of their business, may be such moneyed capital. The rule and test of this difference is not to be found in that quality attached to shares of stock in corporate bodies generally whereby the certificates of ownership have a certain appearance of negotiability, so as easily to be transferred by delivery under blank powers of attorney, and to be dealt in by sales at the stock exchange, or used as collateral for loans, as though they were negotiable security for money. This quality, in a greater or less degree, pertains to all stocks in corporate bodies, the facility of their use in this way being in proportion to the estimated wealth and credit, present or prospective, of the corporation itself. Neither is the difference to be determined by the character of the investments in which, either by law or in fact, the bulk of the capital and the accumulated surplus of the corporation is from time to time invested. It does not follow, because these are invested in such a way as properly to constitute moneyed capital, that the shares of stock in the corporations themselves must necessarily be within the same description. Such is the case of insurance companies, in respect to which it was held, in People v. The Commissioners, that shares of stock in them were not taxable as "moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens;" and that the language of the act of Congress does not include moneyed capital in the hands of corporations.

The true test of the distinction, therefore, can only be found in the nature of the business in which the corporation is engaged.

The key to the proper interpretation of the act of Congress is its policy and purpose. The object of the law was to establish a system of national banking institutions, in order to provide a uniform and secure currency for the people, and to facilitate the operations of the Treasury of the United States. The capital of each of the banks in this system was to be furnished entirely by private individuals; but, for the protection of the Government and the people, it was required that this capital, so far as it was the security for its circulating notes, should be invested in the bonds of the United States. These bonds were not subjects of taxation; and neither the banks themselves, nor their capital, however invested, nor the shares of stock therein held by individuals, could be taxed by the States in which they were located without the consent of Congress, being exempted from the power of the States in this respect, because these banks were means and agencies established by Congress in execution of the powers of the Government of the United States. It was deemed consistent, however, with these national uses, and otherwise expedient, to grant to the States the authority to tax them within the limits of a rule prescribed by the law. In fixing those limits it became necessary to prohibit the States from imposing such a burden as would prevent the capital of individuals from freely seeking investment in institutions which it was the express object of the law to establish and promote. The business of banking, including all the operations which distinguish it, might be carried on under State laws, either by corporations or private persons, and capital in the form of money might be invested and employed by individual citizens in many single and separate operations forming substantial parts of the business of banking. A tax upon the money of individuals, invested in the form of shares of stock in national banks, would diminish their value as an investment and drive the capital so invested from this employment, if at the same time similar investments and similar employments under the authority of State laws were exempt from an equal burden. The main purpose, therefore, of Congress, in fixing limits to State taxation on investments in the shares of national banks, was to render it impossible for the State, in levying such a tax, to create and foster an unequal and unfriendly competition, by favoring institutions or individuals carrying on a similar business and operations and investments of a like character. The language of the act of Congress is to be read in the light of this policy.

Applying this rule of construction, we are led, in the first place, to consider the meaning of the words "other moneyed capital," as used in the statute. Of course it includes shares in national banks; the use of the word "other" requires that. If bank shares were not moneyed capital, the word "other" in this connection would be without significance. But "moneyed capital" does not mean all capital the value of which is measured in terms of money. In this sense, all kinds of real and personal property would be embraced by it, for they all have an estimated value as the subjects of sale. Neither does it necessarily include all forms of investment in which the interest of the owner is expressed in money. Shares of stock in railroad companies, mining companies, manufacturing companies, and other corporations, are represented by certificates showing that the owner is entitled to an interest, expressed in money value, in the entire capital and property of the corporation, but the property of the corporation which constitutes its invested capital may consist mainly of real and personal property, which, in the hands of individuals, no one would think of calling moneyed capital, and its business may not consist in any kind of dealing in money, or commercial representative of money.

So far as the policy of the Government in reference to national banks is concerned, it is indifferent how the States may choose to tax such corporations as those just mentioned, or the interest of individuals in them, or whether they should be taxed at all. Whether property interests in railroads, in manufacturing enterprises, in mining investments, and others of that description, are taxed or exempt from taxation, in the contemplation of the law, would have no effect upon the success of national banks. There is no reason, therefore, to suppose that Congress intended, in respect to these matters, to interfere with the power and policy of the States. The business of banking, as defined by law and custom, consists in the issue of notes payable on demand, intended to circulate as money where the banks are banks of issue; in receiving deposits payable on demand; in discounting commercial paper; making loans of money on collateral security; buying and selling bills of exchange; negotiating loans, and dealing in negotiable securities issued by the Government, State and national, and municipal and other corporations. These are the operations in which the capital invested in national banks is employed, and it is the nature of that employment which constitutes it in the eye of this statute "moneyed capital." Corporations and individuals carrying on these operations do come into competition with the business of national banks, and capital in the hands of individuals thus employed is what is intended to be described by the act of Congress. That the words of the law must be so limited appears from another consideration; they do not embrace any moneyed capital in the sense just defined, except that in the hands of individual citizens. This excludes moneyed capital in the hands of corporations, although the business of some corporations may be such as to make the shares therein belonging to individuals moneyed capital in their hands, as in the case of banks. A railroad company, a mining company, an insurance company, or any other corporation of that description, may have a large part of its capital invested in securities payable in money, and so may be the owners of moneyed capital; but, as we have already seen, the shares of stock in such companies held by individuals are not moneyed capital.

The terms of the act of Congress, therefore, include shares of stock or other interests owned by individuals in all enterprises in which the capital employed in carrying on its business is money, where the object of the business is the making of profit by its use as money. The moneyed capital thus employed is invested for that purpose in securities by way of loan, discount, or otherwise, which are from time to time, according to the rules of the business, reduced again to money and reinvested. It includes money in the hands of individuals employed in a similar way, invested in loans, or in securities for the payment of money, either as an investment of a permanent character, or temporarily with a view to sale or repayment and reinvestment. In this way the moneyed capital in the hands of individuals is distinguished from what is known generally as personal property. Accordingly, it was said in Evansville Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S., 322: "The act of Congress does not make the tax on personal property the measure of the tax on the bank shares in the State, but the tax on moneyed capital in the hands of the individual citizens. Credits, money loaned at interest, and demands against persons or corporations are more purely representative of moneyed capital than personal property, so far as they can be said to differ. Undoubtedly there may be said to be much personal property exempt from taxation without giving bank shares a right to similar exemption, because personal property is not necessarily moneyed capital. But the rights, credits, demands, and money at interest mentioned in the Indiana statute, from which bona-fide debts may be deducted, all mean moneyed capital invested in that way."

This definition of moneyed capital in the hands of individuals seems to us to be the idea of the law, and ample enough to embrace and secure its whole purpose and policy.

From this view, it follows that the mode of taxation adopted by the State of New York in reference to its corporations, excluding for the present trust companies and savings banks, does not operate in such a way as to make the tax assessed upon shares of national banks at a greater rate than that imposed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens.

This is the conclusion reached on similar grounds by the court of appeals of New York. In the case of McMahon v. Palmer, 102 N. Y., 176, that court said:

"Our system of laws, with reference to the taxation of incorporated companies and capital invested therein, has been carefully framed with a view of reaching all taxable property and subjecting it to equality of burden, so far as that object is attainable in a matter so complex. In view of the wide variation in the employable value of such investments and the frequent mutations in their conditions, it is by no means certain that this object has not been attained with reasonable accuracy. It is quite clear, from even this cursory review of the statutes, that if any discrimination is made by our laws in taxing capital invested, it is not to the prejudice of that employed in banking corporations. Even if this were not the result of the statute, we are of opinion that investments in the shares of companies named do not come within the meaning of that clause in the Federal statutes referring to other moneyed capital in the hands of individuals. That phrase, as generally employed, distinguishes such capital from other personal property, and investments in the various manufacturing and industrial enterprises. And this is the sense in which it is used in our tax laws, as appears by reference to the statutes."

The cases of trust companies and saving banks require separate consideration. Section 312 of chapter 409 of the act of 1882 is a re-enactment of section 3 of chapter 596 of the laws of 1880, except that in the latter trust companies were included with banks and banking institutions, so as to subject the stockholders therein to the same rule of assessment and taxation on the value of their shares of stock. The present statute omits them from the corresponding section. The consequence is, that trust companies are taxable, as other corporations, under the act of 1857, for local purposes, upon the actual value of their capital stock. By chapter 361 of the laws of 1881, as amended, they are subjected to a franchise tax, in the nature of an income tax, payable to the State for State purposes. It is argued, from this legislation, in reference to the taxation of trust companies, that it discloses an evident intent to discriminate in favor of the latter as between them and banks, including national banks; and it is argued that, considering the nature of the business in which trust companies are engaged, it is a material and unfriendly discrimination in favor of State institutions engaged to some extent in a competing business with that of national banks. Trust companies, however, in New York, according to the powers conferred upon them by their charters and habitually exercised, are not in any proper sense of the word banking institutions. They have the following powers: To receive moneys in trust and to accumulate the same at an agreed rate of interest; to accept and execute all trusts of every description committed to them by any person or corporation or by any court of record; to receive the title to real or personal estate on trusts created in accordance with the laws of the State, and to execute such trusts; to act as agents for corporations in reference to issuing, registering, and transferring certificates of stock and bonds, and other evidences of debt; to accept and execute trusts for married women in respect to their separate property; and to act as guardian for the estates of infants. It is required that their capital shall be invested in bonds and mortgages on unincumbered real estate in the State of New York worth double the amount loaned thereon, or in stocks of the United States or of the State of New York, or of the incorporated cities of that State.

It is evident, from this enumeration of powers, that trust companies are not banks in the commercial sense of that word, and do not perform the functions of banks in carrying on the exchanges of commerce. They receive money on deposit, it is true, and invest it in loans, and so deal, therefore, in money and securities for money in such a way as properly to bring the shares of stock held by individuals therein within the definition of moneyed capital in the hands of individuals, as used in the act of Congress. But we fail to find in the record any sufficient ground to believe that the rate of taxation, which in fact falls upon this form of investment of moneyed capital, is less than that imposed upon shares of stock in national banks.

It appears from the tax laws of New York applicable to the subject, as judicially construed by the court of appeals of that State, that the capital stock of such a corporation is to be assessed at its actual value. The actual value of the whole capital stock is ascertained by reference, among other standards, to the market price of its shares, so that the aggregate value of the entire capital may be the market price of one multiplied by the whole number of shares. Oswego Starch Factory v. Dolloway, 21 N. Y., 449; The People v. The Commissioners of Taxes, 95 N. Y., 554. From this are to be deducted, of course, the real estate of the corporation otherwise taxed, and the value of such part of the capital stock as is invested in non-taxable property, such as securities of the United States. In addition to this, the corporation, as already stated, pays to the State, as a State tax, a tax upon its franchise based upon its income; the tax on the capital being for local purposes.

It is evident, we think, that taxation in this mode is at least equal to that upon the shares of individual stockholders, for if the same property was held for the same uses and taxed by the same rule in the hands of individuals, as moneyed capital, it would be subject to precisely the same deductions; in addition to which the individual would be entitled to make a further deduction of any debts he might owe. Upon these grounds, therefore, we are of opinion that this mode of taxing trust companies does not create the inequality which the appellant alleges.

In the case of savings banks, we assume that neither the bank itself nor the individual depositor is taxed on account of the deposits. The language of the statute (section 4, chapter 456, laws of 1857) is as follows:

"Deposits in any banks for savings, which are due to the depositors, . . . shall not be liable to taxation, other than the real estate and stocks which may be owned by such bank or company, and which are now liable to taxation under the laws of this State."

According to the stipulation in this case, the deposits in such banks amount to $437,107,501, with an accumulated surplus of $68,669,001. It can not be denied that these deposits constitute moneyed capital in the hands of individuals within the terms of any definition which can be given to that phrase; but we are equally clear that they are not within the meaning of the act of Congress in such a sense as to require that, if they are exempted from taxation, shares of stock in national banks must thereby also be exempted from taxation. No one can suppose for a moment that savings banks come into any possible competition with national banks of the United States. They are what their name indicates, banks of deposit for the accumulation of small savings belonging to the industrious and thrifty. To promote their growth and progress is the obvious interest and manifest policy of the State. Their multiplication can not in any sense injuriously affect any legitimate enterprise in the community. We have already seen that by previous decisions of this court it has been declared that "it could not have been the intention of Congress to exempt bank shares from taxation because some moneyed capital was exempt" (Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wallace, 480), and that "the act of Congress was not intended to curtail the State power on the subject of taxation. It simply required that capital invested in national banks should not be taxed at a greater rate than like property similarly invested. It was not intended to cut off the power to exempt particular kinds of property, if the legislature chose to do so." Adams v. Nashville, 95 U. S., 19. The only limitation, upon deliberate reflection, we now think it necessary to add, is that these exemptions should be founded upon just reason, and not operate as an unfriendly discrimination against investments in national-bank shares. However large, therefore, may be the amount of moneyed capital in the hands of individuals, in the shape of deposits in savings banks as now organized, which the policy of the State exempts from taxation for its own purposes, that exemption cannot affect the rule for the taxation of shares in national banks, provided they are taxed at a rate not greater than other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens otherwise subject to taxation.

It is further objected, on similar grounds, to the validity of the assessment complained of in this case that municipal bonds of the city of New York to the amount of $13,467,000 are also exempted from taxation. The amount of the exemption in this case is comparatively small, looking at the whole amount of personal property and credits which are the subjects of taxation; not large enough, we think, to make a material difference in the rate assessed upon national-bank shares; but, independently of that consideration, we think the exemption is immaterial. Bonds issued by the State of New York, or under its authority by its public municipal bodies, are means for carrying on the work of the government, and are not taxable even by the United States, and it is not a part of the policy of the government which issues them to subject them to taxation for its own purposes. Such securities undoubtedly represent moneyed capital, but as from their nature they are not ordinarily the subjects of taxation, they are not within the reason of the rule established by Congress for the taxation of national-bank shares.

The same considerations apply to what is called an exemption from taxation of shares of stock of corporations created by other States and owned by citizens of New York, which it is agreed amount to at least the sum of $250,000,000. It is not pretended, however, that this exemption is based upon the mere will of the legislature of the State. The courts of New York hold that they are not the proper subjects of taxation in the State of New York, because they have no situs within its territory for that purpose. Hoyt v. The Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y., 224; People, ex rel. etc., v. The Commissioners, 4 Hun, 595. The objection would be equally good if made to the non-taxation of real estate owned by citizens of New York, but not within its limits. Clearly the property to be taxed under the rule prescribed for the taxation of national-bank shares must be property which, according to the law of the State, is the subject of taxation within its jurisdiction.

Upon these grounds, substantially the same as those on which the circuit judge proceeded, 28 Fed. Rep., 776, we are of opinion that the appellant is not entitled to the relief prayed for.

The decree of the circuit court is, therefore, affirmed.

CONCLUSION.

I have the honor to submit in the Appendix, page 165, a summary of communications received from various parts of the country during the last year and a half, suggesting modifications of the laws by which, in the opinion of the writers, the national banking system would be improved and perpetuated.

Upwards of forty plans have been suggested, which are appropriately classed under five propositions, viz:

1. To do away with the note-issuing function of the banks.
2. To increase the inducements for the banks to deposit United States bonds as a basis of national-bank circulation.
3. To provide by a new issue of bonds for a continuance of the present or of some modified system of national-bank circulation based on United States bonds.
4. To substitute some other security for United States bonds deposited in the Treasury as a basis for national-bank circulation.
5. To allow the banks to issue circulation upon their general credit, without requiring specific security to be deposited.

The various suggestions for the deposit of gold and silver as a basis of circulation have been left out of consideration, because, as they contemplate deposits equal in value to the currency to be issued, they contain no inducement either to the public or to the banks to adopt them, and, therefore, they are obviously impracticable. The Treasury now issues gold and silver coin certificates, which answer all the purposes of such currency.

Among the propositions above stated, that which contemplates maintaining the national-bank system without any currency feature is hardly worth considering so long as it is generally conceded that Congress has no certain authority under the Constitution to charter banks that do not issue currency.

The fourth proposition, viz, to substitute State, county, and municipal securities for United States bonds as a basis of circulation, is subject to the fatal objection that the power to accept some and reject others among those securities would have to be lodged somewhere, and as its exercise would incidentally raise and depress the prices of such securities, it would be dangerous to adopt any scheme involving the confiding of such power to any official or any board.

There remain, therefore, but three propositions to be considered as within the range of probable adoption :

I.—Proposition second, to increase the inducements for the banks to deposit United States bonds as a basis of national-bank circulation.

II.—Proposition third, to provide by a new issue of bonds for a continuance of the present or of some modified system of national-bank circulation based on United States bonds.

III.—Proposition fifth, to allow the banks to issue circulation upon their general credit without requiring specific security to be deposited.

Before considering these propositions separately, it is important to observe that the case to be dealt with is that of 3,061 banks now in full operation, with bonds to the aggregate amount of $188,828,000 deposited in the Treasury, on which there is outstanding $169,215,067 of circulation.

It is obvious that this fact must exercise a controlling influence upon the discussion, because it has a paramount bearing upon the two fundamental questions, viz:

First, what is practicable, and, secondly, what is expedient?

A third question may be raised, viz, what is just to the banks? But this question is really merged in the other two, because the relations between the banks and the public are such as to render any unjust measure both inexpedient and impracticable.

It must be obvious, on merely looking at the question from this point of view, that many things that might be practicable or expedient, or both, if we were now initiating a national-bank system, may be impracticable or inexpedient when applied to the existing system.

In discussing the three propositions, therefore, their relative abstract merits must be regarded as subordinate to the effect they will have, severally, upon existing arrangements.

In order to apply this method of inquiry intelligently and effectively we must determine, first, what is sought to be remedied, and, secondly, what is sought to be accomplished beyond merely applying remedial measures.

Speaking broadly, it may be assumed that remedies are sought, first, for the present continual reduction in the volume of national-bank circulation, and, secondly, for the obstacles which the scarcity and high prices of United States bonds present to the formation of new banks, and to the increase of capital on the part of those already existing.

Beyond remedying these defects in the present law, there is a general desire to provide a permanent, safe, and popularly acceptable basis for the continued existence and the future growth of the national-bank system.

To judge properly whether any measure designed to remedy present defects or to accomplish the other ends named is likely to prove both practicable and expedient, as applied to existing conditions, note must be taken of how such a measure will affect banks differently situated, either geographically or financially, or both, because very great differences in these respects really exist among the banks, and what would attract some of them would repel others.

It will be necessary, therefore, to bear in mind that out of the 3,049 banks in operation on October 5 last, 2,150 have $150,000 capital or less, while among the rest there are 107 banks of which the capital is $1,000,000 or over, and 6 of which the capital amounts to $3,000,000 or over.

The 2,150 smaller banks are required by law to hold an amount of bonds equal to 25 per cent. of their capital, while the others, however large their capital, need hold but $50,000 of bonds, which is 10 per cent. on $500,000 capital, 5 per cent. on $1,000,000, and only 1 per cent. on $5,000,000, a discrimination which has become more and more unfavorable to the smaller banks as the bonds have become scarcer and dearer.

If all banks should be required to hold 25 per cent. of their capital in bonds, as the smaller banks are, the larger banks would quit the system, contracting the circulation by nearly $100,000,000, while, on the other hand, if the minimum of the smaller banks is reduced to, say, 10 per cent. of capital, which is about the average now required of the larger banks, it is probable that many more banks would be formed and that some of the small banks would increase their capital.

Having thus before us some of the limitations which encompass the solution of the problem, let us consider the three propositions in the order named :

1. To render the holding of United States bonds more profitable to the banks.

Of course this proposition rests upon the assumption that it is desirable for the banks to be encouraged or enabled to hold United States bonds, but this assumption needs to be substantiated. There was a time when it was important that every possible inducement should be given the banks to take these bonds, but this time is past, and the ability of the banks to do as much for the Government in some future emergency will be greatly increased by their being not only free, but inclined to dispose of all the bonds they now hold in excess of the minimum requirement. From the point of view of the Government, therefore, a very important resource in time of future need is curtailed by the banks being needlessly holders of United States bonds at a time of profound peace, and when the credit of the Treasury is at its zenith.

The proposition presents to the banks an aspect varying according to circumstances. Of course as long as the holding of bonds is obligatory every bank would like to have this holding made more profitable, but all banks are not situated alike in regard to the profitableness of circulation based on bonds. Some banks now hold much larger amounts of bonds than the law requires, while others profess to be excluded from the system because the holding of even the minimum is too great a burden; hence it must be inferred that some banks find a profit in such investments under conditions that inflict loss upon others. If, therefore, the holding of these bonds is rendered profitable to the latter class, the degree of its profitableness to the former class will be proportionately increased. This is stated by way of illustration merely and not as an objection, because, obviously, if a commensurate public advantage is secured by this augmentation of profit the incidental benefit to some banks should not be begrudged.

The most important consideration, however, is as to what the gain would be to the public regarded as distinct from the Government and the banks. Manifestly the only result that can possibly be claimed as a public gain would be a probable increase of bank-note circulation based on bonds, or at least the maintenance of the present volume of such circulation; hence the question as to the public gain involves the precedent question whether increasing the profitableness of bonds as a basis for circulation is likely to increase permanently the volume of national-bank circulation.

In the case of these bonds, as of other securities of stable intrinsic value dealt in by the general public, the market price varies directly and the amount on sale at any given time varies inversely with the number and means of purchasers, while under normal conditions purchasers vary in number and means according to the profitableness of the investment. Now, it is demonstrable that it is only the circulation obtainable upon depositing them in Washington that renders the holding of United States bonds in any degree profitable to national banks, while they are sought for and tenaciously held by other investors, who are excluded from obtaining circulation on them; hence it is probable that the present tendency to contraction of the national-bank currency is due to the scarcity and high price of bonds, resulting from the competition between new banks and outside investors for the few bonds on sale. If this is so, it follows that as the circulation is rendered more profitable the premium should go higher; and since almost all the bonds now offered for sale belong to banks reducing their circulation, the supply on the market will be seriously curtailed by any change of the law that renders it more profitable to the banks to buy these bonds than to sell them.

If this reasoning is correct, new banks can gain nothing by such measures as we are now considering, because, while they will still have to compete for their bonds with outside investors, they will also remain exposed to competition with the existing banks that are now able to get the most profit out of circulation, nor will existing banks generally be benefited, since there will remain the same disparity as now between those more and those less favorably situated for holding bonds. This reasoning carried to its ultimate results, will be found to establish the proposition that should the holding of bonds be rendered more profitable to the banks, the whole benefit will accrue to those which find such investments profitable now, and the only increase of circulation to be relied upon will be such as these banks may take out in addition to what they now have, while, per contra, the higher premium will discourage the formation of new banks and increase the insecurity now felt as to the permanence of the system.

What is desirable from the point of view of those who desire the banks to increase in number and to expand their circulation is that bonds shall decline in price, whereas all these plans tend to elevate their price, because they tend to render the holding of them by banks more profitable than it is now.

This reasoning applies to all those plans which involve raising the amount of note issues in proportion to the face of the bonds, taking the tax off circulation, etc.; but there would seem to be no objection to taking the tax off so much of the circulation as rests on the minimum amount of bonds required by law to be deposited, while such relief would be eminently just, because this being obligatory it should be made as little burdensome as possible, and it will chiefly apply to small banks remote from money centers and which are now required to hold an amount of bonds greatly exceeding in percentage upon capital the amount required of larger banks.

The second of the three practicable propositions contravenes the settled policy of Congress, which is to reduce and ultimately to extinguish the national debt, and therefore not to issue any bonds having remote maturities. The leading authorities of both political parties, the press of the country, and the people generally have approved this policy, and therefore it seems idle to expect legislation to the contrary, even for the purpose of preserving the banks.

If a suspension of this policy were the sole possible condition of preserving the banks there might be a bare possibility of its consideration, but no such argument can be sustained.

The last of the feasible projects, viz, proposition fifth, seems to be the only one containing a general principle under which the national-bank system may possibly be perpetuated. This principle is that while preserving all the other features of the system the main volume of bank currency should rest upon the credit and resources of the banks and not upon the credit of the Government.

All existing banks are entitled to the privilege of issuing circulating notes to the extent of 90 per cent. of the par of the United States bonds deposited, and this privilege can not justly be curtailed in any case without the consent of the bank. It is prudent also, on the part of the Government, to leave the law unchanged in this respect, for an emergency may hereafter arise when it will be very important to resort to the measures of 1863 for rallying the banks to the support of the Treasury, and in such a case it would be convenient to have all the machinery in working order.

On the other hand, there may be good reason why banks which are now being constrained by various influences to bring their circulation on bonds down to the minimum, should be accorded the privilege of issuing currency in addition to that secured by the bonds, if such issues can be subjected to conditions that will preserve the present high credit of the national-bank currency.

With the reservation, therefore, that whatever new legislation is proposed should be additional to, and not in repeal of, existing laws as to the deposit of bonds, whether obligatory or optional, and as to the privilege of issuing currency to 90 per cent. of such deposits, we may proceed to the examination of the plans grouped under proposition fifth.

These plans are ten in number, and they may be arranged in sub-groups according to the basis which they propose for the issue of circulation additional to that which is secured by United States bonds. This basis varies in the different plans: First, according to the volume of circulation to be permitted; second, according to the security underlying the bank-notes; third, according to the provision made for their redemption.

The limitation of volume varies in the different plans from 25 per cent. to 100 per cent. upon capital, but no reasons are assigned in any case for the percentage proposed. It seems to be assumed that this is a matter of either fanciful or purely arbitrary selection.

As to security, there are four distinct propositions:

1. To depend solely upon the present provision of the law which makes the circulating notes a first lien upon all the assets of a failed bank.

2. To add to this the requirement that a reserve of 25 per cent. in lawful money shall be kept on hand by each bank.

3. To create a guaranty fund in the Treasury by devoting to that object the profit on lost circulation and the gradual accumulation from an annual tax of 1 per cent.

4. To make the banks mutual guarantors of each other's issues, the notes of each bank, however, to constitute a first lien upon its assets.

The provision for redemption varies in this way:

1. An annual tax of 1 per cent., of which the proceeds shall be used as a redemption fund.

2. The present 5 per cent. redemption deposit.

3. A pro rata assessment on all the issuing banks to whatever amount experience may indicate as sufficient.

Since all these plans embrace the maintenance of the present provision that the notes constitute a first lien upon all the assets of a failed bank, it is proper to consider this feature first.

The law now makes this lien a security for only the deficiency between the proceeds of deposited bonds and the outstanding circulation. No case of such deficiency has, I believe, ever arisen, and in the present state of the market for United States bonds, none is likely to arise; hence the preference thus secured to note-holders over all other creditors of a national bank has never been enforced nor has its existence in the law affected the general credit of these institutions. Never having had any practical significance it is generally lost sight of.

Obviously it will be very different when a currency is issued not specially secured at all, and which in every case of insolvency must be redeemed wholly out of the general assets before these become subject to the claims of depositors.

The national banks owe their present prosperity entirely to the confidence of the general public, and this confidence is manifested in the volume of individual deposits, which in the aggregate amount to \$1,250,000,000, or  $2\frac{1}{6}$  times the aggregate capital of the banks.

These deposits constitute the chief resource of the banks, and hence it would be a hazardous thing to introduce into the system any feature likely to disturb the confidence of depositors.

The issue of preferred notes to the amount of even 25 per cent. of the capital, the lowest limit proposed, would be a serious matter to depositors, while such issues to the amount of 50, 75, and 100 per cent. of capital, as some suggest, would probably cripple fatally the general credit of the banks with prudent depositors, and in that way their means of accommodation would be curtailed in a ratio greater than the increase of such means derived from the additional issues of currency.

It is much more important to the banks as a body to retain and augment their deposits than to acquire the power to issue more currency, and the public have even a greater interest than the banks in the preservation of this condition of things, because the credit that attracts deposits is always better founded than that which floats currency, and is also more jealously guarded by the banks enjoying it, and is therefore less likely to be abused.

It is, indeed, doubtful whether any really strong and prudent banks would like to risk their credit with depositors by issuing notes as a first lien on their assets, and in that case if the proposition led to the establishment of such a bank currency at all, notes would be issued chiefly by banks having small deposits and their assets might very easily be so handled as to constitute a very poor security, even for the preferred notes. There would certainly be great temptation to a bank to become speculative when once it had floated all the currency allowed and found itself free from the observation of numerous and vigilant local depositors.

If these views are correct, they would seem to be fatal to all schemes of establishing a bank currency secured only by a first lien upon all the assets of the issuing bank, unless some sufficient counterpoise to the objections can be found among the various suggestions as to a 25 per cent. reserve, a sinking fund deposited with the Government, the consolidation of all issuing banks into one association, etc.

While none of these devices appears to me likely to prove practically effective in removing the objections, it is probable that considerable diversity of opinion will arise on the subject, and as individual views can not be anticipated, it seems useless to spread the discussion over the whole field of possible contention. It is important, however, to bear in mind that any computations as to the proper ratios of reserve or redemption funds to the volume of currency, which may be drawn from the history of national-bank circulation, will be misleading, because the conditions heretofore obtaining will all be changed when, on the one hand, banks have every temptation to force out circulation, and, on the other hand, the public acquire the habit of presenting these notes for redemption every time the general credit of the bank is affected.

In times of panic now, banks have to take care of their depositors only, the ordinary process of the redemption of notes is not materially varied, nor is the volume of general currency diminished, but when there is no special security behind these notes, the case will be very different; every rumor of monetary trouble will bring both the note-holders and the depositors clamoring for payment, and just when there is most need of money to pay them with, the currency will be contracted by the discredit of national-bank circulation.

In answer to these general objections to the first lien principle, it may be said, of course, that the assets of the bank will be increased by the whole amount of its issue of notes, while now its assets are actually diminished by the difference between the cost of the bonds and the circulation received from the Government. This is very true; and if those assets were set aside, as the bonds now are, as specific security for the notes, and if, moreover, they could be always maintained in a form as intrinsically valuable and as readily convertible as the bonds are, the force of the objection would be destroyed; but no one familiar with practical banking can really believe that either of these conditions could be maintained in even a single case, while it is more than probable that in most cases they would be disregarded, and the old adage "easy come, easy go" would receive fresh illustration from numerous instances in which the facility of uttering currency would lead, as it did under the old State-bank system, to very lax and speculative methods of employing the resources so obtained.

If the views here submitted are correct, it would appear that no substitute yet proposed for the present basis of national-bank circulation is sufficiently free from objection to be adopted. The 4-per cent. bonds will not mature for twenty years; and, apart from other considerations, there is enough in this fact to justify caution and delay in making any radical change in the basis of circulation. In that time, no doubt, something acceptable will be devised, but at present all that seems practicable is to modify the existing law so as to obviate its inconveniences, and as a first step toward this end it appears both safe and wise to reduce the minimum amount of bonds to be kept on deposit.

This is, no doubt, quite a safe step, because capital is no longer attracted to the system or held in it by any profit derived from circulation, or by the prospect of any profit to be made by holding bonds.

These early inducements have been replaced by others of a much more permanent and satisfactory character. The high credit attaching to national banks, the business-like methods cultivated in their relations with the public, and other similar influences developed within the system itself, constitute a cohesive attraction, which makes it stronger to-day than it has ever been before. Reducing the minimum requirement as to bonds, therefore, can not weaken the system. Concurrently with the progress of this healthful change in the system itself, the bonded debt of the United States has been gradually reduced in amount and refunded at lower rates of interest, while such is the investment demand that the still outstanding bonds of every class are constantly becoming scarcer on the market; indeed, there is hardly any longer a regular market for United States bonds, because they are held almost entirely either by a limited class of investors, who rarely care to sell, or by national banks, which in many cases can not sell.

One effect of this condition of things is to make the obligation to deposit bonds a serious obstacle to the formation of new banks in the sections where they are most needed, and to the increase of capital on the part of those banks of which the capital does not already exceed $150,000.

The public needs and demands a continual increase of banking facilities, and to supply those facilities it is necessary to have not only more banks, but banks in a greater number of localities, and also some increase of capital among banks previously established.

The need of such increased facilities is coextensive with the country, but it is most pressing in those sections where the growth of population and the expansion of industry are year by year outstripping the measure of accommodation afforded by local capital.

To such communities the national-bank system affords opportunities otherwise unobtainable for bringing to the development of their resources supplies of capital from the remote centers of cheap and abundant money; hence, any obstacles to the growth of this system in our newer States and Territories is a more serious matter than it is elsewhere.

Another effect of the laws as they now stand is to deprive the national-bank circulation of the little elasticity possible to it, because the volume of this circulation varies with the amount of bonds held by the banks, and not only are bonds too scarce and dear to be freely bought and sold, but the inducement to banks to reduce their holdings of bonds to the minimum prescribed by law is constant and of growing intensity, while there are no inducements to an increase of such holdings; consequently there is neither elasticity nor steadiness in the volume of bank notes, but only a continuous contraction of circulation that year by year more than overcomes the annual expansion due to the formation of new banks, and keeps the public mind in a state of feverish anxiety, always easily excited into alarm.

Still another effect is to render the banks very sensitive to every step made towards reducing the bonded debt of the Government.

A striking instance of this occurred lately in connection with the redemption of the 3 per cent. bonds. On August 12, 1886, the redemption of these bonds was resumed, and the last call matured July 1, 1887, after which date 3 per cent. bonds were no longer available as a basis of circulation. At the former date the national banks held $103,351,650, on which their outstanding circulation amounted to $93,016,485, so that the redemption of the bonds forced the banks either to surrender circulation to this amount or to replace the 3 percents with bonds obtainable only at a premium.

The progress of this rapid redemption and its effect upon national-bank circulation are elsewhere described in detail. What is material in connection with the topic now under consideration is, that while the unprecedented contraction produced less immediate embarrassment than it might have done, yet it so disturbed public confidence, and rendered the banks so nervous, that the annual autumnal monetary stringency in New York was magnified last September into a portent of impending disaster, and came near seriously interrupting the industries of the entire country.

This effect carries with its recognition considerations as to the future, which are of national importance, because in the autumn of 1891 the  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. bonds will become subject to call, and unless precautions are taken in advance to prevent a recurrence of the disquietude we have so lately experienced, the anxieties of this year will have been suffered in vain.

Of those bonds there are now outstanding \$230,500,000, and one of the most important problems of the immediate future is how to deal with this indebtedness. The conditions of the problem will be materially simplified if the banks are permitted and induced to gradually reduce their holdings of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  percents.

With a view to facilitating the healthy and natural expansion of the national-bank system, to restoring stability and some degree of elasticity to the circulation based on bonds, and to obviating a recurrence, with respect to the  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. bonds, of the perilous experience of the last twelve months with respect to the 3 percents, it appears to be wise to reduce the minimum requirement of bonds; and I respectfully recommend that it be hereafter fixed at one-tenth of the capital of all banks of which the capital does not exceed \$250,000, and that no bank shall be required to maintain a deposit of more than \$25,000 in bonds; also that the banks be relieved of taxation upon so much of the circulation issued to them as is represented by the minimum of bonds which the law requires them to deposit.

This latter recommendation is made chiefly in the interest of the small country banks, to which every expense is a burden, and which, as a rule, deposit only the minimum of bonds.

It would seem to be quite proper to tax circulation in excess of that represented by the minimum of bonds, not for the sake of revenue only, but because such a tax tends to impart elasticity to the entire volume of circulation, and because any bank that likes may escape the tax; but both justice and policy appear to be against a tax on circulation represented by bonds of which the deposit is obligatory.

The recommendation to reduce the minimum amount of bonds to be deposited is supported by the following considerations:

1. As the law now stands, the total amount of bonds required to be deposited by the 3,049 banks in operation on October 5 is $89,912,347, while the amount actually on deposit at that date was $189,083,199, or $99,170,753 more than the minimum requirement.

This excess is distributed as follows: 2,150 banks of $150,000 capital and under, of which the minimum is $44,962,347, hold actually $79,485,000—an excess of $34,522,653; 899 banks of over $150,000 capital, of which the minimum is $44,950,000, hold actually $109,598,100—an excess of $64,648,100.

If the proposed change is made the banks in operation on October 5 will stand thus: 2,552 banks with not over $250,000 capital; minimum, $26,400,309; actual, $116,444,250; excess, $90,043,941; 497 banks with over $250,000 capital; minimum, $12,425,000; actual, $72,638,850; excess, $60,213,850. Total excess, $150,257,791.

Of course it is to be expected that some banks will be prompted by the change in the law to reduce their circulation, but the magnitude of this reduction and the rate at which it can be effected will be controlled by two influences; first, the provision of law which limits to $3,000,000 the amount of lawful money that may be deposited in any calendar month in order to effect the withdrawal of circulation; and, secondly, the decline in the price of the bonds which must attend any sudden and large increase in the amount offered for sale. Banks will not surrender circulation except to realize the premium by selling their bonds.

2. While undoubtedly these two influences will effectually prevent any monetary disturbance, arising from the change in the law, they will not even obstruct but will materially promote such gradual changes in the bonds on deposit as will enable the banks to be practically free from  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. bonds by the time these mature in 1891.

The total amount of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. bonds held on October 31 as security for circulation was \$69,696,100, and therefore it will only require changes to the extent of about \$17,500,000 annually to render the banks entirely independent, in four years, of any policy the Treasury may adopt as to these bonds.

If they are redeemed the national-bank circulation will be undiminished by the process of redemption; if they are refunded on terms admitting of a profit on circulation, the banks will be in a good position to buy the extended bonds.

3. One effect of a gradual shifting of deposits out of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. bonds will probably be, that as the volume of circulation based on these bonds becomes reduced, a corresponding decline will be observed in the sensitiveness of the banks and of the money market to the progress of redemption of the public debt.

This is a very important consideration, because it is desirable that when the time arrives for deciding what is to be done with the  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. loan, there shall arise neither the apprehension of financial disturbance nor any strong popular pressure to influence the choice between payment and extension. From every point of view it is desirable that this choice should turn wholly on the position and prospects of the public finances.

4. Throughout the whole period of the existence of the national-bank circulation there never has been a time when the volume of the outstanding notes has been determined by commercial forces only; the operations of the Treasury have always exercised an abnormal and a disturbing influence, and reciprocally the state of the currency has constantly fettered the operations of the Treasury. If the proposed change in the law tends even in the least degree to release the Treasury and the currency from this unnecessary and harassing interdependence, it will be a great public gain.

5. Once free from the disturbing cause referred to, there is no reason why the volume of national-bank currency should not soon find its natural centre of oscillation; that is, the point above and below which its normal movements of increase and decline would conform to the varying needs of the commercial and other industries of the country.

From the stand-point of these industries, elasticity is more important than quantity in the currency; their interests are better subserved by a currency so elastic in volume as to respond immediately to variations in the demand for it, than by a great volume of money rigid in amount. Elasticity in the volume of the currency supplies to commercial operations what springs and a smooth road supply to transportation. In each case more can be accomplished with less wear and tear and less breakage than is possible when these conditions are wanting.

6. A reduction in the amount of bonds which the banks are required to have on deposit will prepare the way for a change in the basis of circulation, in case such change may hereafter seem expedient. As long as the law compels the smaller banks to invest more than one-fourth of their capital in bonds (counting in the premium), it may be unjust to them to permit circulation to be issued upon any other security, for only the large banks could then get the full benefit of such permission; but 10 per cent. of capital invested in bonds will not be a serious impediment even to banks of $50,000 capital getting their fair share of any privileges as to circulation that may hereafter be determined upon.

7. It should be observed, finally, that owing to the two retarding influences already referred to, the results here suggested can be accomplished only during a considerable lapse of time, and of course, in the interval, unforeseen conditions may arise and unexpected influences may modify or reverse the tendencies now existing; but it does not seem possible that any change of conditions or of tendencies can cause embarrassment to the banks or to the public fairly chargeable to the proposed change in the law.

ABSTRACT OF REPORTS OF THE NATIONAL BANKING ASSOCIATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES, SHOWING THEIR CONDITION AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY, THE 5TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1887.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING,
Washington, D. C., November 14, 1887.

SIR: I have the honor to submit a report on the operations of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for the fiscal year 1887.

SECURITIES DELIVERED.

During the year there were delivered to the various Departments and Bureaus of the Government 32,652,207 sheets of securities, an increase of nearly 6,000,000 sheets over the quantity delivered in the preceding year. Of United States notes, certificates and bonds, and national-bank notes there were produced 7,184,866 sheets, representing a value of $138,276,200; of internal-revenue stamps, 24,366,700 sheets, containing 600,428,200 stamps; of customs stamps, 314,700 sheets, containing 2,650,000 stamps; and of miscellaneous securities, 785,941 sheets. The checks, drafts, and similar documents, and a part of the internal-revenue stamps are delivered in bound books, of which 77,144 volumes were turned out during the year.

The estimated production on which the appropriation for the year was based was 29,532,550 sheets of securities. The actual production was more than 3,100,000 sheets in excess of this estimate. This arose in part from the delivery after the beginning of the fiscal year of a quantity of internal-revenue stamps printed during the preceding year and in part from the printing of more stamps and fewer national-bank notes than was anticipated. As the stamps cost less than the notes a larger quantity of the former than of the latter could be produced for a given sum. But even after making these allowances the showing is a very favorable one.

The delivery of silver certificates of the denomination of $1, prepared under the act of August 4, 1886, began September 20, 1886; of $2 certificates, November 27, 1886, and of $5 certificates, February 9, 1887. At the end of October the deliveries of certificates of the three denominations had reached $47,944,000, of which $17,916,000 was in $1 certificates, $11,128,000 was in $2 certificates, and $18,900,000 was in $5 certificates.

There were delivered during the year $75,052,000 in United States notes and certificates of the denominations of $20 and under. No notes or certificates of a higher denomination were printed, although some previously printed were delivered to the Treasurer.

EXPENDITURES.

The expenses of the Bureau for the fiscal year 1887 were:

|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|
| For plate printing at piece rates, including the wages of plate printers' assistants.....                      | 299,308.54   |
| For materials and miscellaneous expenses, and for improved plate printing machines and royalty .....           | 149,599.06   |
|                                                                                                                | <hr/>        |
|                                                                                                                | 790,713.20   |
| For materials used in sealing and separating notes in the office of the Treasurer of the United States.....    | 418.00       |
| For salaries, office of custodian of dies, rolls, and plates .....                                             | 569.95       |
| For pay of special witness of destruction of securities .....                                                  | 130.00       |
| For salaries of employés sealing and separating notes in the office of Treasurer of the United States .....    | 2,646.75     |
|                                                                                                                | <hr/>        |
| Total.....                                                                                                     | 794,477.90   |

Provision for the payment from separate appropriations of the expenditures falling under the last three heads was made by the last sundry civil appropriation act, but as the act did not pass until August 6, 1886, the expenses incurred before that day had to be paid from the appropriation made for the support of the Bureau. Moreover, the appropriation for the salaries of the persons employed in the processes of sealing and separating the notes in the Treasurer's Office was found to be insufficient, and the wages of the additional operatives needed were paid from the appropriation for compensation of employés of the Bureau. In this way the Bureau was burdened with an expense of \$3,346.70, from which it was expected that it would be relieved. The net expenditures show an increase over those of the preceding year of \$41,251.88, or only  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., while the increase in the work turned out is  $22\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. Of the increased expenditure \$35,710.51, or all but \$5,541.37, was for plate printing, which, being paid for by the piece, must increase in cost as the work done increases. Although these results are subject to some qualification by reason of the facts already mentioned as to the increase in the deliveries for 1887, and of the further fact that the expenditures for 1886 contained some items of a permanent nature not properly chargeable to the year's work, enough remains to show a substantial gain in economy over the preceding year, which, in its turn, showed a remarkable improvement in this respect upon any preceding year in the history of the Bureau.

APPROPRIATIONS AND ESTIMATES.

The appropriations for the support of the Bureau for the current year were made in exact accordance with the estimates, except that the appropriation for compensation of employés was made in a lump sum instead of prescribing the salaries and numbers of the persons to be employed as recommended in the estimates. The language of the appropriation act was, however, so changed as to authorize the payment of yearly salaries instead of daily wages to all of the employés except the plate printers and their assistants. Under this authority a schedule was prepared and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, fixing the grades and salaries of the employés and the number to be employed in each grade in the current fiscal year. No difficulty has been found in carrying on this work under this organization, which, for the time being, places the Bureau on the same orderly footing as the legally organized Bureaus of the Department. It would be better, however, for many reasons, if the organization should be fixed by law and the estimates for 1889 accordingly specify the number and the salaries of the persons to be employed. As pointed out in previous reports, this method of appropriating would prevent any increase either of salaries or numbers beyond the limits set by law, or the expenditure of more than a proportional share of the appropriation during any part of the year, while it would establish the Bureau as one of the regular branches of the Government.

The estimates for the fiscal year 1889 show a large increase over the appropriation for 1888. This increase is due to the greatly increased estimates made by the various branches of the Government of the quantity of securities which they will require in that year. These estimates of the amount of work to be done have been adopted without modification as the basis of the estimates of the appropriation to be made. The sole function of the Bureau in the matter has been to compute the cost of executing the work which the various branches of the Government estimate that they will require. The estimates of the amount of work to be done compare as follows with the actual production in 1887 and the revised estimates on which the appropriations for the current year were based:

|-------------------------------------------|----------------------------|-------------------------------|----------------------------|
| United States notes and certificates..... | 6,472,959                  | 8,500,000                     | 11,500,000                 |
| National-bank notes.....                  | 711,907                    | 1,000,000                     | 1,000,000                  |
| Internal-revenue stamps.....              | 24,366,700                 | 24,392,000                    | 37,140,900                 |
| Total number of sheets.....               | 32,652,207                 | 34,992,794                    | 51,150,050                 |

The estimated demand for each class of securities for 1889, with the exception of national-bank notes, is greatly in excess both of the actual production of 1887 and of the estimated production of 1888. As compared with the current year the increase in the total quantity of securities to be printed is 16,157,256 sheets, or more than 46 per cent. The increase in United States notes and certificates is 3,000,000 sheets, or more than 35 per cent., and the increase in internal-revenue stamps is 12,743,000 sheets, or more than 52 per cent. The execution of this enormous quantity of work will tax the capacity of the Bureau to the utmost. Space for the performance of the additional work can be found in the building occupied by this Bureau only by the use of labor-saving machines in all of the processes to which they are adapted. The estimates were accordingly made on the assumption that a large part of the additional printing will be done on steam plate-printing presses. Six machines of the kind known as the "Milligan" press have for a number of years been used successfully in printing certain varieties of green internal-revenue stamps. During the last fiscal year six improved machines of this pattern were introduced and applied with signal success to the printing of the backs of the one and the two dollar silver certificates. All of the one-dollar backs printed since January 21, 1887, and all of the two-dollar backs printed since April 29, 1887, have been printed on these presses in a style fully equal to that of work of the same class done on the hand-roller presses. The great increase since the beginning of the present fiscal year in the demand for internal-revenue stamps has led to the purchase, within the last two months, of six presses, with still further improvements on which to print a part of the cigar stamps. The difficulties incident to the introduction of all new machinery had to be contended with at first, but they have been overcome and a large part of the stamps of this class are now being printed on the steam-power presses. Without the aid of these presses, which are now in full and successful operation, it would have been impossible to meet the demands of the Internal Revenue Bureau for this class of work.

Although these machines are known as "steam" presses, they retain all the advantages of the hand-printing process. Only the purely mechanical parts of the work which require power without special intelligence or skill are done by machinery. The ink, plates, and materials are the same as those used on the presses operated by hand, while the final "polishing" of the plate, which is the part of the work where intelligence and skill are brought into play, is done by hand precisely as on the hand presses. To do the work of the next fiscal year it is proposed to introduce 12 more steam presses, increasing the number to 31 (including 1 press of the Homer Lee pattern), and to retain all of the hand presses now in use. In addition, the estimates provide for increasing the hand printers by 11 to take the place of those who may be absent on leave or otherwise. In this way the work of the Bureau can be done with the greatest economy of space, labor, and money. The annual saving from the use of steam presses will then be $149,000, and the aggregate work performed by 210 printers working on the two kinds of presses will be equal to the product of the labor of at least 335 men working on hand presses alone, a number for which it would be quite impossible to find room in the building, to say nothing of the impossibility of securing the additional number of competent workmen.

The estimates for 1889, as compared with the appropriations for the current fiscal year, are:

|                                            | 1888.    | 1889.     |
|--------------------------------------------|----------|-----------|
| Salaries .....                             | $17,450 | $18,450* |
| Compensation of employés .....             | 352,380  | 416,140   |
| Plate printing .....                       | *383,500 | 485,325   |
| Materials and miscellaneous expenses ..... | 164,700  | 233,000   |
| Total .....                                | 918,030  | 1,152,915 |

* Including $17,000 appropriated to provide for leaves of absence.

The increase in the appropriation asked for is 25½ per cent., while the increase in the work to be done is more than 46 per cent. As plate-printing is paid for by the piece, its cost is governed by the work done, and is not a controllable item of expense, except so far as power-printing may be substituted for hand-printing. The quantity of materials used is also governed by the work done. The only expenditures which can be controlled are those for salaries and compensation of employés. While the estimate for plate-printing is increased 26½ per cent., and that for materials and miscellaneous expenses 41½ per cent., as compared with the appropriations for those purposes for 1888, the estimates for salaries and compensation of employés show an increase of only 17½ per cent. The disparity would, of course, be much greater but for the increased proportion of the work which it is proposed to execute on the steam presses. The entire additional force asked for will be actually and necessarily employed in the various processes connected with the manufacture of securities.

A comparison of the quantity of work proposed to be done in 1889 with the quantity produced by a like expenditure in former years shows a great gain in economy. The expenditures in 1882 closely approach the estimated expenditures in 1889. In that year the net expenses of the Bureau, omitting certain items now charged to separate appropriations, were $1,088,000. The number of sheets of securities turned out was, however, only 33,330,746, while the estimated production for 1889, with an expenditure increased less than 6 per cent., is 51,150,050 sheets, an increase of more than 53 per cent.

THE FORCE EMPLOYED.

The number of persons employed on July 1, 1886, was 839. At the date of the last report the number had run down to 817 in consequence of the slackness of work in the earlier part of the fiscal year. A subsequent increase in work caused a slight increase in the force, which at the close of the fiscal year stood at 841. Ninety-one persons left the service during the year, of whom 24 were discharged for misconduct, inefficiency, or absence without leave, 53 voluntarily resigned, 8 were transferred to other rolls, and 6 died. Thirty former employes were recalled to the service, and 63 original appointments were made. In consequence of the increased appropriation and the additional work to be done, the force has been considerably increased since the beginning of the present fiscal year. The number now employed is 892—253 less than on March 1, 1885, although the work has in the meantime greatly increased. A table in the appendix shows that the average cost of 1,000 sheets of securities has been reduced from $34.21 in 1885 to $24.33 in 1887, while the average number of sheets produced for each employé has run up from 24,905 to 38,872.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

EDWARD O. GRAVES,

Hon. CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The foregoing statement omits mention of a very large amount of official work entirely of a legal nature, and more especially requiring the personal consideration of the Comptroller, which does not admit of systematic classification and detailed report, and yet has occupied much time and care, such as, e. g., the investigation of, and decision upon, legal points arising in the adjustment of accounts; the examination of, and decision upon, applications for the issuing of duplicate bonds and other securities lost and destroyed, and also for the transfer of the same; the examination of powers of attorney for the collection of money due to creditors of the United States; decisions upon the rights of persons claiming to be executors, administrators, or heirs of deceased claimants, to receive money due from the United States; the examination of official bonds; answering calls for information made by Congress, the Departments, and private persons; receiving and examining emolument returns, and other work of a miscellaneous character.

ASSIGNMENT OF CLAIMS UPON THE UNITED STATES.

In my last report I called attention to the above subject, as stated below, and I renew the suggestions made therein, as follow:

Section 3477 of the Revised Statutes prohibits "all transfers and assignments," and "all powers of attorney" or other authorities for receiving payment, "of any claim upon the United States," except such as are duly made and executed at the times and under the conditions and circumstances named in said section. (And at this point I will state there are certain special exceptions to this general prohibition, where assignments are expressly authorized by law in a few cases.)

Two of my predecessors, Comptrollers Whittlesey and Porter—the former in a circular of some length dated May 2, 1853—held that the term "claim" as used in this section did not apply to salary accounts and other demands of a like nature, certain, fixed, definite, and undisputed in character; and that, therefore, assignments, and powers of attorney to receive payment, of these, were not prohibited by the statute and would be recognized. This view seems to be concurred in by Solicitor-General Phillips in an opinion given in a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury of May 28, 1883, which is approved by Attorney-General Brewster.

On the contrary, my immediate predecessor, Comptroller Lawrence, and Second Comptroller Upton, rendered opinions, both of which are contained in the printed reports of this office, construing the term "claim" as used in the above section to "embrace every claim against the United States, however arising, of whatever nature it may be, and wherever and whenever presented"—whether certain, fixed, definite, and undisputed, or uncertain, unfixed, indefinite, and disputed. Since assuming charge of the duties of this office I have followed the latter construction, for the reason that I deemed it in accordance with the principles settled by the decisions of the Supreme Court construing said section, in the cases of United States v. Gillis (95 U. S., 413), Spofford v. Kirk (97 U. S., 489), and Goodman v. Niblack (102 U. S., 560). See also 9 Op. Att. Gen., 190; and 16 Id., 262.

It thus appears that there have been opposing opinions by the accounting officers upon the proper construction of the said section.

Recently a district judge decided that a marshal can and should pay witness fees to a third party, under a power of attorney. This decision, in my opinion, is in conflict with the above section of the Revised Statutes, and is contrary to the principles laid down in the above cited cases. If this decision be followed, it will require very much labor on the part of the accounting officers in examining the powers of attorney presented in these cases, to see whether they are correct, in addition to the examination of the accounts upon their merits. I repeat:

It seems, therefore, that much of the uncertainty and inconvenience now encountered by the accounting officers in their construction of this statute would be removed by an explanatory act of Congress defining the term "claim" as used above in such manner as to leave no doubt of its proper construction. Hence, I urge upon you the necessity of calling the attention of Congress to the matter for its appropriate action thereon.

COMPENSATION OF COMMISSIONERS OF THE CIRCUIT COURTS.

I call your attention again to the above question, and repeat what I said in my last report, as follows:

Accounts of United States district attorneys, marshals, clerks of courts, and circuit court commissioners are revised and settled in this office. The compensation of the two first-named officers is derived from the fees of their offices together with a small nominal annual salary, and of the two last-named entirely from the fees of their offices.

In the case of district attorneys, marshals, and clerks there is a limit placed by law on the amount that may be retained by them of the fees and emoluments of their offices earned during a year (Rev. Stat., 835, 841, 839); but in the case of commissioners there is no such limit under existing law.

Thus, in many instances, as shown by the records of this office, the fees earned by and allowed to commissioners during a given year amount to more than $5,000—an annual compensation greater than that of most of the United States district judges, and very little less than that of the United States circuit judges.

I regard such compensation as very disproportionate to the value of the services of the commissioners, who are merely examining and bailing or committing magistrates; and I think some legislation by Congress limiting the amount that may be retained by them of the fees and emoluments of their offices earned during a year, and requiring the balance of the same to be turned into the Treasury of the United States, is necessary, just, and proper, and would have a salutary effect. What such limit shall be I leave to your wise discretion to suggest to Congress. This matter is here mentioned for your consideration, because I am very sure the amount of the annual compensation earned by these officers is not fully understood outside of the narrow circle of the accounting officers and the commissioners themselves.

In the examination of the accounts of said commissioners I find that many of them swell the amount of their fees by requiring all warrants issued by them to be returned before themselves, although the party against whom the warrant may be issued lives, and is arrested, in the immediate neighborhood of another commissioner. By this means the party arrested is conveyed many miles from his home, the marshal gets large sums in mileage, and the commissioner increases his fees. The courts in many places have endeavored to correct this evil by making orders directing the commissioners to make their warrants returnable before the commissioner who may be nearest the home of the defendant, but yet they disregard the rule in very many instances. This being the case, I suggest that you call attention to this fact, and urge Congress to pass a law requiring the commissioner issuing a warrant to make the same returnable before himself or some other commissioner, and also making it obligatory upon the marshal who executes the writ to return the same before the commissioner who may live nearest to the place where the party may be arrested. Such a law would rectify the above evil, and would be of very considerable value to the Government. Since I have been in this office I have discovered, in the settlement of the accounts of district attorneys, marshals, clerks, commissioners, &c., a disposition on the part of many of these officers to charge illegal fees, and to resort to questionable practices to make a large amount of fees, and I am of opinion that the whole system should be abolished, and fair and reasonable salaries given to such officers, now paid by fees, except U. S. Commissioners, and that the fees of the latter should be limited as above indicated.

I hope that this suggestion will meet with your approbation, and that you will also recommend the same favorably to Congress.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS ON CLAIMS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

Old claims against the Government are being constantly presented for the action thereon of this office, where the rights of the claimants originated, in several instances, twenty and thirty years ago.

As I suggested in a former report, it is well worthy of consideration whether some fixed period after the right of the claimant accrues should not be prescribed by statute within which a claim may be brought before the proper accounting officers for their action thereon, reserving the rights of persons under some legal disability. No general statute now exists on the subject. It is true Congress has made provisions generally limiting the time for the payment of claims presented and allowed against the United States to a definite period after the proper appropriation is made, or, in other words, limiting the availability of appropriations, with certain exceptions (as in act of June 20, 1874, 18 Stat., 110, sec. 5), but no such general provision has been made limiting the time for the presentation of claims for the action of the accounting officers thereon.

By reason of the great lapse of time, the difficulty of obtaining evidence upon which to base any decision in the class of claims mentioned, where all the facts transpired so long ago, may readily be seen, and may often work injustice to the Government.

I therefore renew the recommendation made in my report for 1885, that Congress should pass a law limiting the time within which claims may be presented against the Government of the United States.

It gives me pleasure to state that the officers and employés of this Bureau, in the main, have discharged their respective duties well, by reason of which the back work has been mostly disposed of, and the current business kept well in hand.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

M. J. DURHAM,
Comptroller.

HON. CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD,

REPORT OF THE SECOND COMPTROLLER.

SECOND COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., October 31, 1887.

SIR: Pursuant to your request of July 22, that I should report to the Secretary of the Treasury the transactions of this Office during the past fiscal year, and the present condition of the public business intrusted to my charge, I have the honor to report that the following is a summary statement of the work performed in the Office of the Second Comptroller for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, in tabular form, with a comparative statement showing the work of like character in the preceding fiscal year.

TOTAL NUMBER OF ACCOUNTS, CLAIMS, AND CASES SETTLED.

| From—                | 1887.   |              | 1886.   |              |
|----------------------|---------|--------------|---------|--------------|
|                      | Number. | Amount.      | Number. | Amount.      |
| Second Auditor.....  | 28,255  | $47,265,256 | 28,813  | $42,249,737 |
| Third Auditor.....   | 14,765  | 102,096,136  | 13,636  | 159,401,724  |
| Fourth Auditor.....  | 2,626   | 18,079,911   | 2,975   | 23,637,169   |
| Various sources..... | 5,356   | 23,468       | 5,405   | 21,740       |
| Grand total.....     | 51,002  | 167,464,773  | 50,829  | 225,310,310  |

During the fiscal year 1886, the average number of Clerks employed monthly was 79. During the fiscal year 1887, the average number employed monthly was 62; the actual number on the rolls was 67. At the close of the fiscal year 1886, there was a reduction of 12 in the clerical force. A further reduction of 8 was made at the end of the past fiscal year; so that for the present year the roll of Clerks numbers 59.

The work of the office is distributed among seven divisions known as the Army Back-Pay and Bounty Division, employing 12 clerks; Army Paymasters' Division, 6 clerks; Army Pension Division, 6 clerks; Quartermasters' Division, 8 clerks; Navy Division, 3 clerks; Indian Division, 5 clerks; Law and Miscellaneous Division, 4 clerks; with a chief in charge of each division. There are, besides, one requisition clerk, a register and a stenographer, and 5 clerks employed on the Soldiers' Home roll, making the total clerical force, including chiefs of division, at the present time, 58. There is one vacancy in the office.

The following is a detailed statement of the accounts and claims revised and settled during the year, in each division, with a general statement of their character :

ARMY BACK-PAY AND BOUNTY DIVISION.

|------------------------------------------|---------|-----------------|
| Soldiers' pay and bounty allowed.....    | 8,897   | $1,033,857     |
| Soldiers' pay and bounty disallowed..... | 13,891  | .....           |
| Total .....                              | 22,788  | 1,033,857       |

On October 1, 1887, there were on hand and unadjusted, in this division, 1,572 claims, estimated to be about twenty-five days' work of the division.

ARMY PAYMASTERS' DIVISION.

[The item " Referred cases," &c., of previous reports, transferred to Miscellaneous Work.]

|-----------------------------------------------------|---------|-----------------|
| Army Paymasters, for pay of the Army.....           | 1,380   | $33,134,603    |
| National Home for Disabled Volunteers Soldiers..... | 35      | 1,784,715       |
| Soldiers' Home accounts.....                        | 41      | 234,779         |
| Special Army accounts.....                          | 363     | 179,232         |
| Duplicate checks approved.....                      | 356     | 23,468          |
| Total .....                                         | 2,175   | 35,356,797      |

On October 1, 1887, there remained in this division, unadjusted, 46 Army Paymasters' accounts, 11 Soldiers' Home accounts, and 14 special accounts, in all 71 accounts, or about ten days' work of the division.

The accounts of Army Paymasters had accumulated to very large numbers in previous years, especially in 1883, 1884, and 1885. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1883, there were adjusted 261 of this class of accounts; 246 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1884; 100 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1885. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886, there were adjusted 1,464. At the present time, these accounts are settled within thirty days from the date they are certified to the Comptroller by the Second Auditor.

ARMY PENSION DIVISION.

| Character of the accounts.                        | Number. | Amount allowed. |
|---------------------------------------------------|---------|-----------------|
| Accounts of Pension Agents for Army pensions..... | 470     | $78,520,600    |
| Pension reimbursement claims allowed .....        | 2,076   | 113,283         |
| Pension reimbursement claims disallowed.....      | 591     | .....           |
| Total .....                                       | 3,137   | 78,633,883      |

On October 1, 1887, there were, awaiting adjustment, 7 Pension Agents' accounts, and 26 reimbursement claims, comprising about twenty-four days' work of the division.

This division, which was nearly three years in arrears on January 1, 1885, is now engaged in the adjustment of accounts of disbursements made within the current fiscal year.

QUARTERMASTERS' DIVISION.

|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-----------------|
| Disbursing officers of the Quartermasters' Department, for regular and incidental expenses .....                              | 930     | $8, 792, 668   |
| Disbursing officers of the Subsistence Department .....                                                                       | 722     | 3, 163, 901     |

| Disbursing officers of the Signal Service .....                                                                               | 78      | 1, 200, 323     |
| Total .....                                                                                                                   | 1, 834  | 20, 392, 512    |

On October 1, 1887, there remained in this division, awaiting examination, 22 Engineers' accounts, 83 Quartermasters' accounts, 113 Subsistence accounts, and 7 Signal Service accounts, estimated to be equivalent to the work of the division for 40 days.

NAVY DIVISION.

| Character of the accounts.                                                | Number. | Amount allowed. |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-----------------|
| Paymasters of the Navy and at navy-yards and Navy agents .....            | 390     | $15, 729, 553  |
| Disbursing officers of the Marine Corps .....                             | 16      | 690, 405        |
| Navy Pension Agents for Navy and Marine Corps .....                       | 63      | 1, 194, 541     |
| Miscellaneous naval accounts .....                                        | 691     | 133, 418        |
| Navy financial agents .....                                               | 4       | 94, 274         |
| Officers' and sailors' back-pay, bounty, and prize money allowed .....    | 1, 052  | 237, 687        |
| Officers' and sailors' back-pay, bounty, and prize money disallowed ..... | 410     | .....           |
| Total .....                                                               | 2, 620  | 18, 079, 908    |

On October 1, 1887, there were, in this division, unadjusted, 26 Navy paymasters' accounts, 1 Navy pension account, 1 Marine Corps account, 19 miscellaneous claims, and 14 back-pay and bounty claims,—not exceeding 25 days' work of the division.

INDIAN DIVISION.

|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-----------------|
| Indian Agent's current and contingent expenses, annuities and installments .. | 360     | $2, 669, 355   |
| Miscellaneous Indian claims .....                                             | 2, 936  | 4, 212, 922     |
| Indian claims disallowed .....                                                | 3       | .....           |
| Total .....                                                                   | 3, 299  | 6, 882, 277     |

On October 1, 1887, there were, awaiting examination, in this division 57 Indian Agents' accounts, and 32 Indian claims, equivalent to 12 days' work of the division.

LAW AND MISCELLANEOUS DIVISION.

SUITS BROUGHT.

Transcripts and briefs have been made up, examined, and forwarded to the Solicitor of the Treasury for suit in favor of the United States in 42 cases, during the year, as follows:

|                           |    |
|---------------------------|----|
| Army Paymasters .....     | 1  |
| Army Pension Agents ..... | 16 |
| Quartermasters .....      | 4  |
| Navy .....                | 5  |
| Indian Agents .....       | 10 |
| Miscellaneous .....       | 6  |

In all of which cases suits have been instituted, of which 34 are still pending, and a recovery has been had in 15, resulting in the payment into the Treasury of $5,433.88. There has also been recovered and paid into the Treasury, from suits previously begun, the additional sum of $31,763.38.

Much other important work has been done which can not well be classified, and does not appear in the foregoing tables.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

For many years, the Accounting Officers of the Treasury have urged the enactment of a statute of limitations applicable to the prosecution of claims coming before them for adjudication.

My predecessor, Mr. Comptroller Maynard, in his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1885, says:

The work of the accounting officers is greatly impeded in consequence of the enforced examination of stale demands, * * * and as they have jurisdiction not only of claims against the Government, but also of claims existing in favor of the United States, it frequently happens that they are called upon to investigate transactions which occurred so long ago that, on account of the death of witnesses and the loss of original papers, it is difficult to reach a correct or satisfactory determination of the controversy. In some cases to which my attention has been called, over seventy years have elapsed since the occurrence took place out of which the claim arose. The enactment of a statute imposing a reasonable limitation of time within which all claims, either in favor of or against the Government, should be presented to the accounting officers, would facilitate the transaction of public business in the Department, and it is believed that the ends of justice would be promoted thereby.

Of the justice and wisdom of these views, so forcibly presented, there can be no doubt.

There should be some limit of time as against the Government in the settlement of the pay and allowances of officers in the service and employ of the Government. Legislation on this subject would seem to be essential; for, in its absence, a rule creating a limitation of time arbitrarily established by one accounting officer, might be so far altered, strengthened, or modified by his successor as to render it practically nugatory.

A statute of limitations working both ways: barring old claims against the Government, and old debts set up by the Government against claimants, would, in my opinion, bring about most beneficial results.

OFFICE LIBRARY.

Last year, the library of the office was rearranged and recatalogued. It comprises 1,456 volumes, 455 of which are in the Comptroller's room, and the remainder are distributed throughout the rooms of the seven divisions in the office.

INVENTORIES OF PUBLIC PROPERTY.

In accordance with the circulars of the Secretary promulgated September 11, 1886, and August 29, 1887, two inventories of all public property in the office were made and filed in the Secretary's Office with the Chief Clerk of the Department, the one, October 1, 1886, the other, October 5, 1887.

OFFICE APPROPRIATIONS.

The appropriations for the salaries of the officers and employés of the office for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886, aggregated $118,100, of which $3,918 remained unexpended at the close of the year. The appropriations for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, were $105,820, of which there remained, at the close of the year, an unexpended balance of $2,333.67. The appropriations for the same purpose, for the current fiscal year (1888) are $95,020. The reductions in the appropriations since June 30, 1886, added to the amounts remaining unexpended at the close of the fiscal years 1886 and 1887, aggregate $29,331.67.

Very respectfully,

SIGOURNEY BUTLER,
Comptroller.

Hon. CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DIVISIONS.

Appropriation having been made for only two chiefs of division in this office, it was deemed advisable to make a readjustment of the work, so as to conform to the law. Accordingly the temporary divisions, viz, the Warehouse Bond Division, formerly in charge of B. F. Cutter, clerk; the Stub Division, under Amos J. Gunning, clerk, and the Disbursing Division, under N. H. Thompson, clerk, were discontinued, and the work consolidated in two divisions under the superintendence of the regular chiefs of division. As now constituted those divisions are:

(1) The Customs Division, of which Mr. Edmund Jones is chief.

(2) Division of Appointments, Refunds, Bonds, and Records, of which Mr. Charles H. Playter is chief.

Under these two chiefs of division, Mr. Jones and Mr. Playter, to whom the clerks report, and under the further supervision of Mr. H. A. Lockwood, deputy commissioner, the clerical business of the office has been performed during the year with commendable promptness and accuracy.

OLD WAREHOUSE AND BOND ACCOUNT.

The system of keeping the warehouse and bond accounts of the New York custom-house was begun January 1, 1868, the balance being taken from the bonds on file without entering the proper credits which were not then discovered, not having been indorsed on the bonds, and no book accounts of them having been kept in the custom-house. These credits, difficult of access, were afterwards ascertained from other entries by repeated and careful examinations.

Under authority from the honorable Secretary of the Treasury I directed the credits to be entered on the old warehouse account, as ascertained from the former investigations made in the New York custom-house, so that the present balance on that account is $29,014.78. It is not certain that this balance is correct, but it is not probable that any more credits will be discovered against it.

The system under which the old accounts were kept was not a safe one. In addition to its unreliability, arising from the wrong balance with which it was begun in 1868, there were other defects in it which led to a change. On the 1st of July, 1881, there was a new system adopted, and since then, by separating the new from the old accounts, there has been no difficulty in getting the correct balances. But it has been deemed proper, whilst the evidence existed in this office, to correct, as far as possible, the balances of the old accounts.

On the old transportation bond account there was a balance of $86,171.11, and on the exportation bond account a balance of $295,842.87, as shown at the close of May, 1885. In letter from the office of the collector of customs of New York, dated September 6, 1883, certified by the naval officer, Charles K. Graham, it was stated that the transportation bonds from 1868 had been examined "and found to be all canceled." It was also stated that the export bonds (with the exception of an inclosed list of missing bonds in 1870 and 1873) had been "carefully examined for the same time, and found to be canceled or delivered to the district attorney." These statements were verified by an authorized investigation made from this office. Inasmuch as all the bonds were canceled except the missing bonds in 1870 and 1873, and as there are no bonds known to represent the balances on the old transportation and exportation accounts, and as these balances from January, 1868, to June 30, 1881, were not reliable, and could not be made so, directions were given to enter the credits to close these old accounts.

The only balance remaining of the old warehouse and bond account of the New York custom-house is, therefore, that of the old warehouse account, amounting to $29,014.78, which balance is not reliable, as before stated, owing to the defective system under which the accounts were kept.

CANCELLATION OF EXPORT BONDS.

The bonds given for exportation of merchandise imported and warehoused are credited on the warehouse-bond account. The exportation-bond account balance shows the amount of these bonds outstanding. Sections 3044 to 3047, Revised Statutes, provide for the cancellation of such bonds, and make it the duty of the exporter to procure the proper evidence specified for the purpose. There seems to have been no trouble in procuring the cancellation of these bonds except at the port of New York.

The indifference of exporters and sureties in this matter at that port appears to arise from the fact that no suits are brought on these bonds, and from a belief that there has been a decision of the United States district court for the northern district of New York (unreported) that there can be no recovery on such a bond unless special damage be shown; i. e., unless it be shown that the merchandise has been landed within the limits of the United States.

Many of these export bonds have been delivered by the collector of New York to the United States district attorney for the southern district of New York. That officer is of opinion that no suits should be brought on these bonds unless special damage can be shown, even if without that judgment could be obtained for nominal damages and costs. His opinion seems to be that the bringing of such suits merely for judgment in a nominal amount would savor of vexation and oppression and be justly the subject of criticism.

It is evident that if no suits are brought to compel the cancellation of the bonds the exportation account will be of no value, save as a list of bonds showing the clearance of imported merchandise exported to foreign ports.

The provision of law for proof of cancellation seems to have been made as a security against smuggling, and for the further reason, perhaps, that the bonds might not stand open in the accounts longer than necessary. That provision cannot be enforced without some penalty for its breach. The small penalty of the costs of suit would of itself, I think, be sufficient to compel a compliance with the statute. It would be necessary to bring only a few suits to establish the law. The knowledge on the part of the exporters that the courts had decided as to their liability on such bonds and that suits could be legally brought which would at least mulct them in the costs would of itself be sufficient to enforce compliance. I would therefore recommend that at least one trial suit of the kind be brought in the United States district court of the southern district of New York to establish the law. If judgment can not be had for nominal damages and costs in such suit without proof of actual damage, it ought to be known for the information of Congress, so that, if necessary, a further remedy might be provided. But if judgment be obtained, I apprehend that there will be no further serious difficulty in the cancellation of the exportation bonds.

A question may arise upon this as to the policy of the law in requiring proof of cancellation. Upon this it is not within my province to express an opinion. The reasons for that policy may now be modified by the changes, which have occurred since the act was passed, in the carrying trade, and in the more active agencies of the Revenue-Marine Service, and Special Customs Service, to prevent smuggling.

It may therefore be well to consider, in case the present law for proof of cancellation of export bonds cannot be enforced, whether a statute of limitations, as to such bonds, might not be passed, requiring at the expiration, say of three years from the date of the bond, that the cancellation of it should be made by the Collector of Customs in the absence of any evidence of special damage to the Government.

STUBS.

In the accounts of collectors of customs adjusted in this office the advances from the Treasury and disbursements are checked with accuracy.

The receipts from customs are as entered by the collectors in their accounts, and the amounts thereof deposited by them with the public depositaries. To verify the entries made by the collectors and the deposits from customs receipts, an order was made on the 11th of October, 1877, (Department Circular No. 126), providing for blank stub receipt-books for all the ports except New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, New Orleans, and San Francisco. In all cases of payments of money for duties or otherwise, the collectors were required by this order to give receipts and to enter the amount on the corresponding stub in the book. These stubs, numbered consecutively, mentioning the duties, and verified by the signatures of the parties who make the payments, have been so systematized in practice as to form a very useful, if not indispensable, adjunct in the settlement of the accounts. They have served, on many occasions in this office, to correct errors and mis-entries, mostly inadvertently made. Complaints were made from one or two offices that the persons paying duties would not always take receipts or countersign the stubs, and, therefore, that it was an unnecessary trouble to keep the stub-book. In such cases the collectors were instructed to return the receipts in the stub-books, properly filled out, with the corresponding memorandum on the stub, and brief explanations for the non-delivery of the receipts to the proper parties.

The practice of the stub-book system has been so satisfactory, and has been evidently so beneficial in verifying the accounts, that no entering wedge should be allowed towards its abolition.

The larger ports were exempted from the operation of the stub-book order, mainly for the reason, as I understand, that there are naval officers at those ports whose duties, among others, are to check the entries of receipts, and that the performance by them of this duty insures accuracy in the accounts. I presume this is true. But still I am not clear that the stub-book system could not be advantageously applied to the larger ports as well as to the smaller ones. It might aid the naval officers in verifying their certificates. There is no reason to apprehend at present that the revenues are not faithfully collected and accounted for at the larger ports. But the experience of this office, formerly more than of late years, in the use of the stub-books, has shown that they serve a very good purpose in the correction of the accounts, and commends the system to our continued favor.

UNCLAIMED GOODS.

Returns of collectors of customs, as required by Department Circular No. 148 (1885), of unclaimed goods under sections 2973, 2974, 2976, Revised Statutes, have heretofore been forwarded promptly, except for the port of New York.

It appears that for some years in the past unclaimed goods have been allowed to accumulate in the warehouses at New York, and have not been sold at the expiration of a year after landing as required by law. The result has been to overcrowd the warehouses with such merchandise, to render more difficult the finding and cataloguing of it, and when eventually sold at auction to bring less than the duties and costs of storage. The present collector at New York is making earnest endeavors to clear up this business. In doing so he is evidently performing work which should have been done by his predecessors, and which requires more force than for current business. It will take some time to get these returns and accounts into regular shape and running order. They are being gradually forwarded to this office, and require additional labor to their adjustment from the fact that these returns have not entered into the ordinary work for some years.

RECEIPTS BY ATTORNEYS.

The decisions of the courts and comptrollers and opinions of attorneys-general leave it still perhaps an open question whether payments may be legally made by disbursing officers on contracts to agents or attorneys of the contracting parties. It has been settled that if such payment be made to an agent in good faith under a genuine power of attorney, it will be conclusive against the principal so far as the Government is concerned.

But although this be so, notwithstanding the wording of section 3477, Revised Statutes, yet the policy of such departure from the letter of the statute in the administration of the accounting offices may well be doubted.

The disbursing officer becomes responsible for the authenticity of the power of attorney, and it is by no means clear that the accounting officers do not share in that responsibility to a greater extent, in the absence of a specific provision of law, for the authentication of such powers to be used in evidence.

There have been admitted exceptions in practice to the literal operation of section 3477, Revised Statutes. It appears advisable, however, to adhere to the statute as closely as possible, and when powers of attorney are admitted, that it shall be from necessity, to prevent a failure of justice, or unnecessary delay in the payments. When used, they should be well authenticated, and specify the claim with particularity. The original power should accompany the vouchers to be filed with the papers. As no provision of law is made for recording them, search has to be made for them when they are questioned. In the present crowded condition of the files of the Department, it is well to prevent the accumulation of unnecessary papers, and to simplify as much as can be the workings of the offices. Disbursing officers must have some regard undoubtedly to the business methods of the people; but, in the common affairs of life, payments on important contracts, other than land contracts, are not usually made without the receipts of the principal parties. The reason of this is, probably, because of the trouble in the preservation of the power, and in the proof of it should the payment be disputed. In the ordinary off-hand transactions of life, payments to agents are of constant occurrence, often without receipts, and the proof of them seldom required, or, if required, easily made. But even as to them, the systematic operations of the Treasury Department require more care, as all accounts for disbursements must contain in themselves the authority for, and proper written evidence of, the payments to the parties entitled.

Accordingly the practice is, in this office, to require of the disbursing officers that the checks for payment shall be drawn to the orders of the principals, or the receipts be signed by the principals; and, where any exception is made, that it shall appear by reason of absence beyond seas, sickness, or the like, that the principal party can only receipt through an authorized agent.

EXAMINATION OF LIGHT-HOUSE ACCOUNTS.

Owing to embezzlements committed some years ago by a clerk employed in the Light-House Engineer's office at San Francisco, the Commissioner of Customs, in a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated January 30, 1882, recommended that the subordinates who have access to the public funds should be required to give bonds, and that periodical examinations of the disbursing offices should be made by persons not connected with the Light-House Service. The chairman of the Light-House Board, in a communication to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated February 3, 1882, stated that the Board most heartily concurred in the latter proposition, "provided that the examination be made by competent persons duly authorized in each case," and, as to the former proposition, i. e., taking of bonds from subordinates, that it would be communicated to the disbursing officers by the Board.

This communication of the Light-House Board was referred by indorsement, November 1, 1883, to the supervising special agent of the Department, "with the recommendation that if the work of examination indicated is such as can properly be discharged by the special agents' force, instructions be given to cause it to be done." By further indorsement of November 28, 1883, the communication was returned to the chief of the Revenue Marine Division with the following remarks by the supervising special agent:

In view of the provisions of section 2649, Revised Statutes, defining the duties of special agents of the customs, it would seem that to impose as a general duty such examinations as are herein referred to would scarcely be within the intent of the law. I see no objection, however, to the assignment by the Secretary of the Treasury of an agent to examine the accounts of light-house officers in special cases, provided the Light-House Board so requests.

On December 4, 1883, the Secretary of the Treasury, by letter to the chairman of the Light-House Board, in inclosing the letter of the Board of February 3, 1882, stated the indorsement which had been made thereon by the supervising special agent, for the information of the Board, and requested such further recommendation as the Board might deem proper. There the correspondence seems to have rested.

I called attention briefly to this subject in my annual report of 1885.

Upon examination of the Revised Statutes, I do not find any power in them to employ special agents for the examination of the Light-House Service.

Section 2649, Revised Statutes, authorizes the appointment of special agents, "for the purpose of making the examinations of the books, papers, and accounts of collectors and other officers of the customs, and to be employed generally under the direction of the Secretary [of the Treasury] in the prevention and detection of frauds on the customs revenue."

It is true that the disbursements made by the officers of the Light-House Board were formerly made by the collectors of customs, but as they had no direct connection with the customs revenue, these disbursements were transferred to the Light-House Board.

The disbursing officers of the Light-House Board, being selected from the engineer officers of the Army and from the officers of the Navy, and receiving only their Army or Navy pay for their services, are exempted by executive order from giving bonds before receiving advances of the public moneys. Their character as officers and amenability to discipline in the military or naval service are considered, and have been, generally, sufficient guarantee for the faithful disbursement of the public funds entrusted to them. Besides, it would be a hardship to require an officer, without additional compensation, to go beyond the line of his service to procure sureties. But the fact that bonds are not required from the officers is, I think, a reason why careful periodical examinations should be made of their offices and accounts by agents not connected with the Light-House Service.

Section 3649, Revised Statutes, authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury "to cause examinations to be made of the books, accounts, and money on hand of the several depositaries."

I think it would be advisable to ask for similar legislation as to the accounts of the disbursing agents of the Light-House Board.

MAINTAINING AND REPAIRING LIGHT-HOUSE TENDERS.

In the adjustment of accounts, questions arise as to the proper distribution of the expenses of maintaining and repairing the light-house tenders.

A general clause in the appropriation act of March 3, 1879 (20 Statutes, 379), reads as follows :

And the expenses of maintaining the vessels of the Light-House Establishment may be paid from any surplus of the appropriation for the works, general or special, on which the respective vessels are, for the time being, employed, and the cost of repairs to such vessels may be paid from the appropriation under which they respectively were employed when they were injured or became deteriorated to such an extent as to render repairs necessary ; or if such appropriation be exhausted, then from the appropriation under which they are respectively to be next employed.

This clause of the act of 1879 has been held here to relate exclusively to the light-house tenders, and not to include the light-ships which are stationary.

As the expenses of maintaining and repairing the tenders are large, and form a distinct class, it is not readily perceived why there should not be a specific annual appropriation for them. The application of balances of different appropriations to this object seems to be against the general purpose, which is to pay for work and supplies from the appropriations for the current year in which the liabilities are incurred. Under the act of 1879, the expenses of the tenders can be placed to different appropriations according to the views of the light-house management, and the proper distribution of them cannot be verified in this office with reasonable certainty. It is, I think, desirable that there should be a change in this appropriation so as to conform to the general scope of the appropriation acts. The Light-House Board would doubtless be consulted before making such change. It is possible that the Board prefers the appropriation as it is at present, and may have reasons therefor which are not apparent in this office.

OFFICIAL BONDS.

There has been no general adjustment of the penalties of the bonds of customs officers since 1853. When new bonds are required from time to time, by reason of new appointments, death, or insolvency of the sureties, or other causes, changes in the penalties are recommended when necessary to make them adequate to the responsibility of the office, having due regard to precedents and the reasonable facility of procuring sureties. It is possible that further changes in the penalties of these bonds might be recommended in order to conduce to a more uniform rule of gradation.

I inclose herewith statements of transactions in bonded goods, as shown by the adjusted accounts; of property brought into the United States for temporary purposes under section 2507, Revised Statutes, and in relation to unclaimed merchandise entered and sold.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN S. MCCALMONT,

Hon. CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.
